LBJ's Budget Approaches $100 Billion

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sent to Congress today the cost estimate for launching his "Great Society" — a fiscal 1966 budget approaching $100 billion.

It calls for repeal and reduction of excise taxes which administration sources have estimated at around $1.5 billion, to stimulate the economy and inequitable "nuisance" levies.

The revenue loss will contribute to another year of red-ink federal financing, but officials have predicted that the deficit for the year starting next July 1 will be somewhat smaller than this year's.

The President is known to have carved about $10 billion from agency requests submitted last fall. Government sources foresee a spending total midway between $99 billion and $100 billion.

This cost-cutting achievement was even more remarkable than last year's actual reversal of the upward trend of federal spending, in the opinion of budget experts, because the President was in a two-way squeeze.

Room had to be found for the education, antipoverty, urban, and resource development programs he has promised as elements of the "Great Society" program. At the same time, the inescapable "built-in" cost increases of laws already on the books could themselves have shoved the budget over $100 billion.

Across-the-board cost-cutting pressure has been applied, and

Churchill Will Be Buried in Village Churchyard, in the Heart of England

By COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill lay at rest today while the world awaited the somber magnificence of a state funeral he planned for himself.

Monarchs, presidents and veteran statesmen will follow his coffin on its last journey Saturday. President Johnson said he would be among them if sufficiently recovered from the cold that sent him to the hospital over the weekend.

Churchill died shortly after 8 a.m. — 3 a.m., EST — Sunday at No. 28 Hyde Park Gate, the London house in which he had lived since retiring from the premiership in 1955. Death came two months past his 90th birthday. He had suffered a stroke nine days before. Medical experts said he died peacefully and without pain.

As the world's tributes flowed in for the greatest Englishman of modern times, friends revealed that he first started planning his funeral ceremony during World War II.

In December 1943, he was in Cairo after talks with President Roosevelt and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and caught a cold which turned to pneumonia.

Half jokingly he told aides: "They'll have to give me a state funeral. President Roosevelt will have to come to London to attend it."

From this remark grew Churchill's "funeral book," laying down the procedure he wanted followed and even detailing the names of military units which should attend.

In 1954 he returned to the exercise. Some details inevitably were changed but the outline remained, including a funeral progress up the Thames River

Unflinching Leadership Marked Churchill's Life

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill won an enduring place in the hearts of his people and all those who admire courage with his unflinching leadership while Britain was at her lowest ebb in the dark days of World War II.

Defying Hitler's war machine which had swept across Europe, Churchill rallied Britons with a ringing eloquence evoking the soaring language of Shakespeare's great historical pageants.

"We shall defend our island whatever the cost may be," he told the House of Commons after the fall of France "We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, and we shall fight in the hills. We shall never surrender."

He walked through the streets of London amid the rubble left by the German bombers during the blitz, his jaw set in bulldog defiance and the familiar "V for Victory" sign on his fingers stirring Londoners to new confidence.

"Good old Winnie," they shouted when this personification of John Bull appeared before them.

When the Royal Air Force's little Spitfire and Hurricane fighters finally blasted the raiders from the skies, Churchill paid his memorable tribute: "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

Churchill became prime minister May 10, 1940, at the age of 65, after the appeasement policies of Neville Chamberlain failed to quench the Nazi Fuehrer's thirst for expansion. He declared he had nothing to offer but "blood, toil, tears and sweat."

His rise to first minister of the realm came after a long political career that had nearly ended in disaster during World War I, when he was blamed for Brit-

Since Sir Winston was stricken on Jan. 15 until his death, she was at his bedside almost constantly. She sat there for hours without sleep.

She left the house six times during the illness, the last time less than 48 hours before he died. She asked for privacy and got it.

"Lady Churchill just wants to walk a little in peace and quiet, away from it all," said her son-in-law, Christopher Soames.

Her usual smile was missing during her brief moments of respite away from Sir Winston's side. They had posed together for photographers for the last time on Nov. 30, when they appeared in the window of their home to acknowledge cheers on Sir Winston's 90th birthday.

Tshombe Warned Assassination to Be Attempted

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — (Special) — Premier Moise Tshombe, the Congo's pro-U.S. strong-man, is being warned to expect an assassination attempt "at any time."

U.S. intelligence authorities in Leopoldville have given his security officials evidence that a one-time German staff officer is training a hand-picked group of assassins in former French Congo for a commando-type raid on Tshombe's Bankside home across the Congo River.

The German, a Hitler army captain captured by the Russians and now employed as an "adviser" to Algeria's Marxist President Ben Bella, is in his fifties and known as Silmane Hoffman.

In a high-fenced training camp at Gamboma, Hoffman is covertly instructing a mixed force of 600 rebels that includes Communist mercenary "assassin specialists" from Russia, Algeria and Egypt.

According to one intelligence estimate, this assassin school is a project of Alexander Shelepin, young, vigorous former Soviet secret police chief who is a member of the 13-member Presidium, top policy - making body in the Soviet Union.

Shelepin is credited with organizing and financing the training camp under the Kremlin's unannounced policy of removing from public office by assassination Western officials who actively oppose Russian policies.

As reported by this column last October, a suppressed Central Intelligence Agency estimate titled "Soviet Strategic Executive Action" reveals in shocking detail how KGB (Soviet secret police) agents are being trained to dispose of Western leaders who pose a threat to Communist interests.

Most recent victim of this Red assassination policy was Burundi's Premier Pierre Negendanrumwe, who was struck down by eight bullets on January 15.

The 35-year-old premier was slain by paid agents of the Kremlin only two hours after forming a new government to take a tougher line against Soviet-Chinese Communist operations in Burundi, according to U.S. and British intelligence reports.

PROTECTING TSHOMBE

This new threat to Tshombe highlights the fact that the flashpoints for new trouble in the Congo will almost certainly be Gamboma and Brazzaville, capital of the former French Congo, now an independent nation.

U.S. intelligence authorities have advised the Congo premier to take stricter safety precautions. They are helping British mercenary leader Major Mike Hoare organize a "special force" to guard Tshombe around the clock.

From his home Tshombe can look across the Congo River to the training camp of the men plotting to kill him. Every night groups of trained assassins try to cross the river to join the growing underground of rebels in Leopoldville. They carry light weapons and ammunitions, and are known to be hiding in the city.

Cat Credited With Walking For 450 Miles

SEMINOLE, Okla. (AP) — Tired from a long trip, Thurm was given a free ride home Sunday by commercial airplane.

Thurm is a foot-sore Siamese cat. Six weeks ago his mistress, Mrs. Jim Robertson, moved to a new house in St. Louis, Mo. Then Thurm disappeared.

That was the last he was seen until he turned up here at the home of Mrs. Robertson's mother, Mrs. E. A. Cummings. Mrs. Cummings said Thurm had made the 450-mile trip by car before, and evidently remembered the way.

Thurm was put aboard an airliner at Oklahoma City by Mrs. Cummings for the trip home.

President May Attend Funeral Of Churchill

By RAYMOND J. CROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, recovering rapidly from a heavy cold, determined today that if doctors permit he will fly to London for Sir Winston Churchill's funeral.

In his second bedside news conference at the suburban Bethesda Naval Hospital, Johnson said he wants "very, very much" to attend the funeral Saturday. "A lot depends on how I feel in the next day or two," he added.

As four newsmen talked to him, the President seemed markedly improved.

Cheerfully, the President said: "It's all over with."

The doctors were not so sure, however. They want to keep him in the hospital until Thursday, for rest and to make sure the cold is licked.

When the four newsmen — "poolers" representing the many others congregated at the hospital — visited the President Sunday, he was clad in pastel-green pajamas with white piping and was chewing cough drops — Allenbury's pastilles, made in London.

His temperature was reported at about 100 — compared with normal of 98.6 — but press secretary George Reedy said that was "not a matter of concern at all."

Reedy reported Sunday night, "the President is resting very comfortably. His cough is practically gone. He has no pain or distress of any kind."

The President said that his illness really amounted only to a sore throat, "but they call it by a fancy name." Now, he

Dillon Confirms Plan to Quit LBJ's Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) —Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon today confirmed reports that he will leave the Cabinet in the next few months.

In remarks at a budget briefing for newsmen — made public along with the budget today — Dillon said in answer to a question that he would not be around when President Johnson's excise tax proposals are presented to Congress.

Dillon indicated that presentation of the tax recommendation is not expected for several months. He said no time has been set for his resignation.

His successor is expected to be Donald C. Cook, president of American Electric Power Co. and former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

700 Cadets Questioned In Cheating Ring Probe

About 700 cadets are being questioned in the Air Force Academy cheating ring, but not all of them are restricted to quarters, an Academy spokesman said this morning.

"The fact that 700 cadets are being questioned does not infer all are involved," the spokesman said.

"The entire cadet wing is definitely not restricted. Some cadets had dates with Colorado Springs' girls last weekend," he added.

Contrary to earlier rumors, the Air Force Information Office said they did not expect to have a press conference or news release today revealing further details on the cheating ring.

The scandal involves stealing of examination papers by cadets who then offered them for sale. Air Force Secretary Eugene Zuckert has said this was "a well-organized ring of 10 or 12 cadets."

Zuckert announced Saturday that more than 100 cadets, including at least 30 members of the football team, were involved in the classroom irregularities.

"Cadets are probably involved who don't even know they are involved," said Col. Richard Haney, chief of the Academy Information Office.

In Washington, Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., attributed the scandal to athletic professionalism.

He said all three service academies recruited athletes with marginal academic records in order to complete with private college teams.

"Inevitably," Stratton said, "many find cheating is the only way they can continue their athletic careers at the taxpayers' expense."

Academy investigations still have not released names of: (1) 29 cadets who resigned in the wake of the scandal; (2) 10 or 12 cadets in the cheating ring announced by Zuckert; (3) 100 cadets involved in the scandal; and (4) 30 members of the football team involved in the investigation.

Said Col. Haney, "It is the Academy policy not to reveal names of ordinary dropouts, which represent about 9 per cent of the enrollment a year. Naturally we wouldn't think of changing that practice in this case."

Anti - Government Riots Spread In Viet Nam

By MALCOLM B. BROWNE

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Antigovernment demonstrations were under way in at least five central Vietnamese cities today, and Saigon was an armed camp in preparation for threatened riots and Buddhist suicides by fire.

The central Vietnamese city of Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon, appeared to be the main trouble spot, with up to 10,000 demonstrators in the streets.

Buddhist youths and monks scuffled briefly with police and paratroopers in Saigon, but the demonstration was broken up with tear gas and billy clubs. About 70 persons were arrested.

Traffic was halted on at least a dozen Saigon streets as paratroopers strung barbed wire at expected trouble spots.

Reliable sources reported a mob of 2,000 persons at one time within a block of the U.S. consulate in Hue.

Several thousand demonstrators were also reported on the march toward the key U.S. military detachment in Da Nang.

More than 3,000 U.S. servicemen are stationed at Da Nang and another 750 at Hue. Both cities were put off limits to Americans after the U.S. In-

John Ferguson, Noted Springs Pioneer, Dies

John Ferguson, 524 W. Bijou St., last surviving member, so far as known, of the old Caledonian Club of Colorado Springs, died Sunday, at 90, at a local nursing home. The bagpipes will be sounding in the ears of many of his friends today and members of the El Paso County Pioneer Society will be telling themselves that no longer will they hear the beloved Scotch accent as only he could speak it. He was a retired pioneer grocer and well known in Colorado Springs business circles down through the years.

It fell to Mr. Ferguson to be the keeper of a portrait album and biographical book of the Caledonian Club, which numbered among its members some of the best known residents of the city. He preserved it with loving care.

Mr. Ferguson was born in Sanquher, County of Dumfries, Scotland, Dec. 31, 1874, and came to America Dec. 31, 1898. On Nov. 20, 1905, he was married in Colorado Springs to Elizabeth Wattson, who survives him. He operated a grocery store at Chestnut and Bijou Streets for 42 years. He was a lover of the Scotch poet Robert Burns and knew all his works by heart. He also knew most of the Bible by heart. He was a member of Grace Episcopal Church. 27 Cardinals Are Named By Pope Paul

By EUGENE LEVIN

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI named 27 new Roman Catholic cardinals today, including three from Communist lands and one from the United States.

This raised the membership of the sacred college to 103, the largest in history.

Archbishop Lawrence Joseph Shehan of Baltimore, Md., was the only U.S. prelate among the new cardinals, the first named by Pope Paul since he became pontiff in June 1963.

They will formally be elevated to the purple at a consistory Feb. 22.

Pope Paul's nominations were in line with policies that have become evident in his reign.

He has opened a dialogue with Communist countries while continuing to denounce Marxist ideology. Today he named the first three Roman Catholic cardinals from Communist countries since a 1953 consistory held by Pope Pius XII.

One of the nominations — of Josef Beran of Prague, Czechoslovakia — was a clear challenge to Red officials who have restricted his activities.

Other new cardinals included Maurice Roy, archbishop of Quebec, Canada; Franjo Seper, archbishop of Zagreb, Yugoslavia; and Josef Slipyi, archbishop of Lvov, Poland, and primate of Ukrainian Catholics.

The late consistory for the creation of cardinals was held

Teenage Girl Reports Assault By Stranger

A 14-year old girl was beaten over the head with a gun by a man who attempted to rape her Saturday night, the sheriff's office reported.

According to Deputy Sheriff Lee Quein, the man stopped the girl on the street about two weeks ago and asked for directions. He then asked her if she ever did any baby sitting and she replied she did and gave him her telephone number.

On Saturday he telephoned her and she agreed to baby sit for him. He picked her up at her home and drove his car out of town onto a gravel road. The officers said he asked her to kiss him and when she refused he started making advances towards her.

The girl tried to get out of the car and he then struck her on the head three times with a large pistol. She told the officers that she almost fainted and that the man then grabbed her by the throat and tried to strangle her.

He then drove off rapidly and

Middle East Area May Be Close to War Once Again

By HAL MCCLURE

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (AP) — The Middle East may be closer to war than at any time since the 1956 Sinai campaign.

Armed clashes along the heavily fortified frontiers of Israel and its Arab neighbors have been increasing since the Israelis put into partial operation their multimillion - dollar project designed to bring Jordan River water from the Sea of Galilee to the Negev Desert.

Arab claims of dispatching "el-Asifah" storm troops of former Palestinians into Israel on sabotage missions have added to the gravity of the situation.

The Arab states, which have vowed to drive Israel into the sea, announced earlier this month at a conference in Cairo they were continuing with plans to divert the headwaters of the Jordan before the river reaches Israeli territory.

Israel hopes to halt Arab water diversion plans by making plain it will strike back rather than just filing routine protests.

Israeli officials believe Lebanon, Israel's northern neighbor, holds the vital key to the future of the region since it has been assigned an important role in Arab plans to divert Jordan headwaters.

Lebanon has been warned about participating in the scheme, official Israeli sources say.

Friday Lebanon's Parliament approved participating in the Arab plans. A pumping station will be built on the Wazzani River, a Jordan tributary inside Lebanon territory two miles

The German, a Hitler army captain captured by the Russians and now employed as an "adviser" to Algeria's Marxist President Ben Bella, is in his fifties and known as Silmane Hoffman.

In a high-fenced training camp at Gamboma, Hoffman is covertly instructing a mixed force of 600 rebels that includes Communist mercenary "assassin specialists" from Russia, Algeria and Egypt.

According to one intelligence estimate, this assassin school is a project of Alexander Shelepin, young, vigorous former Soviet secret police chief who is a member of the 13-member Presidium, top policy-making body in the Soviet Union.

Shelepin is credited with organizing and financing the training camp under the Kremlin's unannounced policy of removing from public office by assassination Western officials who actively oppose Russian policies.

As reported by this column last October, a suppressed Central Intelligence Agency estimate titled "Soviet Strategic Executive Action" reveals in shocking detail how KGB (Soviet secret police) agents are being trained to dispose of Western leaders who pose a threat to Communist interests.

Most recent victim of this Red assassination policy was Burundi's Premier Pierre Ngendanrumwe, who was struck down by eight bullets on January 15.

The 35-year-old premier was slain by paid agents of the Kremlin only two hours after forming a new government to take a tougher line against Soviet-Chinese Communist operations in Burundi, according to U.S. and British intelligence reports.

PROTECTING TSHOMBE

This new threat to Tshombe highlights the fact that the flashpoints for new trouble in the Congo will almost certainly be Gamboma and Brazzaville, capital of the former French Congo, now an independent nation.

U.S. intelligence authorities have advised the Congo premier to take stricter safety precautions. They are helping British mercenary leader Major Mike Hoare organize a "special force" to guard Tshombe around the clock.

From his home Tshombe can look across the Congo River to the training camp of the men plotting to kill him. Every night groups of trained assassins try to cross the river to join the growing underground of rebels in Leopoldville. They carry light weapons and ammunitions, and are known to be hiding in the city.

Cat Credited With Walking For 450 Miles

SEMINOLE, Okla. (AP) — Tired from a long trip, Thurm was given a free ride home Sunday by commercial airplane.

Thurm is a foot-sore Siamese cat. Six weeks ago his mistress, Mrs. Jim Robertson, moved to a new house in St. Louis, Mo. Then Thurm disappeared.

That was the last he was seen until he turned up here at the home of Mrs. Robertson's mother, Mrs. E. A. Cummings. Mrs. Cummings said Thurm had made the 450-mile trip by car before, and evidently remembered the way.

Thurm was put aboard an airliner at Oklahoma City by Mrs. Cummings for the trip home.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sent to Congress today the cost estimate for launching his "Great Society" — a fiscal 1966 budget approaching $100 billion.

It calls for repeal and reduction of excise taxes which administration sources have estimated at around $1.5 billion, to stimulate the economy and inequitable "nuisance" levies.

The revenue loss will contribute to another year of red-ink federal financing, but officials have predicted that the deficit for the year starting next July 1 will be somewhat smaller than this year's.

The President is known to have carved about $10 billion from agency requests submitted last fall. Government sources foresee a spending total midway between $99 billion and $100 billion.

This cost-cutting achievement was even more remarkable than last year's actual reversal of the upward trend of federal spending, in the opinion of budget experts, because the President was in a two-way squeeze.

Room had to be found for the education, antipoverty, urban, and resource development programs he has promised as elements of the "Great Society" program. At the same time, the inescapable "built-in" cost increases of laws already on the books could themselves have shoved the budget over $100 billion.

Across-the-board cost-cutting pressure has been applied, and low-priority programs have been scaled down to make room for the new high-priority proposals.

The Pentagon, it has been reported, will reduce its spending slightly to about $49 billion. The

President May Attend Funeral Of Churchill

By RAYMOND J. CROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, recovering rapidly from a heavy cold, determined today that if doctors permit he will fly to London for Sir Winston Churchill's funeral.

In his second bedside news conference at the suburban Bethesda Naval Hospital, Johnson said he wants "very, very much" to attend the funeral Saturday. "A lot depends on how I feel in the next day or two," he added.

As four newsmen talked to him, the President seemed markedly improved.

Cheerfully, the President said: "It's all over with."

The doctors were not so sure, however. They want to keep him in the hospital until Thursday, for rest and to make sure the cold is licked.

When the four newsmen — "poolers" representing the many others congregated at the hospital — visited the President Sunday, he was clad in pastel-green pajamas with white piping and was chewing cough drops — Allenbury's pastilles, made in London.

His temperature was reported at about 100 — compared with normal of 98.6 — but press secretary George Reedy said that was "not a matter of concern at all."

Reedy reported Sunday night, "the President is resting very comfortably. His cough is practically gone. He has no pain or distress of any kind."

The President said that his illness really amounted only to a sore throat, "but they call it by a fancy name." Now, he

Dillon Confirms Plan to Quit LBJ's Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) —Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon today confirmed reports that he will leave the Cabinet in the next few months.

In remarks at a budget briefing for newsmen — made public along with the budget today — Dillon said in answer to a question that he would not be around when President Johnson's excise tax proposals are presented to Congress.

Dillon indicated that presentation of the tax recommendation is not expected for several months. He said no time has been set for his resignation.

His successor is expected to be Donald C. Cook, president of American Electric Power Co. and former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

700 Cadets Questioned In Cheating Ring Probe

About 700 cadets are being questioned in the Air Force Academy cheating ring, but not all of them are restricted to quarters, an Academy spokesman said this morning.

"The fact that 700 cadets are being questioned does not infer all are involved," the spokesman said.

"The entire cadet wing is definitely not restricted. Some cadets had dates with Colorado Springs' girls last weekend," he added.

Contrary to earlier rumors, the Air Force Information Office said they did not expect to have a press conference or news release today revealing further details on the cheating ring.

The scandal involves stealing of examination papers by cadets who then offered them for sale. Air Force Secretary Eugene Zuckert has said this was "a well-organized ring of 10 or 12 cadets."

Zuckert announced Saturday that more than 100 cadets, including at least 30 members of the football team, were involved in the classroom irregularities.

"Cadets are probably involved who don't even know they are involved," said Col. Richard Haney, chief of the Academy Information Office.

In Washington, Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., attributed the scandal to athletic professionalism.

He said all three service academies recruited athletes with marginal academic records in order to complete with private college teams.

"Inevitably," Stratton said, "many find cheating is the only way they can continue their athletic careers at the taxpayers' expense."

Academy investigations still have not released names of: (1) 29 cadets who resigned in the wake of the scandal; (2) 10 or 12 cadets in the cheating ring announced by Zuckert; (3) 100 cadets involved in the scandal; and (4) 30 members of the football team involved in the investigation.

Said Col. Haney, "It is the Academy policy not to reveal names of ordinary dropouts, which represent about 9 per cent of the enrollment a year. Naturally we wouldn't think of changing that practice in this case."

Anti-Government Riots Spread In Viet Nam

By MALCOLM B. BROWNE

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Antigovernment demonstrations were under way in at least five central Vietnamese cities today, and Saigon was an armed camp in preparation for threatened riots and Buddhist suicides by fire.

The central Vietnamese city of Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon, appeared to be the main trouble spot, with up to 10,000 demonstrators in the streets.

Buddhist youths and monks scuffled briefly with police and paratroopers in Saigon, but the demonstration was broken up with tear gas and billy clubs. About 70 persons were arrested.

Traffic was halted on at least a dozen Saigon streets as paratroopers strung barbed wire at expected trouble spots.

Reliable sources reported a mob of 2,000 persons at one time within a block of the U.S. consulate in Hue.

Several thousand demonstrators were also reported on the march toward the key U.S. military detachment in Da Nang.

More than 3,000 U.S. servicemen are stationed at Da Nang and another 750 at Hue. Both cities were put off limits to Americans after the U.S. In-

John Ferguson, Noted Springs Pioneer, Dies

John Ferguson, 524 W. Bijou St., last surviving member, so far as known, of the old Caledonian Club of Colorado Springs, died Sunday, at 90, at a local nursing home. The bagpipes will be sounding in the ears of many of his friends today and members of the El Paso County Pioneer Society will be telling themselves that no longer will they hear the beloved Scotch accent as only he could speak it. He was a retired pioneer grocer and well known in Colorado Springs business circles down through the years.

It fell to Mr. Ferguson to be the keeper of a portrait album and biographical book of the Caledonian Club, which numbered among its members some of the best known residents of the city. He preserved it with loving care.

Mr. Ferguson was born in Sanquher, County of Dumfries, Scotland, Dec. 31, 1874, and came to America Dec. 31, 1898. On Nov. 20, 1905, he was married in Colorado Springs to Elizabeth Wattson, who survives him. He operated a grocery store at Chestnut and Bijou Streets for 42 years. He was a lover of the Scotch poet Robert Burns and knew all his works by heart. He also knew most of the Bible by heart. He was a member of Grace Episcopal Church. Besides his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Ferguson, he is sur-

27 Cardinals Are Named By Pope Paul

By EUGENE LEVIN

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI named 27 new Roman Catholic cardinals today, including three from Communist lands and one from the United States.

This raised the membership of the sacred college to 103, the largest in history.

Archbishop Lawrence Joseph Shehan of Baltimore, Md., was the only U.S. prelate among the new cardinals, the first named by Pope Paul since he became pontiff in June 1963.

They will formally be elevated to the purple at a consistory Feb. 22.

Pope Paul's nominations were in line with policies that have become evident in his reign.

He has opened a dialogue with Communist countries while continuing to denounce Marxist ideology. Today he named the first three Roman Catholic cardinals from Communist countries since a 1953 consistory held by Pope Pius XII.

One of the nominations — of Josef Beran of Prague, Czechoslovakia — was a clear challenge to Red officials who have restricted his activities.

Other new cardinals included Maurice Roy, archbishop of Quebec, Canada; Franjo Seper, archbishop of Zagreb, Yugoslavia; and Josef Slipyi, archbishop of Lvov, Poland, and primate of Ukrainian Catholics.

The late consistory for the creation of cardinals was held

Teenage Girl Reports Assault By Stranger

A 14-year old girl was beaten over the head with a gun by a man who attempted to rape her Saturday night, the sheriff's office reported.

According to Deputy Sheriff Lee Quein, the man stopped the girl on the street about two weeks ago and asked for directions. He then asked her if she ever did any baby sitting and she replied she did and gave him her telephone number.

On Saturday he telephoned her and she agreed to baby sit for him. He picked her up at her home and drove his car out of town onto a gravel road. The officers said he asked her to kiss him and when she refused he started making advances towards her.

The girl tried to get out of the car and he then struck her on the head three times with a large pistol. She told the officers that she almost fainted and that the man then grabbed her by the throat and tried to strangle her.

He then drove off rapidly and

Middle East Area May Be Close to War Once Again

By HAL McCLURE

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (AP) — The Middle East may be closer to war than at any time since the 1956 Sinai campaign.

Armed clashes along the heavily fortified frontiers of Israel and its Arab neighbors have been increasing since the Israelis put into partial operation their multimillion-dollar project designed to bring Jordan River water from the Sea of Galilee to the Negev Desert.

Arab claims of dispatching "el-Asifah" storm troops of former Palestinians into Israel on sabotage missions have added to the gravity of the situation.

The Arab states, which have vowed to drive Israel into the sea, announced earlier this month at a conference in Cairo they were continuing with plans to divert the headwaters of the Jordan before the river reaches Israeli territory.

Israel hopes to halt Arab water diversion plans by making plain it will strike back rather than just filing routine protests.

Israeli officials believe Lebanon, Israel's northern neighbor, holds the vital key to the future of the region since it has been assigned an important role in Arab plans to divert Jordan headwaters.

Lebanon has been warned about participating in the scheme, official Israeli sources say.

Friday Lebanon's Parliament approved participating in the Arab plans. A pumping station will be built on the Wazzani River, a Jordan tributary inside Lebanon territory two miles

Winston Churchill Took Helm in Great Britain's Darkest Hour; Steered Course to Final Victory

By The Associated Press

Winston Churchill took the helm in Britain's darkest hour and steered a course through "blood, toil, tears and sweat" to victory over Nazi Germany.

To few leaders was it ever given to assume command of a great people at the nadir of their fortunes and lead them from such depths to such heights.

The Empire's very existence was threatened at the time he became Prime Minister on May 10, 1940, and undertook the arduous task of marshaling ill-prepared forces for the war of survival.

He became the symbol of the determined spirit of Britain in wartime, of the courage of the British in the face of the gravest dangers in their country's long life.

In the dark days of the blitz, he was cheered continuously whenever he set foot outside Westminster.

He would visit the bomb-scarred sections and, in response to the people's shout of "Good Old Winnie," would make a V-for-Victory sign with two upstretched fingers or a thumbsup gesture accompanied by a shy grin.

Once Knew Scorn

But Churchill had known stony silence from his countrymen as well as cheers.

In the grim days of World War I, people turned their backs on him after a campaign to open the Dardanelles—of which he was the prime mover—had ended in tragic failure. Empire troops were killed or wounded in the debacle and the people blamed Churchill.

The campaign had been begun early in 1915, soon after the start of the war. Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, had sought a way out of the bitter fighting in France. He hoped to force the straits with Navy ships, defeat Turkey and give Russia a sea route for wartime commerce.

But hidden land guns held the ships at bay and mines sank several. Troops landed upon the Gallipoli Peninsula to attack the Turkish forts in the rear were repulsed. The effort was kept up until December but by then Churchill was out of the Cabinet, a political victim of the fiasco.

"I am finished," Churchill said at the time he resigned from the Cabinet. A week later he was in the trenches in France as a lieutenant colonel commanding the Sixth Royal Scots Fusiliers.

(Years later an investigating commission cleared him of all fault in the Dardanelles undertaking.)

Soon Made Comeback

When the storm of the tragedy had subsided, David Lloyd George, an old friend of Churchill's who had become Prime Minister, called him back to the Cabinet as Minister of Munitions.

In that capacity he made great contributions to victory. Lloyd George credited him with introducing tanks to warfare. These caught the Germans completely by surprise in 1916.

But it was in the second World War that Churchill, as Great Britain's Prime Minister, scaled the greatest heights.

He had regained his old post as First Lord of the Admiralty, and it was from that office that he was called to guide Britain through the dreary storm.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain had left Britain a legacy of peril, and as one Churchill biographer put it, it was by a "virtual but unspoken demand of the people who were to do the paying and the dying" that King George VI had bidden Churchill to form a new cabinet.

Symbol of Fortitude

During the long and anxious months that the British Commonwealth stood alone against the victorious German fury, it was Churchill who personified the refusal of his people to admit defeat.

His was the eloquence, the indomitable will that summoned them to their finest hour, one of the magnificent climaxes of human history.

Within three weeks after he took the helm from the faltering hands of Chamberlain, Belgium capitulated to German might, precipitating the hazardous Dunkerque retreat of the British Expeditionary Force.

That tragic operation was one of the most masterful in history. It was not until long after victory that the full epic story of the evacuation from the bombed and bloody beaches of France between May 26 and June 4, 1940, was told.

The Admiralty had expected to rescue 45,000 at the most, but 330,000 were returned to Britain. In addition, 123,095 French troops were moved across the Channel by British and French ships, many of which were sunk or damaged. The German planes were so numerous that the Royal Air Force was woefully outclassed, but it destroyed 262 of them.

The unexpected success of the operation was hailed by some as an Allied victory, but Churchill saw it as "a colossal military disaster."

"Wars are not won by evacuations," he declared.

Churchill was 65 years old when he reached is goal of Empire then faced a precarious future with Hitler's legions sweeping everything before them.

There was no other to take the helm after Prime Minister Chamberlain's "peace in our time" appeasement of the Nazi leader had failed dismally.

Churchill had assailed Chamberlain for his bargain with Hitler at Munich by which Czechoslovakia was sacrificed in an effort to avert war. He saw in the bargain "a total and unmitigated defeat."

'Complete Surrender'

"The idea that safety can be purchased by throwing a small state to the wolves is a fatal delusion," Churchill said. He thought that Britain should have joined with others to prevent German encroachment on Czechoslovakia.

"The utmost the Prime Minister (Chamberlain) was able to gain for Czechoslovakia has been that the German dictator, instead of snatching his victuals from the table, has been content to have them served to him course by course. . . ." Churchill said.

He referred to the agreement to partition the country and give the Sudetenland to Germany, to be occupied in five stages.

He called it "complete surrender by western democracies to the Nazi threat of force."

A short time after appeasement, Hitler gobbled up the rest of Czechoslovakia, making it a German protectorate.

In the beginning Churchill had labeled the Nazi regime "a government of terrorists." He had cried out against appeasement and appealed — futilely — for rearmament.

War Burden Fell on Him

Just a little more than a month after he became Prime Minister there came from England's ally, France, the anguished, bleeding and confused cry, "We must give up the fight." Belgium had already quit.

Britain, whose forces had been trapped by Hitler's armies and impelled into tragic but masterful retreat from the continent when Belgium surrendered, pleaded that the French continue the fight on another continent in a union of British and French empires; but despairing France yielded to the enemy.

Thus the 1940 Battle of France ended on June 18. Germany was the winner with an overmastering weight of arms and military tricks. The Battle of Britain was at hand.

Then it was that Churchill became Britain's shield and sword, her clarion call to battle, a composite of her will to fight on. He was truly the man of the hour.

Britain's 'Finest Hour'

"Hitler knows that he will have to break us in this island or lose the war," he told the House of Commons while the enemy overran France within sight of Dover's cliffs.

"If we can stand up to him, all Europe may be free. . . . Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duties, and so bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men will still say, 'This was their finest hour.'"

That was Britain's and Churchill's finest hour.

Foresaw Hard Struggle

When he shouldered Britain's war burdens he told the House of Commons that "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat" and added:

"We have before us an ordeal of the most grievous kind. We have before us many, many months of struggle and suffering.

"You ask, what is our aim? I can answer in one word. It is victory. Victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors—victory, however long and hard the road may be, for without victory there is no survival.

"Let that be realized. No survival for the British Empire, no survival for all that the British Empire has stood for, no survival for the urge, the impulse of the ages, that mankind shall move forward toward his goal."

Fulfilled Victory Promise

Then with the bulldog persistence profiled by his jawbone, jowl and huncing shoulders, he rallied his people and led them through the dreary days when they fought alone and on to victory at the side of the United States and Russia.

Germany surrendered unconditionally on May 7, 1945. The back of Hitler's once mighty Wehrmacht had been broken and many of Germany's cities lay in ruins. Britain still carried on, as Churchill had said she would when the country was suffering the agony of the disastrous Dunkerque retreat. At that time he had declared:

"Even though large tracts of Europe and many old famous states have fallen, or may fall, into the grip of the Gestapo and all the odious apparatus of Nazi rule, we shall not lag nor fail, we shall go on to the end."

Though Churchill was past 70 when victory came and the mantle of fame rested securely on his shoulders, he went on to new triumphs. Not even the turning out of power of his party deterred him.

After victory in Europe, the Labor party rejected Churchill's proposal for extension of the wartime coalition government until the end of the Japanese war, thus forcing the first nationwide election in 10 years. That election, held July 5, 1945, resulted in a stunning defeat for Churchill's Conservative party.

Politics Time Again

Most observers agreed that Churchill was not repudiated as a war leader—friend and foe alike praised his war leadership—but was rejected as a politician and head of the Conservative party.

What the British voted for was the Labor Party, which was pledged to take a strong and quick hand in national reconstruction.

The public, released from the immediate perils of day-to-day enemy action from across the narrow waters of the channel, had grown restive. There was a rising clamor against queues and a general impatience to get on with the job of making life more comfortable after six hard years.

Thus the doughty leader who had carried Britain through the gloom to victory was toppled from his post of Prime Minister.

Even in defeat he gave the V-for-Victory sign.

"The decision of the British people has been recorded in the votes counted today," he said at that time.

"I have therefore laid down the charge which was placed upon me in darker times. I regret that I have not been permitted to finish the work against Japan. For this, however, all plans and preparations have been made. . . ."

Led 'Loyal Opposition'

He resumed the role he once liked best—unfettered critic as leader of "His Majesty's Loyal Opposition"—and directed sharp shafts at the government headed by Prime Minister Clement Attlee. He once called the mild-mannered Attlee "a sheep in sheep's clothing."

Churchill was relentless in his criticism that was sometimes impish, sometimes barbed and always arresting.

"The queues are longer, faces are longer and the shelves are barer, but nevertheless the conduct of daily life is more exacting," he said after the Labor party had taken over.

He accused the Labor government of exhibiting "stupidity, ineptitude and incompetence to an extent which I have never seen in any previous administration" and vigorously protested its decision in 1947 to quit India.

Churchill voiced to the House of Commons his "grief" at the "clattering down of the British Empire with all the glories and services it has rendered to mankind."

As for himself, Churchill said he had no political ambition explaining: "I have only stayed in politics to do my duty and help the country. Whatever happens in the future could only be anticlimax to me after the honor of what I have had to go through."

On Warpath Against Socialism

He declared that socialism was out of tune with the times and had made the country look like a jackass . . . "What I want to do for John Bull," he said, is "turn him 'round, and you will be surprised to see how quickly a great change there will be."

Churchill entered the 1951 election campaign with a vengeance. He stumped up and down the land speaking like thunder, commanding Britain to recapture a greatness that he said was being frittered away by lesser men. He referred to the ruling Laborites as "these little men."

He would drive up with a flourish to the place where he was to speak. The old V-for-Victory sign was a signal for cheering. When he waved the inevitable cigar, it seemed to his supporters that all was well with the world, a world in which old England had a rightful place. Churchill, just standing and chuckling, fascinated a crowd.

Deplored Loss of Prestige

While he did not always erupt deathless phrases, like "blood, toil, tears and sweat," he could be counted on in any half hour to rise once or twice to the rolling, thundering and picturesque oratory that the world had come to rise once or twice to the roll-

The Conservative leader declared that Britain's prestige had shrunk more during the six years of Labor government rule than during any period since American colonies won the Revolutionary War.

"Our Oriental empire has been liquidated, our resources have been squandered, the pound sterling is worth only three-quarters of what it was when Mr. Atlee took over from me," Churchill stormed. "Our influence among the nations is now less than it has ever been in any period since I remember."

He promised to restore American "confidence and goodwill" in the British government.

Returned to the Helm

The voters turned out the Labor party November 25, 1951, and recalled the rugged old warrior to his former command. Churchill was nearly 77 years old when he took charge of Britain's destiny for the second time. He assumed the post of Minister of Defense as well as that of Prime Minister.

Less than 24 hours after the victory, Churchill, acting with his usual vigor, went to King George VI with his eight key cabinet appointments.

He appeared at Buckingham Palace beaming and jaunty. Swinging a gold-topped cane, smoking a huge cigar and holding up two fingers in his famous "V" sign.

In his campaign, Churchill had asked the people to give him a chance to help prevent World War III. He said: "I pray indeed that I may have this opportunity. It is the last prize I seek to win."

The H-Bomb Problem

During his post-war Prime Ministership, Churchill crossed the Atlantic three times on diplomatic missions.

He had hardly returned to office when he set out for Washington for talks with President Harry S. Truman.

Two years later, when Dwight D. Eisenhower became President, he was off to see him in Bermuda.

In 1954 he flew to Washington for talks about the situation created by the hydrogen bomb.

The old warrior's lifetime spanned the transition from the old-fashioned soldier who on foot or on horseback could try to kill only one or a few of the enemy at a time to the soldier who could rain down death from the sky on millions.

Development of the atomic and hydrogen bombs threatened the very existence of nations.

"Which way shall we turn to save our lives?" the Prime Minister asked.

He wanted a face-to-face talk with Soviet leaders to tell them bluntly that if they started an atomic war, they would be overwhelmed by a massive retaliation.

Hailed U.S.-British Unity

With that made plain, he said, "we might then, by a process of sublime irony, reach the stage in the story where safety will be the sturdy child of terror and survival will be the twin brother of annihilation."

But he believed the surest protector of western civilization was the British-American unity—that "great unwritten alliance."

Speaking of the United States, he said:

"There is no other case of a nation arriving at the summit of world power, seeking no territorial gain, but earnestly resolved to use her strength and wealth in the cause of progress and freedom. . . .

"For America to withdraw into isolation would condemn all Europe to Russian Communist subjugation and our famous and beloved island to death and ruin."

While advocating a realistic "peace through strength," Churchill wanted to reach "a work-a-day understanding with the Russian people and government." He thought that one way to do that was for the West to try for more trade with the U.S.S.R.

Churchill's 1959 Visit

In the spring of 1959 Churchill made an informal seven-day visit to the United States, his first visit in five years. He had planned the trip a year earlier, but postponed it because of an attack of pneumonia and pleurisy.

At a White House dinner in his honor, Churchill called for a "fresh and further effort" to build Anglo-American unity in dealing with the difficult world problems.

He described President Eisenhower as "one of my comrades of wartime days." Eisenhower once reminisced that he probably had "more quite warm arguments" with Churchill than with anyone else during the war. The reason, he smilingly explained, likely was that as an American, Churchill just wouldn't shut up.

"A truly great man," he said of Churchill.

The Briton spent three days as President Eisenhower's guest and then visited his old friend, Bernard Baruch, in New York. As he boarded the plane for his return to England, Sir Winston told those seeing him off:

"I would like to bid you farewell in this key: As long as the United States and Great Britain are united and bound together, the future is one of high hopes both for ourselves and the whole free world."

Prime Minister Nine Years

In his two terms Churchill served for almost nine years as Prime Minister—from May 10, 1940, to July 26, 1945—a period of five years two months and 16 days that covered all but eight months of the war—and from October 26, 1951, to April 5, 1955, a period of three years five months and 10 days.

In his second term he started Britain on the road back from Socialism.

"Socialism brought us to the brink of bankruptcy," he said. "We were standing on a treacherous trap door leading to economic disaster."

Despite his age and the exhaustion of two major strokes, he carried on his heavy duties until well past 80 and then quit reluctantly.

His first stroke was in 1950. The second, in 1953, left him temporarily speechless and paralyzed. An admirer gave him a modern wheelchair replete with ingenious gadgets to make life easier for invalids.

Surrendered to Time

This intrigued Churchill at first. Then the thought struck him that the Prime Minister of Great Britain was dependent on a button, or an attendant, to get where he wanted to go. This angered him.

He made it known he wanted to work. State papers were sent to him. Officials called. Slowly his speech returned and his muscles came back to life.

The advance of time finally did what warplanes had failed to do — made him surrender.

He bowed to the pleas of his doctor, Lord Moran; to the urging of his wife, Clementine, who felt he should conserve his waning strength; to the tactful—but urgent—suggestions of some Conservative party leaders who wanted a younger, more vigorous man as leader in Britain's general election campaign.

On his 80th birthday he had said, with a tinge of regret:

"I am now nearing the end of my journey."

Trained Successor

But even then he was able to mow down opponents, one after another, with quick shafts of repartee in the House of Commons. His wit remained tart and impish, to the delight of political enemies as well as friends.

Once a Laborite asked a question about a matter that Churchill considered a military secret. He replied:

"You must not expect me to take the bread out of the mouths of the Russian secret service."

When he quit as Prime Minister, Churchill cleared the way for his political heir, Sir Anthony Eden, to succeed to the post and take up the fight in the nationwide election campaign that was just ahead.

Churchill had chosen Eden 13 years earlier to be his "heir apparent" and had often teased him about his long span as crown prince.

Appeared Relaxed

For months Churchill had stubbornly resisted pleadings that he take things easier. When he did give in at last, he put on his Sunday best, with top hat and gold watch chain, and rode from 10 Downing Street to Buckingham Palace to tender his resignation to Queen Elizabeth II.

He spent 41 minutes in the Palace with the Queen. Then he slowly climbed back into his car and sat puffing a cigar in the manner of a man relaxed by the lifting of a weight from his shoulders.

After a brief vacation in Sicily, he returned to England and entered the 1955 election campaign.

No one seemed to have more fun out electioneering than did he. Churchill put on his favorite campaigning hat, a high cylinder of black felt. He beamed and chuckled as he ambled from meeting to meeting, waving cigars and making "V" signs.

Resented Quiet Campaign

His speeches sparkled with wit. Occasionally he made the halls ring with mighty phrases in the old Churchillian manner. Wherever he went, he drew a crowd. At the end he was still going strong.

"So far," he said in his final speech as he looked over his spectacles, "I have taken part in 15 general elections and two other elections, but I've never seen one more calm and quiet than this one. A brooding silence hangs over the scene unlike anything I've ever seen."

And then—as if he personally resented the calm election — he began to get noisy. He hammered on the square oak box on which he put his notes. By the time he came to the end of his prepared talk he was quite spirited.

The election of May 26 resulted in a smashing victory for the Conservative party, whose majority was increased from 17 to 59 seats in the House of Commons. Churchill was sent back to Parliament from Woodford.

Wanted to Serve Until Death

When Churchill offered himself again in 1959 as a Conservative candidate, he told his constituents that he wanted to serve in the House of Commons as long as his breath held out. On election night he stayed up until past midnight until returns showed him a winner.

He finally closed his parliamentary career July 27, 1964, four months before his 90th birthday. In a special motion the House of Commons recorded "its unbounded admiration and gratitude for his service to Parliament, to the nation and to the world; remembers above all his inspiration of the British people when they stood alone and his leadership until victory was won; and offers its grateful

New Cardinals Will Be Created by Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI named 27 new Roman Catholic cardinals today, raising membership in the sacred college to 103, its greatest number in history.

One American — Archbishop Lawrence Joseph Shehan of Baltimore, Md. — is among the new cardinals.

Another is Archbishop Josef Beran of Prague, Czechoslovakia, who since 1949 has been barred by Czechoslovakia's Communist government from exercising his pastoral duties.

Winston Churchill Took Helm in Great Britain's Darkest Hour; Steered Course to Final Victory

By The Associated Press

Winston Churchill took the helm in Britain's darkest hour and steered a course through "blood, toil, tears and sweat" to victory over Nazi Germany.

To few leaders was it ever given to assume command of a great people at the nadir of their fortunes and lead them from such depths to such heights.

The Empire's very existence was threatened at the time he became Prime Minister on May 10, 1940, and undertook the arduous task of marshaling ill-prepared forces for the war of survival.

He became the symbol of the determined spirit of Britain in wartime, of the courage of the British in the face of the gravest dangers in their country's long life.

In the dark days of the blitz, he was cheered continuously whenever he set foot outside Westminster.

He would visit the bomb-scarred sections and, in response to the people's shout of "Good Old Winnie," would make a V-for-Victory sign with two upstretched fingers or a thumbsup gesture accompanied by a shy grin.

Once Knew Scorn

But Churchill had known stony silence from his countrymen as well as cheers.

In the grim days of World War 1, people turned their backs on him after a campaign to open the Dardanelles—of which he was the prime mover—had ended in tragic failure. Empire troops were killed or wounded in the debacle and the people blamed Churchill.

The campaign had been begun early in 1915, soon after the start of the war. Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, had sought a way out of the bitter fighting in France. He hoped to force the straits with Navy ships, defeat Turkey and give Russia a sea route for wartime commerce.

But hidden land guns held the ships at bay and mines sank several. Troops landed upon the Gallipoli Peninsula to attack the Turkish forts in the rear were repulsed. The effort was kept up until December but by then Churchill was out of the Cabinet, a political victim of the fiasco.

"I am finished," Churchill said at the time he resigned from the Cabinet. A week later he was in the trenches in France as a lieutenant colonel commanding the Sixth Royal Scots Fusiliers.

(Years later an investigating commission cleared him of all fault in the Dardanelles undertaking.)

Soon Made Comeback

When the storm of the tragedy had subsided, David Lloyd George, an old friend of Churchill's who had become Prime Minister, called him back to the Cabinet as Minister of Munitions.

In that capacity he made great contributions to victory. Lloyd George credited him with introducing tanks to warfare. These caught the Germans completely by surprise in 1916.

But it was in the second World War that Churchill, as Great Britain's Prime Minister, scaled the greatest heights.

He had regained his old post as First Lord of the Admiralty, and it was from that office that he was called to guide Britain through the dreary storm.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain had left Britain a legacy of peril, and as one Churchill biographer put it, it was by a "virtual but unspoken demand of the people who were to do the paying and the dying" that King George VI had bidden Churchill to form a new cabinet.

Symbol of Fortitude

During the long and anxious months that the British Commonwealth stood alone against the victorious German fury, it was Churchill who personified the refusal of his people to admit defeat.

His was the eloquence, the indomitable will that summoned them to their finest hour, one of the magnificent climaxes of human history.

Within three weeks after he took the helm from the faltering hands of Chamberlain, Belgium capitulated to German might, precipitating the hazardous Dunkerque retreat of the British Expeditionary Force.

That tragic operation was one of the most masterful in history. It was not until long after victory that the full epic story of the evacuation from the bombed and bloody beaches of France between May 26 and June 4, 1940, was told.

The Admiralty had expected to rescue 45,000 at the most, but 330,000 were returned to Britain. In addition, 123,095 French troops were moved across the Channel by British and French ships, many of which were sunk or damaged. The German planes were so numerous that the Royal Air Force was woefully outclassed, but it destroyed 262 of them.

The unexpected success of the operation was hailed by some as an Allied victory, but Churchill saw it as "a colossal military disaster."

"Wars are not won by evacuations," he declared.

Churchill was 65 years old when he reached is goal of Empire then faced a precarious future with Hitler's legions sweeping everything before them.

There was no other to take the helm after Prime Minister Chamberlain's "peace in our time" appeasement of the Nazi leader had failed dismally.

Churchill had assailed Chamberlain for his bargain with Hitler at Munich by which Czechoslovakia was sacrificed in an effort to avert war. He saw in the bargain "a total and unmitigated defeat."

'Complete Surrender'

"The idea that safety can be purchased by throwing a small state to the wolves is a fatal delusion," Churchill said. He thought that Britain should have joined with others to prevent German encroachment on Czechoslovakia.

"The utmost the Prime Minister (Chamberlain) was able to gain for Czechoslovakia has been that the German dictator, instead of snatching his victuals from the table, has been content to have them served to him course by course. . . ." Churchill said.

He referred to the agreement to partition the country and give the Sudetenland to Germany, to be occupied in five stages.

He called it "complete surrender by western democracies to the Nazi threat of force."

A short time after appeasement, Hitler gobbled up the rest of Czechoslovakia, making it a German protectorate.

In the beginning Churchill had labeled the Nazi regime "a government of terrorists." He had cried out against appeasement and appealed — futilely — for rearmament.

War Burden Fell on Him

Just a little more than a month after he became Prime Minister there came from England's ally, France, the anguished, bleeding and confused cry, "We must give up the fight." Belgium had already quit.

Britain, whose forces had been trapped by Hitler's armies and impelled into tragic but masterful retreat from the continent when Belgium surrendered, pleaded that the French continue the fight on another continent in a union of British and French empires; but despairing France yielded to the enemy.

Thus the 1940 Battle of France ended on June 18. Germany was the winner with an overmastering weight of arms and military tricks. The Battle of Britain was at hand.

Then it was that Churchill became Britain's shield and sword, her clarion call to battle, a composite of her will to fight on. He was truly the man of the hour.

Britain's 'Finest Hour'

"Hitler knows that he will have to break us in this island or lose the war," he told the House of Commons while the enemy overran France within sight of Dover's cliffs.

"If we can stand up to him, all Europe may be free. . . . Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duties, and so bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men will still say, 'This was their finest hour.' "

That was Britain's and Churchill's finest hour.

Foresaw Hard Struggle

When he shouldered Britain's war burdens he told the House of Commons that "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat" and added:

"We have before us an ordeal of the most grievous kind. We have before us many, many months of struggle and suffering.

"You ask, what is our aim? I can answer in one word. It is victory. Victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors—victory, however long and hard the road may be, for without victory there is no survival.

"Let that be realized. No survival for the British Empire, no survival for all that the British Empire has stood for, no survival for the urge, the impulse of the ages, that mankind shall move forward toward his goal."

Fulfilled Victory Promise

Then with the bulldog persistence profiled by his jawbone, jowl and huncing shoulders, he rallied his people and led them through the dreary days when they fought alone and on to victory at the side of the United States and Russia.

Germany surrendered unconditionally on May 7, 1945. The back of Hitler's once mighty Wehrmacht had been broken and many of Germany's cities lay in ruins. Britain still carried on, as Churchill had said she would when the country was suffering the agony of the disastrous Dunkerque retreat. At that time he had declared:

"Even though large tracts of Europe and many old famous states have fallen, or may fall, into the grip of the Gestapo and all the odious apparatus of Nazi rule, we shall not lag nor fail, we shall go on to the end."

Though Churchill was past 70 when victory came and the mantle of fame rested securely on his shoulders, he went on to new triumphs. Not even the turning out of power of his party deterred him.

After victory in Europe, the Labor party rejected Churchill's proposal for extension of the wartime coalition government until the end of the Japanese war, thus forcing the first nationwide election in 10 years. That election, held July 5, 1945, resulted in a stunning defeat for Churchill's Conservative party.

Politics Time Again

Most observers agreed that Churchill was not repudiated as a war leader—friend and foe alike praised his war leadership—but was rejected as a politician and head of the Conservative party.

What the British voted for was the Labor Party, which was pledged to take a strong and quick hand in national reconstruction.

The public, released from the immediate perils of day-to-day enemy action from across the narrow waters of the channel, had grown restive. There was a rising clamor against queues and a general impatience to get on with the job of making life more comfortable after six hard years.

Thus the doughty leader who had carried Britain through the gloom to victory was toppled from his post of Prime Minister.

Even in defeat he gave the V-for-Victory sign.

"The decision of the British people has been recorded in the votes counted today," he said at that time.

"I have therefore laid down the charge which was placed upon me in darker times. I regret that I have not been permitted to finish the work against Japan. For this, however, all plans and preparations have been made. . . ."

Led 'Loyal Opposition'

He resumed the role he once liked best—unfettered critic as leader of "His Majesty's Loyal Opposition"—and directed sharp shafts at the government headed by Prime Minister Clement Attlee. He once called the mild-mannered Attlee "a sheep in sheep's clothing."

Churchill was relentless in his criticism that was sometimes impish, sometimes barbed and always arresting.

"The queues are longer, faces are longer and the shelves are barer, but nevertheless the conduct of daily life is more exacting," he said after the Labor party had taken over.

He accused the Labor government of exhibiting "stupidity, ineptitude and incompetence to an extent which I have never seen in any previous administration" and vigorously protested its decision in 1947 to quit India.

Churchill voiced to the House of Commons his "grief" at the "clattering down of the British Empire with all the glories and services it has rendered to mankind."

As for himself, Churchill said he had no political ambition explaining: "I have only stayed in politics to do my duty and help the country. Whatever happens in the future could only be anticlimax to me after the honor of what I have had to go through."

On Warpath Against Socialism

He declared that socialism was out of tune with the times and had made the country look like a jackass . . . "What I want to do for John Bull," he said, is "turn him 'round, and you will be surprised to see how quickly a great change there will be."

Churchill entered the 1951 election campaign with a vengeance. He stumped up and down the land speaking like thunder, commanding Britain to recapture a greatness that he said was being frittered away by lesser men. He referred to the ruling Laborites as "these little men."

He would drive up with a flourish to the place where he was to speak. The old V-for-Victory sign was a signal for cheering. When he waved the inevitable cigar, it seemed to his supporters that all was well with the world, a world in which old England had a rightful place. Churchill, just standing and chuckling, fascinated a crowd.

Deplored Loss of Prestige

While he did not always erupt deathless phrases, like "blood, toil, tears and sweat," he could be counted on in any half hour to rise once or twice to tht rolling, thundering and picturesque oratory that the world had come to rise once or twice to the roll-

The Conservative leader declared that Britain's prestige had shrunk more during the six years of Labor government rule than during any period since American colonies won the Revolutionary War.

"Our Oriental empire has been liquidated, our resources have been squandered, the pound sterling is worth only three-quarters of what it was when Mr. Atlee took over from me," Churchill stormed. "Our influence among the nations is now less than it has ever been in any period since I remember."

He promised to restore American "confidence and goodwill" in the British government.

Returned to the Helm

The voters turned out the Labor party November 25, 1951, and recalled the rugged old warrior to his former command. Churchill was nearly 77 years old when he took charge of Britain's destiny for the second time. He assumed the post of Minister of Defense as well as that of Prime Minister.

Less than 24 hours after the victory, Churchill, acting with his usual vigor, went to King George VI with his eight key cabinet appointments.

He appeared at Buckingham Palace beaming and jaunty. Swinging a gold - topped cane, smoking a huge cigar and holding up two fingers in his famous "V" sign.

In his campaign, Churchill had asked the people to give him a chance to help prevent World War III. He said: "I pray indeed that I may have this opportunity. It is the last prize I seek to win."

The H-Bomb Problem

During his post-war Prime Ministership, Churchill crossed the Atlantic three times on diplomatic missions.

He had hardly returned to office when he set out for Washington for talks with President Harry S. Truman.

Two years later, when Dwight D. Eisenhower became President, he was off to see him in Bermuda.

In 1954 he flew to Washington for talks about the situation created by the hydrogen bomb.

The old warrior's lifetime spanned the transition from the old-fashioned soldier who on foot or on horseback could try to kill only one or a few of the enemy at a time to the soldier who could rain down death from the sky on millions.

Development of the atomic and hydrogen bombs threatened the very existence of nations.

"Which way shall we turn to save our lives?" the Prime Minister asked.

He wanted a face-to-face talk with Soviet leaders to tell them bluntly that if they started an atomic war, they would be overwhelmed by a massive retaliation.

Hailed U.S.-British Unity

With that made plain, he said, "we might then, by a process of sublime irony, reach the stage in the story where safety will be the sturdy child of terror and survival will be the twin brother of annihilation."

But he believed the surest protector of western civilization was the British-American unity—that "great unwritten alliance."

Speaking of the United States, he said:

"There is no other case of a nation arriving at the summit of world power, seeking no territorial gain, but earnestly resolved to use her strength and wealth in the cause of progress and freedom. . . .

"For America to withdraw into isolation would condemn all Europe to Russian Communist subjugation and our famous and beloved island to death and ruin."

While advocating a realistic "peace through strength," Churchill wanted to reach "a work-a-day understanding with the Russian people and government." He thought that one way to do that was for the West to try for more trade with the U.S.S.R.

Churchill's 1959 Visit

In the spring of 1959 Churchill made an informal seven-day visit to the United States, his first visit in five years. He had planned the trip a year earlier, but postponed it because of an attack of pneumonia and pleurisy.

At a White House dinner in his honor, Churchill called for a "fresh and further effort" to build Anglo-American unity in dealing with the difficult world problems.

He described President Eisenhower as "one of my comrades of wartime days." Eisenhower once reminisced that he probably had "more quite warm arguments" with Churchill than with anyone else during the war. The reason, he smilingly explained, likely was that as an American, Churchill just wouldn't shut up.

"A truly great man," he said of Churchill.

The Briton spent three days as President Eisenhower's guest and then visited his old friend, Bernard Baruch, in New York. As he boarded the plane for his return to England, Sir Winston told those seeing him off:

"I would like to bid you farewell in this key: As long as the United States and Great Britain are united and bound together, the future is one of high hopes both for ourselves and the whole free world."

Prime Minister Nine Years

In his two terms Churchill served for almost nine years as Prime Minister—from May 10, 1940, to July 26, 1945—a period of five years two months and 16 days that covered all but eight months of the war—and from October 26, 1951, to April 5, 1955, a period of three years five months and 10 days.

In his second term he started Britain on the road back from Socialism.

"Socialism brought us to the brink of bankruptcy," he said. "We were standing on a treacherous trap door leading to economic disaster."

Despite his age and the exhaustion of two major strokes, he carried on his heavy duties until well past 80 and then quit reluctantly.

His first stroke was in 1950. The second, in 1953, left him temporarily speechless and paralyzed. An admirer gave him a modern wheelchair replete with ingenious gadgets to make life easier for invalids.

thanks to the right honorable gentleman for these outstanding services to the House and to the nation."

On his 90th birthday Nov. 30 crowds gathered outside his residence in Hyde Park Gate and cheered as the frail old man appeared at a window.

Thousands of messages poured in from all over the world. One was from President Lyndon B. Johnson for the first person ever made honorary American citizen by a vote of the Congress of the United States. The Congress bestowed that honor in 1963.

During the 1959 parliamentary campaign Churchill strongly endorsed the policies of Harold Macmillan who had become Prime Minister when Eden resigned because of ill health after serving for only 21 months.

It was during Eden's regime that British and French troops invaded Egypt after President Gamal Abdel Nasser had seized control of the Suez Canal Company. Israeli troops previously had moved into Egypt, a sworn enemy of Israel, and Eden contended his nation and France acted to prevent a Middle East explosion.

But the United Nations General Assembly called for a cease-fire and the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Egypt. The United States had sponsored the resolution, and Britain, France and Israel bowed to it. A U.N. police force moved in.

Churchill praised Eden's "resolute action" in sending the troops into Egypt and blasted the U.N. for failing to back the invasion.

His Paintings Exhibited

Churchill completed his four-volume "history of the English Speaking Peoples" in 1958. He had started this work more than 20 years earier.

In that same year 35 of his paintings were exhibited in the are gallery in New Zealand.

The Chicago Art Institute rejected an offer to exhibit the paintings thus, rating Churchill as an amateur, but his works were shown in New York's Metropolitan Musem of Art and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, among various other galleries. Everywhere the exhibit attracted large crowds.

Later Churchill took over Britain's Royal Academy of Art in London for a one-man show of 61 paintings, including the 35 shown abroad. Never before in its nearly 200-year history had the Royal Academy turned over its principal galleries to an amateur.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

Sir Winston and Lady Churchill celebrated 50 years of happy marriage in 1958. Golden wedding anniversary congratulations poured into their French Riviera resort from all over the world.

"My marriage was much the most fortunate and joyous event which happened to me in my whole life," Churchill once wrote. "For what can be more glorious than to be united in one's walk through life with a being incapable of an ignoble thought?"

Old Lord Rosebery, who attended the 1908 wedding, forecast that the marriage would last for six months—"with luck."

At the time they seemed an oddly assorted pair. The 34-year- old Churchill was a most unmarriageable man — untidy, moody, unpunctual, careless of money. His 23-year-old bride brought thrift and discipline into his household, and love, loyalty and understanding to his heart.

85th Birthday

On his 85th birthday in 1959 Churchill put on a black jacket, striped trousers, white shirt and bow tie—his usual costume — and visited the House of Commons, where he was met with prolonged applause from the Opposition. Leaders of each side extended congratulations.

"May I say that I most gratefully and eagerly accept both forms of compliments," the old statesman said. It was as long a parliamentary speech as he had made since quitting as Prime Minister. When the cheering ended, he left.

Birthday gifts and messages poured in from all over the world in such numbers that his personal staff had to sort them into three piles labeled from "close friends," "personal friends" and "well wishers."

Churchill issued a statement saying that because of the great number he could not acknowledge them all, but did want all the senders to know of "my warm thanks for their thoughts of me."

Reached Premiership at 65

Like his great ancestor, the Duke of Marlborough, who won eight battles in a row for the young Queen Anne, Churchill first found fame in the service of a queen— Victoria.

Just back from tht Boer war, the slim, red-headed firebrand was elected to Parliament in 1900 for the first time to begin a political career that was to continue for 60 years.

When he resigned as Prime Minister, Churchill had completed more than 30 consecutive years as a member of the House of Commons. Altogether he had served a total of 52 years at that years 1922-24. He continued his member.

His consecutive service was broken when he missed the ytars 1922-24. He continued his parliamentary career after quitting as Prime Minister.

Churchill the Warrior

Whenever there was a war "Winnie" generally was on hand.

His first commission was as a lieutenant in the Fourth Hussars. He got leave from that regiment to go to Cuba in 1895 and served there for two months as an observer with Spanish forces combating rebellion.

He fought on India's northwest frontier in 1897; on the Nile in 1898, and on the western front in France in late 1915 and part of 1916.

In the Boer war (1899-1900) he served as a war correspondent for a London newspaper until taken prisoner when a British troop train was ambushed at Frere.

One of his spectacular feats was his escape from the Pretoria prison camp.

Churchill scaled a wall when the sentries' backs were turned momentarily and walked boldly through the streets of Pretoria to the railroad station. He waited beyond the station for a freight train, which he swung aboard as it was picking up speed and concealed himself under some empty coal sacks.

The Boers subsequently searched the train, but failed to probe deep enough in the sacks.

Wanted 'Dead or Alive'

Before dawn the fugitive jumped off the moving train and hid in the woods until night. His only companion, he said later, was a huge vulture.

After waiting in vain that night for another train, he took a chance and knocked on the door of a farmhouse, explaining he had been in a train accident. Fortunately, the occupants were English, the only English family in a settlement of Boers, and they secreted him in a mine.

Two or three days later they smuggled Churchill aboard a car that was to be attached to another train and he hid in bales of wool. This train was searched by the Boers—there was a reward of 25 pounds out for the future Prime Minister "dead or alive" —but he escaped detection. Eventually he reached the frontier and safety.

Churchill cabled his paper, the London Morning Post: 'I' have lost many pounds weight, but I am lighter in heart."

He Irked Suffragists

In 1900 he won his first seat in Parliament. His experience in politics were many. Once he was the target of vegetables hurled by high-tariff advocates. His opposition to woman suffrage caused suffragists to beat at him with umbrellas and turn his meetings into riotous affairs.

After six years as an outspoken and often rebellious Conservative back bench legislator, Churchill "turned his coat" in 1906 to become a Liberal. It was then that he got his first ministry as Undersecretary for the Colonies, a post he held until 1908.

His career included these other positions:

President of the Board of Trade, 1908-10, Home Secretary, 1910-11; First Lord of the Admiralty, 1911-15; a soldier on the western front, part of 1915 and 1916; Minister of Munitions, 1917; Secretary for War and Air, 1918-21; Secretary for Colonies, 1921-22; Chancellor of the Exchequer, 1924-29, and First Lord of the Admiralty, 1939-40.

Churchill left the Liberal ranks after failing of election to the House of Commons in 1922, and began edging back toward the Conservatives. In 1924 Stanley Baldwin appointed him Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Conservative cabinet.

He broke with Baldwin in 1931 over the government's India policy—a break that proved a fortunate circumstance for he remained out of the Conservative government of Chamberlain. Thus he escaped any blame for failure of British policy.

World War I Readiness

Churchill became First Lord of the Admiralty in 1911 with instructions to build up Britain's sea power to meet the threat against its supremacy by the new fleet of Wilhelm II of Germany. By 1914 he had a powerful armada.

He had the foresight to keep this great fleet, which King George V reviewed at Spithead on July 20, 1914, on a war footing, instead of having it scattered in the ordinary course the next week. When England declared war on August 4, the ships were at their stations in the North Sea and Germany's navy was bottled up.

Churchill rushed men and ships to Antwerp and went there himself in October, 1914, when there was some hope of saving the city from the Germans. But his indefatigable efforts, diplomatically and in the actual work of defense, were unavailing.

His next great effort, in the early part of the next year, ended in the Dardanelles disaster.

Commentators have largely agreed since that both the Antwerp and Dardanelles plans were sound strategically and that if they had been executed vigorously their originator would have emerged as the great genius of the war, for the conflict would have been localized and shortened. Instead he was made one of the outstanding "goats" of war-time Britain.

A generation later Churchill was the chief repository of British hopes during the war that unpreparedness spawned.

Buoyed People's Hopes

The people found almost spiritual solace in his words.

"I have myself full confidence... that we shall prove ourselves once again able to defend our island home and ride out the storms of war and outlive the menace of tyranny... If necessary alone," he said after the Belgian surrender.

After the fall of France, when Britain did stand alone, he said:

"And now it has come to us to stand alone in the breach, and to face the worst that the tyrant's might and enmity can do.

"Bearing ourselves humbly before God, but conscious that we serve an unfolding purpose we are ready to defend our native land. . . We are fighting by ourselves alone; but we are not fighting for ourselves alone. . . We await undismayed the impending assault."

And when that assault came in the summer of 1940 in the ordeal by fire and demolition which Hitler calculated would crush the British will and break a path for cross-channel invasion, Churchill spoke the people's inspiring gratitude and debt to the Royal Air Force.

Great Debt to 'the Few'

"The gratitude of every home in our island, in our Empire, and indeed throughout the world, except in the abodes of the guilty, goes out to the British airmen, who, undaunted by odds, unwearied in their constant challenge and mortal danger, are turning the tide of the World War by their prowess and by their devotion," he said.

"Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

He saw sympathy for Britain blossom into lend-lease relations, as the United States became "the Arsenal of Democracy." He welcomed the opportunity of trading leaseholds for American bases in British territory in the western hemisphere for 50 destroyers.

"Undoubtedly this process means that these two great organizations of the English-speaking democracies . . . will have to be somewhat mixed up together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage," he observed of the cooperation between the two democracies.

All Right With Him

"For my own part. . . I do not view the process with any misgivings. I could not stop it if I wished; no one can stop it. Like the Mississippi, it just keeps rollong along. Let it roll. Let it roll on full flood, inexorable, irresistible, benignant, to broader lands and better days."

The bonds of friendship between Britain and America were strengthened through the personal relationship of Churchill and Roosevelt. They were on "Winston - and - Franklin"

Their battleship-cruiser rendezvous in the Atlantic in 1941 gave the world the Atlantic Charter, a blueprint of fundamental freedoms, four months before the United States went to war. Several times after this country joined the conflict, the Prime Minister visited the United States to confer with the President.

Churchill's 10-day "unconditional surrender" meeting with President Roosevelt at Casablanca in January 1943, shattered precedents to make history.

Results Soon Seen

An action-packed 1943 testified to the thoroughness of their planning. The North African campaign was brought to a victorious conclusion. Sicily was conquered. Benito Mussolini was ousted as Fascist dictator, the Italian mainland was invaded and Italy capitulated. Sardinia, Corsica and the Italian fleet fell into Allied hands.

In November-December, 1943, the two met with Stalin at Tehran, Iran, to map the later course of the war and the early phases of the peace, and in February of 1945 the "Big Three" held another momentous conference at Yalta in the Crimea.

Churchill and Roosevelt conferred at Quebec in the summer of 1943 and again the next year about carrying on the war in the Pacific.

Just before the meeting at Tehran, they had met with China's Chiang Kai-shek at Cairo to plan the future struggle against Japan.

The Prime Minister had two attacks of pneumonia in 1943, one in February in London and the other after the Cairo and Tehran conferences. He convalesced in the Middle East. It was 10 weeks from the time he left for the conferences before he returned early in January of 1944.

Carried on Duties

While he was still ill, he announced proudly: "I have not at any time had to relinquish my part in the direction of affairs and there has not been the slightest delay in giving decisions which were required of me."

In 1947 he underwent an operation for hernia. Early the next year he contracted a heavy cold that developed into bronchitis.

He was always a problem to his doctors. Even in his illnesses Churchill resisted any curbing of his restless energies and refused to be separated from his cigars. However, in late years he husbanded his energies by staying in bed most mornings until noon, reading and dictating, and trying to take a nap in the afternoon.

Hitler was planning a triumphant visit to England at the time Churchill became Prime Minister, but five years later the tables were turned and it was Churchill who visited Germany in the wake of Allied armies.

Became 'Sir Winston'

Honors came to Churchill in profusion. In the spring of 1953, Queen Elizabeth II knighted him for his decades of service to the Empire and throne.

As a knight he gained nothing substantial except the title "Sir," but investure with the Order of the Garter, founded by King Edward III six centuries ago, was the highest honor he could accept without giving up his cherished role as Conservative leader in the House of Commons.

A peerage, with any title from baron to duke and the resultant membership in the House of Lords, would have debarred him from the lower house.

It was understood that he could have had a dukedom conferred on him by his Queen any time he gave the slightest indication he wanted one.

The order of the Garter was one of 140 honors Churchill had been awarded by his own and other governments. Sir Anthony Eden once said that Churchill was recognized throughout the world "as the greatest man upon this earth."

Won Nobel Prize

The Nobel Prize for Lietraure went to him in 1953 for his writings and his oratory. A member of the committee that made the selection said that "the Nobel Literary Prize is intended to cast luster over the author, but this time it is the author who gives luster to the prize."

Sir Winston sought to crown his career made heroic largely by war by becoming an architect of peace. His aim was to "bring near that lasting peace settlement which the masses of the people of every race and in every land fervently desire."

"I believe myself that the mass of the people in all countries are kind, decent folk who wish to live their lives in neighborly fashion with their fellow men and women," he said.

Over and over again he said that peace was the "last prize" he sought.

Not even his tortuous dealings with the Soviet Union leaders in the cold war dimmed his zeal.

"Patience and perseverance must never be grudged when the peace of the world is at stake," he told the House of Commons in a 1954 speech. And on another occasion, he said:

"Never flinch, never weary, never despair."

Modest in Victory

At his 80th birthday celebration in 1954, when he received eulogies from every side, the World War II Prime Minister modestly disclaimed credit for having been his country's inspiration during the long weary days of conflict.

" have never accepted what many people have kindly said, namely that I inspired the nation," he said.

"Their will was resolute and remorseless, and it proved unconquerable. It fell to me to express it, and if I have found the right word, you must remember that I have always earned my living by my pen, and by my tongue.

"It was the nation and the race dwelling all 'round the globe that had the lion's heart. I had the luck to be called upon to give the roar. I also hope that I sometimes suggested to the lion the right place to use his claws."

'Language' of Budget Given Explanation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here's a quick course in the language of the budget, with fiscal terms translated into plain English:

Appropriation — Authority from Congress for a federal agency to spend or lend, for a stated purpose and up to a stated amount.

Authorization, or contract authorization — Authority for an agency to sign a contract to buy goods or services. A later appropriation must be passed before the money actually can be paid.

New obligational authority, or "NOA" — Authority for an agency to obligate the government to pay out money. It may represent appropriations or authorizations or both.

Expenditures — Checks actually written and cash actually paid. Expenditures, not appropriations, are the measure of federal outlays in any single year; an appropriation may be used up over a period of two, three or more years.

Fiscal year — The government year, running from July 1 to the next June 30. Fiscal year 1966 ends in the middle of 1966.

Administrative budget — The regular government budget — the framework for the President's annual request for authority to spend, lend and purchase contracts; and the estimate of revenues to support those outlays.

Trust funds — Money held in trust by the government to be paid out only for specified purposes. They are not part of the administrative budget. Social Security taxes, for instance, are not combined with general government funds but go into a special fund from which old age pensions are paid.

Cash budget, or consolidated cash budget — the administrative budget plus the income and outgo of the trust funds. The cash budget is the complete picture of federal receipts and payments. It may run a surplus while the administrative budget shows a deficit.

Japanese Are Told To Be Prudent

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Eisaku Sato told the Japanese Diet today Japan should deal with the problem of Communist China "prudently and from its own independent viewpoint, without making unnecessary haste to reach a conclusion."

In an administrative policy speech Sato said the China problem "is one of great importance with a variety of complications" for Japan.

The complications mainly stem from Japan's alliance with the United States and its diplomatic ties with Nationalist China. The government has been under constant pressure by opposition leftist parties to recognize Peking and support its membership in the United Nations.

"At the present stage," Sato said, "our country intends to promote economic and cultural interchange with Communist China and on the basic principle of separation of political matters and economic matters."

The prime minister said, Japan will maintain "the friendly relations with the republic of China with which Japan has regular diplomatic relations."

Inauguration ceremonies of a U.S. president first were broadcast at the second inaugural of Calvin Coolidge.

American Ancestor Fought Britishers

Churchill was half American. His mother was Jennie Jerome, daughter of a wealthy New Yorker. She married Lord Randolph Churchill, a younger son of the Seventh Duke of Marlborough.

At a colorful ceremony in Washington in 1952, the British Prime Minister was inducted in to the Society of the Cincinnati, an organization of descendants of officers who fought for independence from Britain. He qualified for membership as a great-great-grandson of Lieut. Reuben Murray, who fought in Col. Charles Burral's Connecticut Continental Regiment.

When the insignia of the society was placed around his neck, Churchill said he regarded this as a "most memorable day." He drew laughter by remarking that "when the event took place which this society commemorates, I was on both sides in the war between us and us."

'Iron Curtain' Label Created By Churchill

By The Associated Press

It was Churchill who designated the barrier the East erected against the West as the "Iron Curtain."

He first used that expression on August 16, 1945, in an address to the House of Commons. At that time he said:

"Sparse and guarded accounts of what has happened and is happening have filtered through, but it is not impossible that tragedy on a prodigious scale is unfolding itself behind allies, then faced the conquering Nazis alone. The embattled little isle was in imminent danger of invasion by Adolf Hitler's hordes, a threat that Churchill met largely with bluff.

"We shall defend our island whatever the cost may be," he said in a defiant speech to the House of Commons. "We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills, we shall never surrender.

"And even if, which I do not for a moment believe, this island or a large part of it were subjugated and starving, then our Empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British Fleet, will carry on the struggle until in God's good time the new world with all its power and might steps forth to the liberation and rescue of the old."

He "broke down and wept like a child" at the time French leaders refused to go on with the war in June, 1940, former Premier Edouard Herriot of France revealed after victory, but clenched his fists and went ahead with the struggle alone.

SHOULD A LAWYER DEFEND A PERSON HE THINKS IS GUILTY?

This is a question that is often asked by persons unfamiliar with the tenets of the legal profession. Some find it hard to understand why a lawyer will agree to defend an individual whose guilt appears to be establihsed by the evidence.

The duty of the lawyer is not to determine the guilt or innocence of his client, but only to present his case to the best of his ability.

The famous English literary figure, Samuel Johnson, answered that question long ago with ringing logic. James Boswell asked Johnson (who was a lawyer), "But what do you think of supporting a cause which you know to be bad? Johnson replied:

"Sir, you do not know it to be good or bad till the judge determines it. I have said that you are to state facts fairly; so that your thinking, or what you call knowing, a cause to be bad, must be from reasoning, must be from your supposing your arguments to be weak and inconclusive. But, Sir, that is not enough. An argument which does not convince yourself, may convince the judge to whom you urge it . . . It is his business to judge; and you are not to be confident in your own opinion that a cause is bad, but to say all you can for your client, and then hear the judge's opinion."

thanks to the right honorable gentleman for these outstanding services to the House and to the nation."

On his 90th birthday Nov. 30 crowds gathered outside his residence in Hyde Park Gate and cheered as the frail old man appeared at a window.

Thousands of messages poured in from all over the world. One was from President Lyndon B. Johnson for the first person ever made honorary American citizen by a vote of the Congress of the United States. The Congress bestowed that honor in 1963.

During the 1959 parliamentary campaign Churchill strongly endorsed the policies of Harold Macmillan who had become Prime Minister when Eden resigned because of ill health after serving for only 21 months.

It was during Eden's regime that British and French troops invaded Egypt after President Gamal Abdel Nasser had seized control of the Suez Canal Company. Israeli troops previously had moved into Egypt, a sworn enemy of Israel, and Eden contended his nation and France acted to prevent a Middle East explosion.

But the United Nations General Assembly called for a cease-fire and the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Egypt. The United States had sponsored the resolution, and Britain, France and Israel bowed to it. A U.N. police force moved in.

Churchill praised Eden's "resolute action" in sending the troops into Egypt and blasted the U.N. for failing to back the invasion.

His Paintings Exhibited

Churchill completed his four-volume "history of the English Speaking Peoples" in 1958. He had started this work more than 20 years earier.

The bonds of friendship between Britain and America were strengthened through the personal relationship of Churchill and Roosevelt. They were on "Winston-and-Franklin"

Their battleship-cruiser rendezvous in the Atlantic in 1941 gave the world the Atlantic Charter, a blueprint of fundamental freedoms, four months before the United States went to war. Several times after this country joined the conflict, the Prime Minister visited the United States to confer with the President.

Churchill's 10-day "unconditional surrender" meeting with President Roosevelt at Casablanca in January 1943, shattered precedents to make history.

Results Soon Seen

An action-packed 1943 testified to the thoroughness of their planning. The North African campaign was brought to a victorious conclusion. Sicily was conquered. Benito Mussolini was ousted as Fascist dictator, the Italian mainland was invaded and Italy capitulated. Sardinia, Corsica and the Italian fleet fell into Allied hands.

In November-December, 1943, the two met with Stalin at Tehran, Iran, to map the later course of the war and the early phases of the peace, and in February of 1945 the "Big Three" held another momentous conference at Yalta in the Crimea.

Churchill and Roosevelt conferred at Quebec in the summer of 1943 and again the next year about carrying on the war in the Pacific.

Just before the meeting at Tehran, they had met with China's Chiang Kai-shek at Cairo to plan the future struggle against Japan.

The Prime Minister had two attacks of pneumonia in 1943, one in February in London and the other after the Cairo and Tehran conferences. He convalesced in the Middle East. It was 10 weeks from the time he left for the conferences before he returned early in January of 1944.

Carried on Duties

While he was still ill, he announced proudly: "I have not at any time had to relinquish my part in the direction of affairs and there has not been the slightest delay in giving decisions which were required of me."

In 1947 he underwent an operation for hernia. Early the next year he contracted a heavy cold that developed into bronchitis.

He was always a problem to his doctors. Even in his illnesses Churchill resisted any curbing of his restless energies and refused to be separated from his cigars. However, in late years he husbanded his energies by staying in bed most mornings until noon, reading and dictating, and trying to take a nap in the afternoon.

Hitler was planning a triumphant visit to England at the time Churchill became Prime Minister, but five years later the tables were turned and it was Churchill who visited Germany in the wake of Allied armies.

Became 'Sir Winston'

Honors came to Churchill in profusion. In the spring of 1953, Queen Elizabeth II knighted him for his decades of service to the Empire and throne.

As a knight he gained nothing substantial except the title "Sir," but investure with the Order of the Garter, founded by King Edward III six centuries ago, was the highest honor he could accept without giving up his cherished role as Conservative leader in the House of Commons.

A peerage, with any title from baron to duke and the resultant membership in the House of Lords, would have debarred him from the lower house.

It was understood that he could have had a dukedom conferred on him by his Queen any time he gave the slightest indication he wanted one.

The order of the Garter was one of 140 honors Churchill had been awarded by his own and other governments. Sir Anthony Eden once said that Churchill was recognized throughout the world "as the greatest man upon this earth."

Won Nobel Prize

The Nobel Prize for Lietraure went to him in 1953 for his writings and his oratory. A member of the committee that made the selection said that "the Nobel Literary Prize is intended to cast luster over the author, but this time it is the author who gives luster to the prize."

Sir Winston sought to crown his career made heroic largely by war by becoming an architect of peace. His aim was to "bring near that lasting peace settlement which the masses of the people of every race and in every land fervently desire."

"I believe myself that the mass of the people in all countries are kind, decent folk who wish to live their lives in neighborly fashion with their fellow men and women," he said.

Over and over again he said that peace was the "last prize" he sought.

Not even his tortuous dealings with the Soviet Union leaders in the cold war dimmed his zeal.

"Patience and perseverance must never be grudged when the peace of the world is at stake," he told the House of Commons in a 1954 speech. And on another occasion, he said:

"Never flinch, never weary, never despair."

Modest in Victory

At his 80th birthday celebration in 1954, when he received eulogies from every side, the World War II Prime Minister modestly disclaimed credit for having been his country's inspiration during the long weary days of conflict.

" have never accepted what many people have kindly said, namely that I inspired the nation," he said.

"Their will was resolute and remorseless, and it proved unconquerable. It fell to me to express it, and if I have found the right word, you must remember that I have always earned my living by my pen, and by my tongue.

"It was the nation and the race dwelling all 'round the globe that had the lion's heart. I had the luck to be called upon to give the roar. I also hope that I sometimes suggested to the lion the right place to use his claws."

'Iron Curtain' Label Created By Churchill

By The Associated Press

It was Churchill who designated the barrier the East erected against the West as the "Iron Curtain."

He first used that expression on August 16, 1945, in an address to the House of Commons. At that time he said:

"Sparse and guarded accounts of what has happened and is happening have filtered through, but it is not impossible that tragedy on a prodigious scale is unfolding itself behind allies, then faced the conquering Nazis alone. The embattled little isle was in imminent danger of invasion by Adolf Hitler's hordes, a threat that Churchill met largely with bluff.

"We shall defend our island whatever the cost may be," he said in a defiant speech to the House of Commons. "We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills, we shall never surrender.

"And even if, which I do not for a moment believe, this island or a large part of it were subjugated and starving, then our Empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British Fleet, will carry on the struggle until in God's good time the new world with all its power and might steps forth to the liberation and rescue of the old."

He "broke down and wept like a child" at the time French leaders refused to go on with the war in June, 1940, former Premier Edouard Herriot of France revealed after victory, but clenched his fists and went ahead with the struggle alone.

'Language' of Budget Given Explanation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here's a quick course in the language of the budget, with fiscal terms translated into plain English:

Appropriation — Authority from Congress for a federal agency to spend or lend, for a stated purpose and up to a stated amount.

Authorization, or contract authorization — Authority for an agency to sign a contract to buy goods or services. A later appropriation must be passed before the money actually can be paid.

New obligational authority, or "NOA" — Authority for an agency to obligate the government to pay out money. It may represent appropriations or authorizations or both.

Expenditures — Checks actually written and cash actually paid. Expenditures, not appropriations, are the measure of federal outlays in any single year; an appropriation may be used up over a period of two, three or more years.

Fiscal year — The government year, running from July 1 to the next June 30. Fiscal year 1966 ends in the middle of 1966.

Administrative budget — The regular government budget — the framework for the President's annual request for authority to spend, lend and purchase contracts; and the estimate of revenues to support those outlays.

Trust funds — Money held in trust by the government to be paid out only for specified purposes. They are not part of the administrative budget. Social Security taxes, for instance, are not combined with general government funds but go into a special fund from which old age pensions are paid.

Cash budget, or consolidated cash budget — the administrative budget plus the income and outgo of the trust funds. The cash budget is the complete picture of federal receipts and payments. It may run a surplus while the administrative budget shows a deficit.

Japanese Are Told To Be Prudent

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Eisaku Sato told the Japanese Diet today Japan should deal with the problem of Communist China "prudently and from its own independent viewpoint, without making unnecessary haste to reach a conclusion."

In an administrative policy speech Sato said the China problem "is one of great importance with a variety of complications" for Japan.

The complications mainly stem from Japan's alliance with the United States and its diplomatic ties with Nationalist China. The government has been under constant pressure by opposition leftist parties to recognize Peking and support its membership in the United Nations.

"At the present stage," Sato said, "our country intends to promote economic and cultural interchange with Communist China and on the basic principle of separation of political matters and economic matters."

The prime minister said, Japan will maintain "the friendly relations with the republic of China with which Japan has regular diplomatic relations."

Inauguration ceremonies of a U.S. president first were broadcast at the second inaugural of Calvin Coolidge.

American Ancestor Fought Britishers

Churchill was half American. His mother was Jennie Jerome, daughter of a wealthy New Yorker. She married Lord Randolph Churchill, a younger son of the Seventh Duke of Marlborough.

At a colorful ceremony in Washington in 1952, the British Prime Minister was inducted in to the Society of the Cincinnati, an organization of descendants of officers who fought for independence from Britain. He qualified for membership as a great-great-grandson of Lieut. Reuben Murray, who fought in Col. Charles Burral's Connecticut Continental Regiment.

When the insignia of the society was placed around his neck, Churchill said he regarded this as a "most memorable day." He drew laughter by remarking that "when the event took place which this society commemorates, I was on both sides in the war between us and we."

SHOULD A LAWYER DEFEND A PERSON HE THINKS IS GUILTY?

This is a question that is often asked by persons unfamiliar with the tenets of the legal profession. Some find it hard to understand why a lawyer will agree to defend an individual whose guilt appears to be establihsed by the evidence.

The duty of the lawyer is not to determine the guilt or innocence of his client, but only to present his case to the best of his ability.

The famous English literary figure, Samuel Johnson, answered that question long ago with ringing logic. James Boswell asked Johnson (who was a lawyer), "But what do you think of supporting a cause which you know to be bad? Johnson replied:

"Sir, you do not know it to be good or bad till the judge determines it. I have said that you are to state facts fairly; so that your thinking, or what you call knowing, a cause to be bad, must be from reasoning, must be from your supposing your arguments to be weak and inconclusive. But, Sir, that is not enough. An argument which does not convince yourself, may convince the judge to whom you urge it . . . It is his business to judge; and you are not to be confident in your own opinion that a cause is bad, but to say all you can for your client, and then hear the judge's opinion."

This mesage is presented as a public service.

Tshombe Warned Assassination To Be Attempted

security chief, has informed U.S. intelligence-military advisers in the Congo that his men are able to round up only about half of these infiltrators, leaving a deadly assassin squadron still at large.

DANGER FROM THE REAR

If Tshombe can escape assassination, the ebullient Congo leader still runs the grave and imminent risk of being undercut by the same officials — Secretary Rusk and Undersecretary Averell Harriman — whose policies led to the oustar and death of South Viet Nam's President Diem.

Although the U.S. is giving Tshombe "limited" military and economic aid, a State Department group headed by Rusk and Harriman has privately been pressuring Tshombe to deal with the Congolese rebels and widen his government to include them.

So far, Tshombe has balked at this, replying that if he followed the Rusk-Harriman recommedations, he would be contributing to his own assassination.

As a counter move, Tshombe has sent word to President Johnson through Senator Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., a trusted friend, urging him to drop U.S. support of the Organization of African Unity, which is openly aiding the rebel group in the Congo.

According to Tshombe's message, three members of the OAU — Kenya's President Jomo Kenyatta, Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere and Uganda's Prime Minister Milton Obote — are helping rebel "President" Christophe Gbeney plan a new military offensive against Congo government forces.

President Johnson, who must decide soon whether to step up aid to Tshombe or see the situation deteriorate, turned over Tshombe's message and Dodd's accompanying letter to McGeorge Bundy, chief White House foreign policy adviser. In turn, Bundy sent the pleas to Secretary Rusk, where they have been shelved.

It now appears that only direct action by President Johnson or new pressure by Tshombe's friends in Congress can save the Congo leader from the same fate as the late President Diem.

If Tshombe falls, U. S. military intelligence experts foresee a far worse mess confronting the U.S. in the Congo than in South Viet Nam.

said he would take her home if she took her slacks off. She complied and laid the slacks on the seat. The girl told the officer that he drove around for approximately 15 minutes and then told her to take her panties off. After she did so he made an indecent attack on her which she resisted.

Finally he allowed her to dress and took her home and then drove off. The girl reported the incident to her mother and was then admitted to Penrose Hospital for observation.

Mrs. Carrie G. Ragle Services Set Tuesday

Mrs. Carrie G. Ragle, 1722 N. Royer St., widow of Horace Ragle, who was prominent in the Masonic Order, died Friday at a local nursing home. She attended the First Christian Church and was active in the Eastern Star for many years.

Mrs. Ragle was born in Elk County, Kan., Oct. 31, 1883. She attended local grade and high schools and had been a resident of Colorado Springs for 75 years. Mr. Ragle died in 1930. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Katherine Shanks, of Livonia, Mich., and Mrs. Mildred Stewart, Springfield, Va.; a son, Richard C. Ragle, Anchorage, Alaska; a brother, Bert Davis, Sacramento, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. Lecla Hall, Bethesda, Md.; a nephew, Fred Ragle, Colorado Springs, three great-grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Swan Drawing Room. Dr. Howard E. Hanson will officiate. Cremation will follow.

Middle East Area May Be Close to War Once Again

from the Israeli border.

The Lebanese government was authorized to permit the entry of Arab soldiers if needed to help defend the country from Israeli attack.

Israel has warned that it will fight to prevent the diversion schemes.

Privately Israeli officials are worried over the latest Arab moves. Publicly they appear optimistic.

Prime Minister Levi Eshkol told a foreign correspondents' luncheon recently that a military showdown depended on how the Arabs tried to implement the diversion plans. Asked if he thought they would try, he replied: "I believe they will not."

Israelis also believe there will be no concerted Arab military drive until President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic withdraws his soldiers from Yemen.

Nasser has committed soldiers, tanks and planes to showing up the republican regime in Yemen, which is opposed by royalist followers of deposed Imam Mohammed Al Badr.

LBJ's Budget Approaches Mark of $100 Billion

original Defense Department budget for this year was $51.2 billion, but Secretary Robert S. McNamara has whittled about $1 billion from it.

As Johnson prepared to send his budget to Congress, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., called for an end to federal deficits.

By July 1, he said, the federal government "will have operated in the red for 30 of 36 years." He predicted that the national debt, now $318 billion, "will go higher."

Byrd, who heads the Senate Finance Committee, criticized the system under which the budget is divided into a dozen or more separate bills, many of which permit spending over several years.

"Congress does not know whether it is authorizing a deficit, balancing the budget, or developing a surplus," Byrd's statement said.

He proposed that all spending authority be placed in a single package and then limited by the estimates of federal income or revenue during that same period.

27 Cardinals Are Named By Pope Paul

on March 19, 1962, when Pope John XXIII elevated 10 men to the sacred college and brought its membership to 87, the largest in history.

Since then 11 cardinals have died.

The elevation of Archbishop Shehan gives the United States six members of the College of Cardinals. Baltimore is the oldest Roman Catholic Diocese in the United States.

The other American members are Francis Spellman of New York, James F. McIntyre of Los Angeles, Richard J. Cushing of Boston, Albert G. Meyer of Chicago and Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis.

Pope Paul's nominations reflected two aspects of his reign — interest toward Catholics who live among the Orthodox of the East, and concern toward Roman Catholics in Communist lands.

His nomination of the three patriarchs was clearly a move to honor the Catholics of the East. The patriarchs had complained during sessions of the Vatican Ecumenical Council that they do not always receive the esteemed due them.

The choice of Archbishop Beran was a challenge to the Communist rulers of Czechoslovakia. The archbishop was confined by the Communists from 1949 until October 1963, when he was allowed to enter a monastery. But he was not allowed to resume his duties as Archbishop of Prague, and the Vatican yearbook continues to list him as impeded.

Archbishop Slipyi spent 18 years in confinement in Siberia and then was allowed to come to Rome two years ago.

Pope Paul became pontiff June 21, 1963. The Vatican paper L'Osservatore Romano said today that he had delayed calling his first consistory to avoid conflict with his heavy duties in connection with the Ecumenical Council.

Overtime Stitching Put in on Shoes

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — When do two feet equal four feet?

Francisco Sandoval Rios will say his feet and look around for someone to repair his two-foot long shoes "for the largest feet in the world."

Sandoval Rios, a carnival side-show attraction, walked into the shop of a harnessmaker with flapping soles and complained no cobbler would touch his shoes.

Bill Johnson, who runs a Miami shoe shop glanced at the shoes, measuring one foot wide, and remarked: "You could put an elephant's foot in easy."

He stitched overtime Sunday to fix them.

BONE PICKERS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)— Dr. Thomas H. Gouchnour, a general surgeon, picks bones for relaxation. After he finishes his hospital rounds in the evening, he joins his son, Jim, 16, at home in scraping the rib bone of a mastodon or cleaning the teeth of a 500,000-year-old animal. He and his son have acquired many of the fossils while scuba diving. Included in their collection are a giant beaver tooth, parts of mammoths, mastodons, an extinct animal similar to a South American llama, deer, horses, tapir, giant sloths and Indian relics from ancient tribes.

Anti-Government Riots Spread In Viet Nam

formation Service building in Hue was wrecked during a demonstration Saturday.

Student agitators demanded that businesses refuse to serve Americans. Banners reading "Taylor go home" and "Kick out Taylor" flew in Hue in protest against U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor's support of Premier Tran Van Huong's government.

A general strike closed business in Da Nang and commercial airline flights to the city were canceled.

Taylor and Deputy Ambassador Alexis U. Johnson met in emergency session Sunday with Premier Huong, who later conferred with Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, chief of the armed forces, and other leaders.

There were fears that continuing civil strife might lead to a restoration of military rule. Informants said, however, that the military had decided to go along with the government for the time being after an urgent meeting Sunday.

Five Buddhist monks entered the sixth day of a hunger strike they vow will last until death unless Huong quits.

The Buddhists claim the Huong government discriminates against them and that the United States continues to support Huong because of Taylor's influence.

Two U.S. soldiers were dead and two others missing after they had gone fishing in a cove near the coastal city of Qui Nhon, 270 miles northeast of Saigon. Apparently the four were victims of a Communist ambush.

The Defense Department in Washington said the dead were Sgt. 1.C. James T.H. Cordova of Glen Burnie, Md., and Spec. 4 Roger L. Buss of Cottage Grove, Wis. Their deaths brought to 254 the number of Americans killed as a result of enemy action since December 1961.

The missing men were Spec. 4 William E. Swaykos, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swaykos of Bloomfield, N.J., and Sgt. 1.C. Harold E. Strong Jr. of Alexandria, Va.

World Fairs Are Gone, Walt Disney Declares

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Fairs today are passe. People have too many other things to do," says Walt Disney, whose touch contribtued to the success of four exhibits at the New York World's Fair.

Promoters have proposed a world's fair in the Los Angeles area in 1968-69.

Money to build a fair can best be used for more worthwhile purposes, Disney told the Los Angeles Times.

"This area already is a world's fair," said Disney, whose Disneyland in Anaheim, near Los Angeles is one of the nation's most popular tourist attractions. "We've already got things that are attracting people."

Driver Killed, 15 Injured in Crash of Bus

BRIDGEPORT, Mich. (AP) — A Greyhound bus slammed into an overturned fuel oil tanker on a snow-slick road today, killing the bus driver and injuring 15 passengers, some critically.

The crash occurred near an entrance ramp leading onto Interstate 75 near this small southeast Lower Michigan community.

The driver was identified as William A. Deview, 51, of Bay City, Mich.

State police said the truck driver, Ronald J. Nickel, 24, of Holley, told them he was preparing to turn from the Dixie Highway onto the ramp when the double tandem tanker went out of control and overturned, spreading 16,000 gallons of fuel oil across the road.

Police said Nickel told them he was unsuccessful in an attempt to flag down the approaching bus.

Nickel, who was uninjured, told police he put out a small fire which started after the collision, officers said.

Seven ambulances were dispatched from Saginaw, 10 miles north of the crash scene. The injured were taken to Saginaw Hospitals.

The bus was making a regular run between Detroit and Saginaw and carried approximately 20 passengers.

Unflinching Leadership Marked Churchill's Life

ain's military debacle in the Gallipoli campaign.

As first lord of the Admiralty, Churchill was a key figure in Britain's abortive 1915 attempt to capture the Dardenelles. He left office in disgrace after the calamity; although he was later cleared, his political star seemed to have set.

It was in these years of oblivion that he turned to writing to support his family, and for solace to painting, showing a talent that later gained him considerable acclaim.

A descendant of the first Duke of Marlborough, Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill was born prematurely Nov. 30, 1874, during a ball at Blenheim Castle in Oxfordshire to Lord Randolph Churchill and the former Jennie Jerome, an American socialite from New York.

An indifferent student at Harrow, a traditional public (private) school for the English elite, the young Churchill decided on a military career and entered Sandhurst, Britain's West Point.

As a young officer, he fought on India's northwest border in 1897 and on the Nile in 1898, served as a correspondent in the Boer War of 1899-1900 where he was captured by the Boers and escaped, and later fought again in France in 1915-16.

In a career that stretched from Victorian times to the second Elizabethean era, Churchill served six monarchs and sat in the House of Commons for 64 years. Spurning all offers of a peerage, he called himself a child of the House and once predicted he would remain a member until his death.

He finally retired last year.

Although Churchill led his country to victory in World War II, his Conservative party was turned out of office in July 1945, forcing him to yield his place at the Potsdam conference with President Harry S. Truman and Premier Joseph Stalin to the new Laborite Prime Minister Clement Attlee.

From the sidelines Churchill continued the political attack, accusing the Laborites of liquidating his beloved empire. In October 1951, he and the Conservatives were returned to power.

He originated the expression "Iron Curtain" to describe Stalin's attempt to cleave Europe but he also was the chief postwar proponent of the summit conference.

One of his great disappointments, he said, was his failure to achieve "a lasting peace . . . the last prize I seek to win" before he stepped down as prime minister in 1955.

He continued to represent his constituency in Commons but in later years his appearances became infrequent. On May 1, 1963, he announced he would not seek re-election.

Despite his inadequacies as a student, Churchill became one of the great writers of English prose. In more than 30 books — including his six-volume history of World War II and his "History of the English-Speaking Peoples — he showed his mastery of the language. He won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1953.

Churchill conquered a stammer to become one of the world's great orators.

Throughout his long career, his constant companion was Lady Churchill, the former Clementine Hozier. They married in 1908 "and lived happily ever afterwards," he wrote later.

In addition to his beloved Clemmie, Churchill is survived by a son, Randolph, and two daughters, Sarah, an actress, and Mary (Mrs. Christopher Soames). Two other daughters died.

Randolph's son, Winston Spencer Churchill II, 24, carries on the name. The younger Churchill's wife gave birth to a boy last Friday. He is Sir Winston's third great-grandchild and the first to carry the Churchill name.

President May Attend Funeral Of Churchill

said, there is no discomfort in the throat.

The reason he agreed to enter the hospital at 2:50 a.m. Saturday, he said, was that half of the family was away and he could not object "if they wanted me to come out here where there are a lot of nice, pretty girls to wait on you."

Johnson disputed the theory that his decision not to wear a topcoat Inauguration Day brought on the cold. If the inauguration had anything to do with it, he said, it was because of "a little fatigue."

As a matter of fact, he said, he got too hot because he was wearing "electric underwear." What he meant was thermal underwear — his undies were not actually wired as is an electric blanket.

Mrs. Johnson was at Camp David, the presidential retreat in nearby Maryland, when the President went to the hospital. Now she is also in the same hospital, recovering from a heavy cold, and reported to be running no fever. Reedy said she was "very comfortable."

Meantime Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, on learning that the president was well on the road to recovery, relaxed.

He revealed that when he got a call from the White House around 3 a.m. Saturday saying that the President was being taken to the hospital "I didn't know what to say or do. I just walked around the house for a while."

The President, despite his discomfort at that time, had a secretary relay a message to Humphrey:

"You tell Hubert to carry on and fulfill his duties. We want everyone at work."

Mary Kaye Trio Ends Association

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "It's sad, but that's the way it's got to be," said Norman Kaye as the Mary Kaye Trio gave its last performance after 20 successful years.

"Mary is a great singer. For 20 years, being tied to a trio has been a frustration for her. She has to try it on her own.

"My real estate and insurance business is booming so that show business now is only a hobby for me.

"And Frank (Ross), a great comedian, has to try it on his own, too," said Kaye Saturday.

Mary Kaye, her brother Norman and comic Ross each shed a few tears Saturday as they wound up their final performance in the lounge of the Tropicana Hotel just before dawn.

When they finished, a capacity crowd gave them a standing ovation.

'MARTIANS' THEY YELLED

VERONA, Italy (AP)—Three youths saw strange lights in the hills near here at night. They slipped up close and saw three men flashing a powerful light across a blank white screen.

The youths raced back to town crying the alarm: "Martians!"

Police who investigated said the "Martians" turned out to be three German scientists using the lights to attract rare night-flying butterflies for a collection for German museums.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed. The Law Mortuary has charge.

The Caledonian Club was a jewel in Colorado Springs organization history which can never be replaced. It came to have 100 members. Mr. Ferguson was chief (president) during the last 20 years of its existence. It was founded in 1897 and the last meeting was held Jan. 27, 1947. These meetings were usually held at the Acacia Hotel. The bagpipes were always played and the haggis was always on the menu. Selections from Robert Burns were always recited. The meeting was known as the Robert Burns banquet.

Among members of the Caledonian Club were T. B. Hetherington and Thomas McLaren, architects who designed and supervised the erection of many outstanding Colorado Springs buildings; Willie Campbell, long popular pro at the Patty Jewett Golf Course; Willis Strachan, a leading attorney of Colorado Springs; William Strachan, his father, a prominent sheep ranch owner; George Bryson, well known architect; Charles G. Graham, long cashier of the Exchange National Bank; Albert E. Hayes, well known local newspaper man; the Rev. John Y. Ewart, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church; Peter D. Campbell, extensive local builder; Angus MacKenzie, popular Colorado Springs tailor; J. Arthur Connell, local financier associated with Spencer Penrose; Joseph J. Underwood, Colorado Springs newspaperman and later secretary to A. E. Carlton, of Cripple Creek mining fame.

John I. McClymont, famous Colorado Springs portrait painter; Henry McAllister, pioneer Colorado Springs resident and father of Henry McAllister, leading Denver attorney; Dr. Z. H. McClanahan, local physician; Kenneth MacKenzie, secretary of the Acacia Mining Co.; W. E. McClung, head of the Newton Lumber Co.; James A. Orr, a well known attorney of the city; Dr. G. Y. Wilson, Watt, physician of Gen. William J. Palmer, founder of Colorado Springs; Andrew Dunn, associated with the Penrose interests; T. C. Turnet, prominent attorney; the Rev. Duncan Lamont, Baptist preacher; Duncan Matheson, founder of the town of Matheson; Francis B. Hill, who made a fortune in South Africa, and many others, the portraits of all of whom are in the book which Mr. Ferguson so safely kept. Charles Hamilton, of Colorado Springs, was the last treasurer of the organization.

Nine Passengers Hurt In Train Derailment

GALIEN, Mich. (AP) — The New York Central's crack Twilight Limited was derailed near this southwest Michigan community Sunday night, causing minor injuries to nine passengers among the 150 aboard.

Nine of the train's 11 cars left the track as the limited, one of the Midwest's best-known trains, sped at 80 miles an hour through southwestern Michigan near the Indiana border.

The derailment occurred about 7 p.m., less than two hours out of Chicago.

NYC spokesmen said the cause was not determined but that "some rigging or something" had fallen from the train and was "dragging along."

MAN OVER MACHINE

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—Les Molen is a man who won over the machine.

Molen, an assembler in the large jet engine department of a General Electric plant here, came up with a time-saving suggestion which eliminated four expensive machines.

The machines, called electronic protractors, were used in automated assembly of jet engine rotor vanes. But they were temperamental and often needed repair.

Molen devised a way to replace them with wooden templates, cutting about three hours off engine assembly time.

Molen's victory over automation earned him $1,400 from the company.

Churchill became prime minister of England May 10, 1940.

Churchill Will Be Buried In Old Village Churchyard

of the kind accorded in 1805 to Admiral Lord Nelson, hero of Britain's naval victories over the French.

Determined that everything should go without a hitch, he toured the route the cortlege will take. The route is a study in stone of Churchill's life.

From the house where he spent his last years in London, the coffin will go on Wednesday to Westminster Hall, the ancient seat of England's freedoms, adjoining the House of Commons which was his stage.

There it will lie in state for three days. Then through Whitehall, the seat of government, and past his old residence as prime minister, at No. 10 Downing Street.

At the head of Whitehall stands the Admiralty, always Churchill's favorite government office, and Trafalgar Square with its soaring statue of Nelson.

On down the Strand, with memories here of Churchillian nights out at the Savoy Grill and the now vanished Romano's, favorite haunt of Edwardian London.

Then into Fleet Street, London's newspaper row to which Churchill turned for a platform and for income in his youth and again in the years of political eclipse after World War I.

Finally to St. Paul's, Sir Christopher Wren's domed masterpiece where Britain traditionally takes leave of its heroes.

From St. Paul's the cortege will travel to the Thames. In the shadow of the tower Churchill's coffin will be put aboard a barge to travel up river to a pier near Waterloo Station.

Here the public ceremonial ends. The family will join the coffin on a private train and Churchill will be buried near his parents in a village churchyard in the heart of England.

Parliament was called together this afternoon to hear political leaders' tributes to Churchill and give formal approval of Queen Elizabeth's request that the funeral be made a state occasion.

This approval is automatic. It is technically necessary since the funeral will involve some governmental expense.

The end was anonunced in a terse bulletin signed by his physician and lifelong friend, Lord Moran. At his bedside were Lady Churchill, his son, and his two daughters.

The queen, among the first to be informed of his death, immediately sent Lady Churchill this message:

"The news of Sir Winston's death caused inexpressible grief to me and my husband. We send our deepest sympathy to you and your family.

"The whole world is the poorer by the loss of his many-sided genius, while the survival of this country and the sister nations of the Commonwealth in the face of the greatest danger that has ever threatened them will be a perpetual memorial to his leadership, his vision, and his indomitable courage."

The funeral is expected to bring together the largest concourse of statesmen since that of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

Diplomats said President Charles de Gaulle has unofficially let it be known that he expects to come. They said the Soviet representative is likely to be President Anastas Mikoyan, whom Churchill knew well, or the new premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

It will be the first state funeral for a British commoner since that of Prime Minister William E. Gladstone 67 years ago. The service will be conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England.

Burial will be in the small country churchyard in Bladon, 70 miles northwest of London. It is on the great Blenheim estate, home of the dukes of Marlborough, where Churchill was born. Churchill, was a son of the seventh duke.

Girl Reports Theft Of Motorcycle Helmet

Sharon Webb, 1928 W. Cheyenne Blvd., reported to the sheriff's department Sunday that her white motorcycle helmet worth $50 and a pair of gloves had been stolen from her motorcycle.

Deputy Sheriff Jim Lewis said Miss Webb was watching the races between 21st and 26th Streets at the time and that she left the helmet and gloves on her motorcycle.

Carson Man Jailed On Wife's Charge

A Ft. Carson man, Melvin Trahan, 30, who allegedly kicked his wife, Velma Elois Trahan in the stomach and hit her in the face, was booked into county jail Saturday night following a signed complaint, the sheriff's office reported.

Deputy Sheriff Charles White said the incident happened at the couple's home, 1200 S. El Paso St., and that the complaint accusing Trahan of assault and battery was signed by his wife.

TAX REPEAL

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The Colombian government has agreed to repeal the new sales tax, and labor leaders have canceled a general strike scheduled for today.

After three days of almost continuous negotiations, the government agreed Saturday night to make other economic adjustments as well as repeal the tax.

Tshombe Warned Assassination To Be Attempted

security chief, has informed U.S. intelligence-military advisers in the Congo that his men are able to round up only about half of these infiltrators, leaving a deadly assassin squadron still at large.

DANGER FROM THE REAR

If Tshombe can escape assassination, the ebullient Congo leader still runs the grave and imminent risk of being undercut by the same officials — Secretary Rusk and Undersecretary Averell Harriman — whose policies led to the oustar and death of South Viet Nam's President Diem.

Although the U.S. is giving Tshombe "limited" military and economic aid, a State Department group headed by Rusk and Harriman has privately been pressuring Tshombe to deal with the Congolese rebels and widen his government to include them.

So far, Tshombe has balked at this, replying that if he followed the Rusk-Harriman recommedations, he would be contributing to his own assassination.

As a counter move, Tshombe has sent word to President Johnson through Senator Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., a trusted friend, urging him to drop U.S. support of the Organization of African Unity, which is openly aiding the rebel group in the Congo.

According to Tshombe's message, three members of the OAU — Kenya's President Jomo Kenyatta, Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere and Uganda's Prime Minister Milton Obote — are helping rebel "President" Christophe Gbeney plan a new military offensive against Congo government forces.

President Johnson, who must decide soon whether to step up aid to Tshombe or see the situation deteriorate, turned over Tshombe's message and Dodd's accompanying letter to McGeorge Bundy, chief White House foreign policy adviser. In turn, Bundy sent the pleas to Secretary Rusk, where they have been shelved.

It now appears that only direct action by President Johnson or new pressure by Tshombe's friends in Congress can save the Congo leader from the same fate as the late President Diem.

If Tshombe falls, U. S. military intelligence experts foresee a far worse mess confronting the U.S. in the Congo than in South Viet Nam.

said he would take her home if she took her slacks off. She complied and laid the slacks on the seat. The girl told the officer that he drove around for approximately 15 minutes and then told her to take her panties off. After she did so he made an indecent attack on her which she resisted.

Finally he allowed her to dress and took her home and then drove off. The girl reported the incident to her mother and was then admitted to Penrose Hospital for observation.

Middle East Area May Be Close to War Once Again

from the Israeli border.

The Lebanese government was authorized to permit the entry of Arab soldiers if needed to help defend the country from Israeli attack.

Israel has warned that it will fight to prevent the diversion schemes.

Privately Israeli officials are worried over the latest Arab moves. Publicly they appear optimistic.

Prime Minister Levi Eshkol told a foreign correspondents' luncheon recently that a military showdown depended on how the Arabs tried to implement the diversion plans. Asked if he thought they would try, he replied: "I believe they will not."

Israelis also believe there will be no concerted Arab military drive until President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic withdraws his soldiers from Yemen.

Nasser has committed soldiers, tanks and planes to showing up the republican regime in Yemen, which is opposed by royalist followers of deposed Imam Mohammed Al Badr.

LBJ's Budget Approaches Mark of $100 Billion

original Defense Department budget for this year was $51.2 billion, but Secretary Robert S. McNamara has whittled about $1 billion from it.

As Johnson prepared to send his budget to Congress, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., called for an end to federal deficits.

By July 1, he said, the federal government "will have operated in the red for 30 of 36 years." He predicted that the national debt, now $318 billion, "will go higher."

Byrd, who heads the Senate Finance Committee, criticized the system under which the budget is divided into a dozen or more separate bills, many of which permit spending over several years.

"Congress does not know whether it is authorizing a deficit, balancing the budget, or developing a surplus," Byrd's statement said.

He proposed that all spending authority be placed in a single package and then limited by the estimates of federal income or revenue during that same period.

27 Cardinals Are Named By Pope Paul

on March 19, 1962, when Pope John XXIII elevated 10 men to the sacred college and brought its membership to 87, the largest in history.

Since then 11 cardinals have died.

The elevation of Archbishop Shehan gives the United States six members of the College of Cardinals. Baltimore is the oldest Roman Catholic Diocese in the United States.

The other American members are Francis Spellman of New York, James F. McIntyre of Los Angeles, Richard J. Cushing of Boston, Albert G. Meyer of Chicago and Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis.

Pope Paul's nominations reflected two aspects of his reign — interest toward Catholics who live among the Orthodox of the East, and concern toward Roman Catholics in Communist lands.

His nomination of the three patriarchs was clearly a move to honor the Catholics of the East. The patriarchs had complained during sessions of the Vatican Ecumenical Council that they do not always receive the esteemed due them.

The choice of Archbishop Beran was a challenge to the Communist rulers of Czechoslovakia. The archbishop was confined by the Communists from 1949 until October 1963, when he was allowed to enter a monastery. But he was not allowed to resume his duties as Archbishop of Prague, and the Vatican yearbook continues to list him as impeded.

Archbishop Slipyi spent 18 years in confinement in Siberia and then was allowed to come to Rome two years ago.

Pope Paul became pontiff June 21, 1963. The Vatican paper L'Osservatore Romano said today that he had delayed calling his first consistory to avoid conflict with his heavy duties in connection with the Ecumenical Council.

Overtime Stitching Put in on Shoes

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — When do two feet equal four feet?

Francisco Sandoval Rios will say his feet and look around for someone to repair his two-foot long shoes "for the largest feet in the world."

Sandoval Rios, a carnival side -show attraction, walked into the shop of a harnessmaker with flapping soles and complained no cobbler would touch his shoes.

Bill Johnson, who runs a Miami shoe shop glanced at the shoes, measuring one foot wide, and remarked: "You could put an elephant's foot in easy."

He stitched overtime Sunday to fix them.

BONE PICKERS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Dr. Thomas H. Gouchnour, a general surgeon, picks bones for relaxation. After he finishes his hospital rounds in the evening, he joins his son, Jim, 16, at home in scraping the rib bone of a mastodon or cleaning the teeth of a 500,000-year-old animal. He and his son have acquired many of the fossils while scuba diving. Included in their collection are a giant beaver tooth, parts of mammoths, mastodons, an extinct animal similar to a South American llama, deer, horses, tapir, giant sloths and Indian relics from ancient tribes.

Anti - Government Riots Spread In Viet Nam

formation Service building in Hue was wrecked during a demonstration Saturday.

Student agitators demanded that businesses refuse to serve Americans. Banners reading "Taylor go home" and "Kick out Taylor" flew in Hue in protest against U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor's support of Premier Tran Van Huong's government.

A general strike closed business in Da Nang and commercial airline flights to the city were canceled.

Taylor and Deputy Ambassador Alexis U. Johnson met in emergency session Sunday with Premier Huong, who later conferred with Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, chief of the armed forces, and other leaders.

There were fears that continuing civil strife might lead to a restoration of military rule. Informants said, however, that the military had decided to go along with the government for the time being after an urgent meeting Sunday.

Five Buddhist monks entered the sixth day of a hunger strike they vow will last until death unless Huong quits.

The Buddhists claim the Huong government discriminates against them and that the United States continues to support Huong because of Taylor's influence.

Two U.S. soldiers were dead and two others missing after they had gone fishing in a cove near the coastal city of Qui Nhon, 270 miles northeast of Saigon. Apparently the four were victims of a Communist ambush.

The Defense Department in Washington said the dead were Sgt. 1.C. James T.H. Cordova of Glen Burnie, Md., and Spec. 4 Roger L. Buss of Cottage Grove, Wis. Their deaths brought to 254 the number of Americans killed as a result of enemy action since December 1961.

The missing men were Spec. 4 William E. Swaykos, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swaykos of Bloomfield, N.J., and Sgt. 1.C. Harold E. Strong Jr. of Alexandria, Va.

World Fairs Are Gone, Walt Disney Declares

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Fairs today are passe. People have too many other things to do," says Walt Disney, whose touch contribtued to the success of four exhibits at the New York World's Fair.

Promoters have proposed a world's fair in the Los Angeles area in 1968-69.

Money to build a fair can best be used for more worthwhile purposes, Disney told the Los Angeles Times.

"This area already is a world's fair," said Disney, whose Disneyland in Anaheim near Los Angeles is one of the nation's most popular tourist attractions. "We've already got things that are attracting people."

Driver Killed, 15 Injured in Crash of Bus

BRIDGEPORT, Mich. (AP) — A Greyhound bus slammed into an overturned fuel oil tanker on a snow-slick road today, killing the bus driver and injuring 15 passengers, some critically.

The crash occurred near an entrance ramp leading onto Interstate 75 near this small southeast Lower Michigan community.

The driver was identified as William A. Deview, 51, of Bay City, Mich.

State police said the truck driver, Ronald J. Nickel, 24, of Holley, told them he was preparing to turn from the Dixie Highway onto the ramp when the double tandem tanker went out of control and overturned, spreading 16,000 gallons of fuel oil across the road.

Police said Nichel told them he was unsuccessful in an attempt to flag down the approaching bus.

Nickel, who was uninjured, told police he put out a small fire which started after the collision, officers said.

Seven ambulances were dispatched from Saginaw, 10 miles north of the crash scene. The injured were taken to Saginaw hospitals.

The bus was making a regular run between Detroit and Saginaw and carried approximately 30 passengers.

Unflinching Leadership Marked Churchill's Life

ain's military debacle in the Gallipoli campaign.

As first lord of the Admiralty, Churchill was a key figure in Britain's abortive 1915 attempt to capture the Dardenelles. He left office in disgrace after the calamity; although he was later cleared, his political star seemed to have set.

It was in these years of oblivion that he turned to writing to support his family, and for solace to painting, showing a talent that later gained him considerable acclaim.

A descendant of the first Duke of Marlborough, Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill was born prematurely Nov. 30, 1874, during a ball at Blenheim Castle in Oxfordshire to Lord Randolph Churchill and the former Jennie Jerome, an American socialite from New York.

An indifferent student at Harrow, a traditional public (private) school for the English elite, the young Churchill decided on a military career and entered Sandhurst, Britain's West Point.

As a young officer, he fought on India's northwest border in 1897 and on the Nile in 1898, served as a correspondent in the Boer War of 1899-1900 where he was captured by the Boers and escaped, and later fought again in France in 1915-16.

In a career that stretched from Victorian times to the second Elizabethean era, Churchill served six monarchs and sat in the House of Commons for 64 years. Spurning all offers of a peerage, he called himself a child of the House and once predicted he would remain a member until his death.

He finally retired last year.

Although Churchill led his country to victory in World War II, his Conservative party was turned out of office in July 1945, forcing him to yield his place at the Potsdam conference with President Harry S. Truman and Premier Joseph Stalin to the new Laborite Prime Minister Clement Attlee.

From the sidelines Churchill continued the political attack, accusing the Laborites of liquidating his beloved empire. In October 1951, he and the Conservatives were returned to power.

He originated the expression "Iron Curtain" to describe Stalin's attempt to cleave Europe but he also was the chief postwar proponent of the summit conference.

One of his great disappointments, he said, was his failure to achieve "a lasting peace . . . the last prize I seek to win" before he stepped down as prime minister in 1955.

He continued to represent his constituency in Commons but in later years his appearances became infrequent. On May 1, 1963, he announced he would not seek re-election.

Despite his inadequacies as a student, Churchill became one of the great writers of English prose. In more than 30 books — including his six-volume history of World War II and his "History of the English-Speaking Peoples — he showed his mastery of the language. He won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1953.

Churchill conquered a stammer to become one of the world's great orators.

Throughout his long career, his constant companion was Lady Churchill, the former Clementine Hozier. They married in 1908 "and lived happily ever afterwards," he wrote later.

In addition to his beloved Clemmie, Churchill is survived by a son, Randolph, and two daughters, Sarah, an actress, and Mary (Mrs. Christopher Soames). Two other daughters died.

Randolph's son, Winston Spencer Churchill II, 24, carries on the name. The younger Churchill's wife gave birth to a boy last Friday. He is Sir Winston's third great-grandchild and the first to carry the Churchill name.

President May Attend Funeral Of Churchill

said, there is no discomfort in the throat.

The reason he agreed to enter the hospital at 2:50 a.m. Saturday, he said, was that half of the family was away and he could not object "if they wanted me to come out here where there are a lot of nice, pretty girls to wait on you."

Johnson disputed the theory that his decision not to wear a topcoat Inauguration Day brought on the cold. If the inauguration had anything to do with it, he said, it was because of "a little fatigue."

As a matter of fact, he said, he got too hot because he was wearing "electric underwear." What he meant was thermal underwear — his undies were not actually wired as is an electric blanket.

Mrs. Johnson was at Camp David, the presidential retreat in nearby Maryland, when the President went to the hospital. Now she is also in the same hospital, recovering from a heavy cold, and reported to be running no fever. Reedy said she was "very comfortable."

Meantime Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, on learning that the president was well on the road to recovery, relaxed.

He revealed that when he got a call from the White House around 3 a.m. Saturday saying that the President was being taken to the hospital "I didn't know what to say or do. I just walked around the house for a while."

The President, despite his discomfort at that time, had a secretary relay a message to Humphrey:

"You tell Hubert to carry on and fulfill his duties. We want everyone at work."

Mary Kaye Trio Ends Association

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "It's sad, but that's the way it's got to be," said Norman Kaye as the Mary Kaye Trio gave its last performance after 20 successful years.

"Mary is a great singer. For 20 years, being tied to a trio has been a frustration for her. She has to try it on her own.

"My real estate and insurance business is booming so that show business now is only a hobby for me.

"And Frank (Ross), a great comedian, has to try it on his own, too," said Kaye Saturday.

Mary Kaye, her brother Norman and comic Ross each shed a few tears Saturday as they wound up their final performance in the lounge of the Tropicana Hotel just before dawn.

When they finished, a capacity crowd gave them a standing ovation.

'MARTIANS' THEY YELLED

VERONA, Italy (AP)—Three youths saw strange lights in the hills near here at night. They slipped up close and saw three men flashing a powerful light across a blank white screen.

The youths raced back to town crying the alarm: "Martians!"

Police who investigated said the "Martians" turned out to be three German scientists using the lights to attract rare night-flying butterflies for a collection for German museums.

John Ferguson Noted Springs Pioneer, Dies

vived by a son, John Allen Ferguson, of Englewood, Colo.; two daughters, Mrs. Helen Jensen, of Lansing, Mich.; and Mrs. Marjorie Lanbert, Santa Fe, N.M., seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed. The Law Mortuary has charge.

The Caledonian Club was a jewel in Colorado Springs organization history which can never be replaced. It came to have 100 members. Mr. Ferguson was chief (president) during the last 20 years of its existence. It was founded in 1897 and the last meeting was held Jan. 27, 1947. These meetings were usually held at the Acacia Hotel. The bagpipes were always played and the haggis was always on the menu. Selections from Robert Burns were always recited. The meeting was known as the Robert Burns banquet.

Among members of the Caledonian Club were T. B. Hetherington and Thomas McLaren, architects who designed and supervised the erection of many outstanding Colorado Springs buildings; Willie Campbell, long popular pro at the Patty Jewett Golf Course; Willis Strachan, a leading attorney of Colorado Springs; William Strachan, his father, a prominent sheep ranch owner; George Bryson, well known architect; Charles G. Graham, long cashier of the Exchange National Bank; Albert E. Hayes, well known local newspaper man; the Rev. John Y. Ewart, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church; Peter D. Campbell, extensive local builder; Angus MacKenzie, popular Colorado Springs tailor; J. Arthur Connell, local financier associated with Spencer Penrose; Joseph J. Underwood, Colorado Springs newspaperman and later secretary to A. E. Carlton, of Cripple Creek mining fame.

John I. McClymont, famous Colorado Springs portrait painter; Henry McAllister, pioneer Colorado Springs resident and father of Henry McAllister, leading Denver attorney; Dr. Z. H. McClanahan, local physician; Kenneth MacKenzie, secretary of the Acacia Mining Co.; W. E. McClung, head of the Newton Lumber Co.; James A. Orr, a well known attorney of the city; Dr. G. Y. Wilson, Watt, physician of Gen. William J. Palmer, founder of Colorado Springs; Andrew Dunn, associated with the Penrose interests; T. C. Turnet, prominent attorney; the Rev. Duncan Lamont, Baptist preacher; Duncan Matheson, founder of the town of Matheson; Francis B. Hill, who made a fortune in South Africa, and many others, the portraits of all of whom are in the book which Mr. Ferguson so safely kept. Charles Hamilton, of Colorado Springs, was the last treasurer of the organization.

Nine Passengers Hurt In Train Derailment

GALIEN, Mich. (AP) — The New York Central's crack Twilight Limited was derailed near this southwest Michigan community Sunday night, causing minor injuries to nine passengers among the 150 aboard.

Nine of the train's 11 cars left the track as the limited, one of the Midwest's best-known trains, sped at 80 miles an hour through southwestern Michigan near the Indiana border.

The derailment occurred about 7 p.m., less than two hours out of Chicago.

NYC spokesmen said the cause was not determined but that "some rigging or something" had fallen from the train and was "dragging along."

MAN OVER MACHINE

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—Les Molen is a man who won over the machine.

Molen, an assembler in the large jet engine department of a General Electric plant here, came up with a time-saving suggestion which eliminated four expensive machines.

The machines, called electronic protractors, were used in automated assembly of jet engine rotor vanes. But they were temperamental and often needed repair.

Molen devised a way to replace them with wooden templates, cutting about three hours off engine assembly time.

Molen's victory over automation earned him $2,000 from the company.

Churchill became prime minister of England May 10, 1940.

Churchill Will Be Buried In Old Village Churchyard

of the kind accorded in 1805 to Admiral Lord Nelson, hero of Britain's naval victories over the French.

Determined that everything should go without a hitch, he toured the route the cortlege will take. The route is a study in stone of Churchill's life.

From the house where he spent his last years in London, the coffin will go on Wednesday to Westminster Hall, the ancient seat of England's freedoms, adjoining the House of Commons which was his stage.

There it will lie in state for three days. Then through Whitehall, the seat of government, and past his old residence as prime minister, at No. 10 Downing Street.

At the head of Whitehall stands the Admiralty, always Churchill's favorite government office, and Trafalgar Square with its soaring statue of Nelson.

On down the Strand, with memories here of Churchillian nights out at the Savoy Grill and the now vanished Romano's, favorite haunt of Edwardian London.

Then into Fleet Street, London's newspaper row to which Churchill turned for a platform and for income in his youth and again in the years of political eclipse after World War I.

Finally to St. Paul's, Sir Christopher Wren's domed masterpiece where Britain traditionally takes leave of its heroes.

From St. Paul's the cortege will travel to the Thames. In the shadow of the tower Churchill's coffin will be put aboard a barge to travel up river to a pier near Waterloo Station.

Here the public ceremonial ends. The family will join the coffin on a private train and Churchill will be buried near his parents in a village churchyard in the heart of England.

Parliament was called together this afternoon to hear political leaders' tributes to Churchill and give formal approval of Queen Elizabeth's request that the funeral be made a state occasion.

This approval is automatic. It is technically necessary since the funeral will involve some governmental expense.

The end was anounced in a terse bulletin signed by his physician and lifelong friend, Lord Moran. At his bedside were Lady Churchill, his son, and his two daughters.

The queen, among the first to be informed of his death, immediately sent Lady Churchill this message:

"The news of Sir Winston's death caused inexpressible grief to me and my husband. We send our deepest sympathy to you and your family.

"The whole world is the poorer by the loss of his many-sided genius, while the survival of this country and the sister nations of the Commonwealth in the face of the greatest danger that has ever threatened them will be a perpetual memorial to his leadership, his vision, and his indomitable courage."

The funeral is expected to bring together the largest concourse of statesmen since that of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

Diplomats said President Charles de Gaulle has unofficially let it be known that he expects to come. They said the Soviet representative is likely to be President Anastas Mikoyan, whom Churchill knew well, or the new premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

It will be the first state funeral for a British commoner since that of Prime Minister William E. Gladstone 67 years ago. The service will be conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England.

Burial will be in the small country churchyard in Bladon, 70 miles northwest of London. It is on the great Blenheim estate, home of the dukes of Marlborough, where Churchill was born. Churchill, was a son of the seventh duke.

Girl Reports Theft Of Motorcycle Helmet

Sharon Webb, 1930 W. Cheyenne Blvd., reported to the sheriff's department Sunday that her white motorcycle helmet worth $50 and a pair of gloves had been stolen from her motorcycle.

Deputy Sheriff Jim Lewis said Miss Webb was watching the races between 21st and 26th Streets at the time and that she left the helmet and gloves on her motorcycle.

Carson Man Jailed On Wife's Charge

A Ft. Carson man, Melvin Trahan, 30, who allegedly kicked his wife, Velma Elois Trahan in the stomach and hit her in the face, was booked into county jail Saturday night following a signed complaint, the sheriff's office reported.

Deputy Sheriff Charles White said the incident happened at the couple's home, 1200 S. El Paso St., and that the complaint accusing Trahan of assault and battery was signed by his wife.

Many Honorary Awards Given To Churchill

By The Associated Press

On a visit to the United States in 1943, Churchill was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws by Harvard University, with this citation:

"Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill—an historian who has written a glorious page of British history; a statesman and warrior whose tenacity and courage turned back the tide of tyranny in freedom's darkest hour."

During a 1946 vacation trip he received honorary degrees from the University of Miami, in Florida, Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., and Columbia University, New York; addressed the Virginia legislature and was awarded New York City's gold medal and distinguished service certificate.

In 1949 Massachusetts Institute of Technology conferred on the British statesman a rare honor—that of honorary lecturer. He was cited as "the Twentieth Century symbol of resistance to oppression."

Hailing Churchill's 70th birthday in 1944, Senator Tom Connally of Texas, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, said that "in the face of a bayonet aimed at Great Britain's breast with missiles of death falling about him, Churchill rallied the British people with a ringing chalenge in defense of her homes and soil and defied the cruel and savage invader." The senator added:

"He did more than rally the British people. He thrilled the English-speaking world and the people of the United Nations. With rare vision and stout heart he looked beyond the clouds and bravely faced the storm... He will take his place among the gallant and great historic characters of Britain."

'Mole' Digging Big Tunnel in Rockies

DENVER (AP)—A 90-ton machine aptly called a "mole" is chewing a 13-foot hole beneath the Continental Divide of the southern Rockies.

The machine is being used to drill the Azotea Tunnel, 12.7 miles long, which will be a feature of the U.S. Reclamation Bureau's San Juan-Chama Project.

It will carry water from the upper tributaries of the San Juan River in the Colorado River Basin to Azotea Creek in northern New Mexico.

Barney Bellport, chief engineer of the bureau, says the "mole" digs at a maximum rate of eight feet per hour, although it may slow its pace in some rockier formations.

The business end of the 35-foot-long machine has 25 cutter wheels. It was built by the James S. Robbins Co. of Seattle.

The $13.7 million contract for the tunnel is held by Gibbons & Reed Co., Boyles Bros. Drilling Co. and Dugan Graham Co. Inc., all of Salt Lake City.

Bellport said the tunnel project and allied phases should be completed by January, 1970.

Detective Just Can't Find His Prisoner

HENRYETTA, Okla. (AP) — Tulsa police decided to try to find some stolen merchandise by sending a prisoner into an abandoned coal mine — they wish they hadn't.

The episode in this coal mining region of eastern Oklahoma ended Sunday in an escape attempt by the prisoner, a lost miner and a detective vowing never again. No loot was found.

Detective Wayburn Cotton began to worry when Jackie Madewell, a prisoner who had said he could find loot from burglaries at Tulsa and Henryetta, failed to come out of the mine. Cotton sent retired miner Johnny Miller into the mine to find him.

Believing the officers had gone, Madewell finally emerged. But Miller didn't. The miner was located safe but lost at 3 a.m. Sunday after being in the mine 9½ hours.

Cotton said he won't take part in any more treasure hunts.

The 1960 census disclosed that 69.3 per cent of the people living in Nevada were born in another state. Alaska ranked second with 63.8 per cent of its residents born elsewhere.

Goren on Bridge

By CHARLES H. GOREN

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold: Spades, K-8-7-5-3-2; Hearts, 6-3; Clubs, K-J-9-7-4.

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 Dia.	Pass	1 Spd.	Pass
2 Spds.	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Four spades. Now that spades have been raised your hand has become worth 14 points (counting one for the fifth spade and two for the sixth) No further pressure should be placed on partner.

Q .2—As South you hold: Spades, A-K-10-3; Hearts, 5; Diamonds, A-J-10-9-4; Clubs, A-8-6.

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 Dia.	Pass	1 N.T.	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. This hand is technically a shade short of the requirements for a reverse which normally shows 19 points, but all your points are of "top drawer" quality and you have very good intermediate cards. Furthermore, there is no satisfactory alternative rebid.

Q. 3—As South you hold: Spades, A-2; Hearts, K-Q-3-2; Diamonds, J-10-7; Clubs, K-10-3-2.

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 Spd.	Pass	Pass	2 Dia.
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. Any stronger bid would be highly indiscreet. Partner has merely reopened the bidding and his action may have been dictated by a reluctance to permit the opposition to buy the contract at such a bargain price If he does hold sound values your call will induce him to bid further.

. 4—As South you hold: Spades, J; Hearts, A-K-Q-10-9; Diamonds, A-J-8-7-6-5-2.

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 Dia.	Pass	1 N.T.	Pass
3 Hrts.	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—The normal procedure at this point would be to rebid the hearts thus showing five hearts and at least six diamonds. However, we feel that a rebid of four diamonds may produce better results on this particular hand for, if partner is able to raise to five, we can bid a slam with a reasonable assurance of making it A rebid of four hearts may induce partner to pass with some mediocre hand containing fair diamond support.

. 5—As South you hold: Spades, K-10-5; Hearts, 6-3; Diamonds, A-5-4-3-2; Clubs, J-10-2.

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 Hrt.	Dbl.	?

What do you bid?

A.—One no trump. On hands of this type, it is advisable to get into the bidding while it is convenient to show partner that you are in possession of moderate values. This may enable him to continue the fight if the opposition offers further competition.

. 6—The opponents have a 40-part score, and as South you hold: Spades, K-2; Hearts, A-10-2; Diamonds, A-Q-4-3-2; Clubs, 10-6-5.

You're right hand opponent opens with one spade.

What do you bid?

A.—Double. This department does not normally indorse a take-out double of one spade on such meager values, since you are forcing partner to show his suit at the two level. However, considerations of score dictate a strategic bid at this point. While there is a definite risk in doubling, if you pass and West raises to two spades, you will then be faced with the dilemma of either permitting the opponents to get vulnerable very cheaply or of forcing partner to bid at the three level.

. 7—As South you hold: Spades, J-10-7-6-3; Hearts, Q-10-7-5-4; Diamonds, 6; Clubs, K-8.

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 Dia.	3 N.T.	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A.—Pass. Don't be a nursemaid. Partner's overcall puts him strictly on his own. Had he been interested in hearing about the majors, he would have doubled.

Q. 8—As South you hold: Hearts, K-7-3; Diamonds, A-J-10-6-4; Clubs, A-9-8-6-5.

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 Dia.	Pass	1 Spd.	Pass
2 Clbs.	Pass	3 Spds.	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. While this call is somewhat awkward with a void in partner's suit, no other bid will quite serve the purpose. An 11 trick contract should not be suggested with this minimum opening and a pass, of course, is out of the question since partner's bid is forcing.

H. L. Hunt Writes

One of the most vitally important duties of the President of the United States is appointing good men to fill high and sensitive official posts.

In an age of big government, cabinet secretaries and top administrators in Washington wield enormous power. Obviously the men who hold these offices will play a major part in deciding the future of our country and all who live in it.

The foremost prerequisite for every man being considered for appointment to high federal office should be absolute, unquestioned loyalty to the United States, even in the eyes of his critics.

No pressures, however strong or from whatever source; no bonds of friendship, however deep and sincere; no calls of ambition, however siren-like, should bring about the slightest bending of this high standard. For when it begins to bend, it will soon break; and when it is broken for one high office, it will soon be broken for others.

Good Americans should remember, as they watch Presidential appointments being made, that the Constitutional requirement for confirmation of these appointments by the Senate is no longer a dependable safeguard. Most appointments are approved "automatically" once the President makes them. Only in the rarest cases are they ever challenged.

The checking must be done, and the high standard of loyalty applied before the appointment is made, when the candidates are being considered.

Surely no one can object to giving loyalty to country first place as a requirement in selecting public servants.

Bishop Resigns

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Leslie Brown, Anglican Archbishop of Uganda, announced he is resigning effective Nov. 30, because he believes the Uganda church can best be led by an African. Dr. Brown, 52, is the last remaining non-African bishop in Uganda, an East African federation where Britain formerly ruled as protector.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Powerfully Suspicious!

DEAR ABY: A good friend of mine came to me with a problem, and not knowing how to advise her, I am writing to you. Her gentleman friend gave her a fur jacket for Christmas. It smelled awful and one of the hooks was missing. The lining looked frayed around the collar, and worse yet, it was several sizes too large for her. She asked him where he got it so she could exchange it for one her size, but he wouldn't tell her. He keeps asking her when she is going to wear it. She thinks the world of this fellow and hates to hurt his feelings, but she says she just couldn't wear that jacket anywhere. What should she do? —A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: She should tell him that she appreciates his thoughtfulness, but she isn't able to wear the jacket because it is much too large for her. And if she really "thinks the world of him," she might confide that if he paid for a new jacket, he got skunked.

DEAR ABBY: Whut do you think of a mediocre piano player who fancies himself as an accomplished musician and, while a guest in someone's home, would strike a few chords and exclaim (in a voice fortissimo), "OH, FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, WHEN WAS THIS PIANO TUNED LAST?" —A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: I would say he had a good ear and bad manners. P. S. Someone should tell the host (in a voice pianissimo) to get the piano tuned.

DEAR ABBY: I am an ex-service woman. after World War II I took my dishcarge in the Philippines and accepted a civil service job in Japan. At that time my sister called me a "vagabond" and urged me to come home. I didn't, and I loved Japan. A few years later I wrote and told her I was taking a foreign job with the Navy in Guam. She replied, "What do you want to go to a place like THAT for?" I went and I had a ball.

Last year, when I accepted a job in Alaska, I phoned my sister long distance and she yelled so loudly I had to hold the receiver a foot away from my ear.

This year I am faced with having to tell my sister I have another job offer in Hong Kong. I need the money and crave the adventure. My sister is getting on in years and I don't want to upset her. Please advise. —GLOBE-TROTTER

DEAR GLOBE-TROTTER: So far you've done an excellent job of leading an exciting and independent life. I don't know what you owe your sister, but you owe yourself more. Do what you want to do. And don't feel guilty.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Disappointed Father In Kentfield": Don't be too hard on the boy. You can be grateful for one thing—with those grades you know he hasn't been cheating.

Carlo Ponti Becomes Citizen of France

PARIS (AP) — Italian movie producer Carlo Ponti has become a French citizen, it was officially confirmed today in Paris.

Ponti's name was included in a naturalization decree which appeared in the official Government Journal.

It was reported earlier this month that French authorities had granted Ponti citizenship after he had satisfied a five-year residence requirement in France.

French citizenship for Ponti may ease a dilemma created by his 1957 marriage to Italian film star Sophia Loren. He was married by proxy to Miss Loren in Mexico, but the marriage was never officially recognized as valid by Italy. Ponti and his first wife were divorced, and divorce is not recognized in Italy.

Children of Churchill Have Tragedy

By The Associated Press

Randolph Churchill, who followed his father's example and went in for politics and writing, was married twice. Both marriages ended in divorce. His first wife was Pamela Digby. His second was June Osborne.

Diana Churchill married John M. Bailey, son of a South African capitalist. The marriage ended in divorce as did her second marriage to Duncan Sandys, who served in Parliament and later held cabinet posts. She died Oct. 20, 1963. A coroner ruled that she commited suicide by taking an overdose of sleeping pills.

Sarah Churchill went on the stage as a chorus girl in 1935 and the following year married Vic Oliver, an American comedian. That marriage ended in divorce in 1945. Four years later she married Anthony Beauchamp, a British society photographer. He died in 1957. Her third husband was Baron Audley, a designer and holder of one of Britain's most ancient titles. He died in July 1963.

Another daughter, Mary, accompanied Churchill on one of his trips to Canada and the United States in 1943. She was married in 1947 to Capt. Christopher Soames of the Coldstream Guards.

The other child, Marigold Frances, who was born four days after the armistice of World War I, died in 1921.

Hungry Elks Bring Problems

CREEDE, Colo. (AP)— State game and fish representatives will meet with Creede residents Monday to discuss the possibility of a controlled feeding program for the elk driven by snow from their usual winter areas.

Any plan for such feeding under state supervision would have to be approved by the Colorado Game, Fish and Parks Commission.

Gene McClure, chairman of a citizens committee at Creede, estimated townspeople have hauled 10 tons of hay to areas near town for elk to eat.

Many experienced game management officials contend such a feeding program won't work with elk and deer, and that it often causes death to animals through overfeeding.

At least nine elk have been found dead in canyons near Creede. A Game, Fish and Parks Department pathologist planned to come here Monday to see if the cause of death could be determined.

Elk also have wandered into Durango and other southwestern communities this winter.

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (AP) — Triplets born recently near Wabag, in the Western Highlands of New Guinea, have been named by numbers. The parents named the three boys Namba Wan, Namba Tu and Namba Tri—pidgin English for No. 1, 2 and 3.

Many Honorary Awards Given To Churchill

By The Associated Press

On a visit to the United States in 1943, Churchill was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws by Harvard University, with this citation:

"Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill—an historian who has written a glorious page of British history; a statesman and warrior whose tenacity and courage turned back the tide of tyranny in freedom's darkest hour."

During a 1946 vacation trip he received honorary degrees from the University of Miami, in Florida, Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., and Columbia University, New York; addressed the Virginia legislature and was awarded New York City's gold medal and distinguished service certificate.

In 1949 Massachusetts Institute of Technology conferred on the British statesman a rare honor—that of honorary lecturer. He was cited as "the Twentieth Century symbol of resistance to oppression."

Hailing Churchill's 70th birthday in 1944, Senator Tom Connally of Texas, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, said that "in the face of a bayonet aimed at Great Britain's breast with missiles of death falling about him, Churchill rallied the British people with a ringing chalenge in defense of her homes and soil and defied the cruel and savage invader." The senator added:

"He did more than rally the British people. He thrilled the English-speaking world and the people of the United Nations. With rare vision and stout heart he looked beyond the clouds and bravely faced the storm. . . He will take his place among the gallant and great historic characters of Britain."

'Mole' Digging Big Tunnel in Rockies

DENVER (AP)—A 90-ton machine aptly called a "mole" is chewing a 13-foot hole beneath the Continental Divide of the southern Rockies.

The machine is being used to drill the Azotea Tunnel, 12.7 miles long, which will be a feature of the U.S. Reclamation Bureau's San Juan-Chama Project.

It will carry water from the upper tributaries of the San Juan River in the Colorado River Basin to Azotea Creek in northern New Mexico.

Barney Bellport, chief engineer of the bureau, says the "mole" digs at a maximum rate of eight feet per hour, although it may slow its pace in some rockier formations.

The business end of the 35-foot-long machine has 25 cutter wheels. It was built by the James S. Robbins Co. of Seattle.

The $13.7 million contract for the tunnel is held by Gibbons & Reed Co., Boyles Bros. Drilling Co. and Dugan Graham Co. Inc., all of Salt Lake City.

Bellport said the tunnel project and allied phases should be completed by January, 1970.

Detective Just Can't Find His Prisoner

HENRYETTA, Okla. (AP) — Tulsa police decided to try to find some stolen merchandise by sending a prisoner into an abandoned coal mine — they wish they hadn't.

The episode in this coal mining region of eastern Oklahoma ended Sunday in an escape attempt by the prisoner, a lost miner and a detective vowing never again. No loot was found.

Detective Wayburn Cotton began to worry when Jackie Madewell, a prisoner who had said he could find loot from burglaries at Tulsa and Henryetta, failed to come out of the mine. Cotton sent retired miner Johnny Miller into the mine to find him.

Believing the officers had gone, Madewell finally emerged. But Miller didn't. The miner was located safe but lost at 3 a.m. Sunday after being in the mine 9½ hours.

Cotton said he won't take part in any more treasure hunts.

The 1960 census disclosed that 69.3 per cent of the people living in Nevada were born in another state. Alaska ranked second with 63.8 per cent of its residents born elsewhere.

Goren on Bridge

By CHARLES H. GOREN

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold: Spades, K-8-7-5-3-2; Hearts, 6-3; Clubs, K-J-9-7-4.

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 Dia.	Pass	1 Spd.	Pass
2 Spds.	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Four spades. Now that spades have been raised your hand has become worth 14 points (counting one for the fifth spade and two for the sixth) No further pressure should be placed on partner.

Q. 2—As South you hold: Spades, A-K-10-3; Hearts, 5; Diamonds, A-J-10-9-4; Clubs, A-8-6.

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 Dia.	Pass	1 N.T.	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. This hand is technically a shade short of the requirements for a reverse which normally shows 19 points, but all your points are of "top drawer" quality and you have very good intermediate cards. Furthermore, there is no satisfactory alternative rebid.

Q. 3—As South you hold: Spades, A-2; Hearts, K-Q-3-2; Diamonds, J-10-7; Clubs, K-10-3-2.

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 Spd.	Pass	Pass	2 Dia.
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. Any stronger bid would be highly indiscreet. Partner has merely reopened the bidding and his action may have been dictated by a reluctance to permit the opposition to buy the contract at such a bargain price If he does hold sound values your call will induce him to bid further.

. 4—As South you hold: Spades, J; Hearts, A-K-Q-10-9; Diamonds, A-J-8-7-6-5-2.

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 Dia.	Pass	1 N.T.	Pass
3 Hrts.	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—The normal procedure at this point would be to rebid the hearts thus showing five hearts and at least six diamonds. However, we feel that a rebid of four diamonds may produce better results on this particular hand for, if partner is able to raise to five, we can bid a slam with a reasonable assurance of making it A rebid of four hearts may induce partner to pass with some mediocre hand containing fair diamond support.

. 5—As South you hold: Spades, K-10-5; Hearts, 6-3; Diamonds, A-5-4-3-2; Clubs, J-10-2.

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 Hrt.	Dbl.	?

What do you bid?

A.—One no trump. On hands of this type, it is advisable to get into the bidding while it is convenient to show partner that you are in possession of moderate values. This may enable him to continue the fight if the opposition offers further competition.

. 6—The opponents have a 40-part score, and as South you hold: Spades, K-2; Hearts, A-10-2; Diamonds, A-Q-4-3-2; Clubs, 10-6-5.

You're right hand opponent opens with one spade.

What do you bid?

A.—Double. This department does not normally indorse a take-out double of one spade on such meager values, since you are forcing partner to show his suit at the two level. However, considerations of score dictate a strategic bid at this point. While there is a definite risk in doubling, if you pass and West raises to two spades, you will then be faced with the dilemma of either permitting the opponents to get vulnerable very cheaply or of forcing partner to bid at the three level.

. 7—As South you hold: Spades, J-10-7-6-3; Hearts, Q-10-7-5-4; Diamonds, 6; Clubs, K-8.

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 Dia.	3 N.T.	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A.—Pass. Don't be a nursemaid. Partner's overcall puts him strictly on his own. Had he been interested in hearing about the majors, he would have doubled.

Q. 8—As South you hold: Hearts, K-7-3; Diamonds, A-J-10-6-4; Clubs, A-9-8-6-5.

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 Dia.	Pass	1 Spd.	Pass
2 Clbs.	Pass	3 Spds.	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. While this call is somewhat awkward with a void in partner's suit, no other bid will quite serve the purpose. An 11 trick contract should not be suggested with this minimum opening and a pass, of course, is out of the question since partner's bid is forcing.

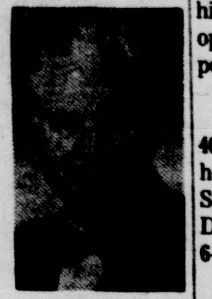
H. L. Hunt Writes



One of the most vitally important duties of the President of the United States is appointing good men to fill high and sensitive official posts.

In an age of big government, cabinet secretaries and top administrators in Washington wield enormous power. Obviously the men who hold these offices will play a major part in deciding the future of our country and all who live in it.

The foremost prerequisite for every man being considered for appointment to high federal office should be absolute, unquestioned loyalty to the United States, even in the eyes of his critics.

No pressures, however strong or from whatever source; no bonds of friendship, however deep and sincere; no calls of ambition, however siren-like, should bring about the slightest bending of this high standard. For when it begins to bend, it will soon break; and when it is broken for one high office, it will soon be broken for others.

Good Americans should remember, as they watch Presidential appointments being made, that the Constitutional requirement for confirmation of these appointments by the Senate is no longer a dependable safeguard. Most appointments are approved "automatically" once the President makes them. Only in the rarest cases are they ever challenged.

The checking must be done, and the high standard of loyalty applied before the appointment is made, when the candidates are being considered.

Surely no one can object to giving loyalty to country first place as a requirement in selecting public servants.

Bishop Resigns

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Leslie Brown, Anglican Archbishop of Uganda, announced he is resigning effective Nov. 30, because he believes the Uganda church can best be led by an African. Dr. Brown, 52, is the last remaining non-African bishop in Uganda, an East African federation where Britain formerly ruled as protector.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Powerfully Suspicious!

DEAR ABY: A good friend of mine came to me with a problem, and not knowing how to advise her, I am writing to you. Her gentleman friend gave her a fur jacket for Christmas. It smelled awful and one of the hooks was missing. The lining looked frayed around the collar, and worse yet, it was several sizes too large for her. She asked him where he got it so she could exchange it for one her size, but he wouldn't tell her. He keeps asking her when she is going to wear it. She thinks the world of this fellow and hates to hurt his feelings, but she says she just couldn't wear that jacket anywhere. What should she do? —A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: She should tell him that she appreciates his thoughtfulness, but she isn't able to wear the jacket because it is much too large for her. And if she really "thinks the world of him," she might confide that if he paid for a new jacket, he got skunked.

DEAR ABBY: Whut do you think of a mediocre piano player who fancies himself as an accomplished musician and, while a guest in someone's home, would strike a few chords and exclaim (in a voice fortissimo), "OH, FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, WHEN WAS THIS PIANO TUNED LAST?" —A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: I would say he had a good ear and bad manners. P. S. Someone should tell the host (in a voice pianissimo) to get the piano tuned.

DEAR ABBY: I am an ex-service woman. after World War II I took my dishcarge in the Philippines and accepted a civil service job in Japan. At that time my sister called me a "vagabond" and urged me to come home. I didn't, and I loved Japan. A few years later I wrote and told her I was taking a foreign job with the Navy in Guam. She replied, "What do you want to go to a place like THAT for?" I went and I had a ball.

Last year, when I accepted a job in Alaska, I phoned my sister long distance and she yelled so loudly I had to hold the receiver a foot away from my ear.

This year I am faced with having to tell my sister I have another job offer in Hong Kong. I need the money and crave the adventure. My sister is getting on in years and I don't want to upset her. Please advise. —GLOBE-TROTTER

DEAR GLOBE-TROTTER: So far you've done an excellent job of leading an exciting and independent life. I don't know what you owe your sister, but you owe yourself more. Do what you want to do. And don't feel guilty.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Disappointed Father In Kentfield": Don't be too hard on the boy. You can be grateful for one thing—with those grades you know he hasn't been cheating.

Carlo Ponti Becomes Citizen of France

PARIS (AP) — Italian movie producer Carlo Ponti has become a French citizen, it was officially confirmed today in Paris.

Ponti's name was included in a naturalization decree which appeared in the official Government Journal.

It was reported earlier this month that French authorities had granted Ponti citizenship after he had satisfied a five-year residence requirement in France.

French citizenship for Ponti may ease a dilemma created by his 1957 marriage to Italian film star Sophia Loren. He was married by proxy to Miss Loren in Mexico, but the marriage was never officially recognized as valid by Italy. Ponti and his first wife were divorced, and divorce is not recognized in Italy.

TOWN TRADITION

PUHOVAC, Yugoslavia (AP) —This small Serbian village is practically supplying watiers throughout Yugoslavia. There are only 50 families here, but at least one member of each family works as a waiter. One family alone—Andric—has seven members working as waiters in various Yugoslav cities, and six members of another family —Sebic—also are waiters.

Children of Churchill Have Tragedy

By The Associated Press

Randolph Churchill, who followed his father's example and went in for politics and writing, was married twice. Both marriages ended in divorce. His first wife was Pamela Digby. His second was June Osborne.

Diana Churchill married John M. Bailey, son of a South African capitalist. The marriage ended in divorce as did her second marriage to Duncan Sandys, who served in Parliament and later held cabinet posts. She died Oct. 20, 1963. A coroner ruled that she commited suicide by taking an overdose of sleeping pills.

Sarah Churchill went on the stage as a chorus girl in 1935 and the following year married Vic Oliver, an American comedian. That marriage ended in divorce in 1945. Four years later she married Anthony Beauchamp, a British society photographer. He died in 1957. Her third husband was Baron Audley, a designer and holder of one of Britain's most ancient titles. He died in July 1963.

Another daughter, Mary, accompanied Churchill on one of his trips to Canada and the United States in 1943. She was married in 1947 to Capt. Christopher Soames of the Coldstream Guards.

The other child, Marigold Frances, who was born four days after the armistice of World War I, died in 1921.

Hungry Elks Bring Problems

CREEDE, Colo. (AP)— State game and fish representatives will meet with Creede residents Monday to discuss the possibility of a controlled feeding program for the elk driven by snow from their usual winter areas.

Any plan for such feeding under state supervision would have to be approved by the Colorado Game, Fish and Parks Commission.

Gene McClure, chairman of a citizens committee at Creede, estimated townspeople have hauled 10 tons of hay to areas near town for elk to eat.

Many experienced game management officials contend such a feeding program won't work with elk and deer, 'and that it often causes death to animals through overfeeding.

At least nine elk have been found dead in canyons near Creede. A Game, Fish and Parks Department pathologist planned to come here Monday to see if the cause of death could be determined.

Elk also have wandered into Durango and other southwestern communities this winter.

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (AP) — Triplets born recently near Wabag, in the Western Highlands of New Guinea, have been named by numbers. The parents named the three boys Namba Wan, Namba Tu and Namba Tri—pidgin English for No. 1, 2 and 3.

GAZETTE-TELEGRAPH
Your Freedom Newspaper
Ever striving for the Pikes Peak Region to be an even better place to live

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

A Giant Falls

In any forest will be found many trees that grow taller than the others, and in some cases they will be veritable giants among trees. And when one of those giants falls, it is with a resounding crash that shakes the earth and is heard throughout the forest.

As with trees, so it is with men. And as the giants of an older generation tumble into the oblivion that is death, the resulting crash echoes around the world. We have lost two giants of our own recently in the deaths of General Douglas MacArthur and former President Herbert Hoover.

And in the death of Sir Winston Churchill, the English have lost what most of them will probably believe was their giant of all time. Sir Winston will certainly leave his mark on the pages of history. In fact, he wrote many thousands of pages of history himself which will undoubtedly be used for generations as references for scholars and historians. He even won the Nobel prize in history. He was also an accomplished painter and his works of art are headed for immortality now along with their painter.

We loved Churchill for his apt phrases and ready wit — for his facility with the king's English. History will probably name him a statesman. He was certainly a great politician and a great Englishman, and he knew how to handle other men to gain their aid, or their country's aid, for his cause.

When other politicians dragged England into war, Churchill was probably the only one among them who could have brought the war to a successful conclusion, so they called on him and he delivered the goods, but at what cost?

He was successful, as was Lloyd George before him, in once again getting the help of the United States to pull his beloved England out of her difficulties.

Yes, Sir Winston was a great Englishman and, in many respects, a great human being, one of the giants of the forest. And the echoes of his crash will resound throughout the world for many days.

Ideas

Be slow to claim an idea as something bright and new from your own mind. Remember that most ideas have been around for a long time and the best you can do is to put them in new clothes.

Pragmatists Should Be Happy

Recent disclosures of widespread cheating in colleges all over the country should make the pragmatists happy.

The pragmatic philosophy of "anything that works is good" dominates these United States today and cheating in college examinations is a natural results of this dominant philosophy.

Pragmatists sneer at teachers who try to emphasize the importance of principles to their students. Teachers who believe in stressing principles are often socially ostracized by the pragmatists, who sometimes go so far as to assert that "there is no such thing as a principle." Actually, pragmatists who go this far are so illogical they fail to realize that this assertion itself is a principle.

Acceptance of the philosophy that "anything that works is good" and that principles are unimportant, naturally results in unprincipled acts such as cheating in exams and the widespread juvenile and adult delinquency evident today.

A Good Start

It isn't that we are completely averse to complimenting politicians. It's just that they seldom give us an opportunity. It isn't once in a blue moon that the government, in any of its branches, does something of which we can wholeheartedly approve.

Therefore it gives us great pleasure to congratulate both our own federal government and that of Canada, as well. The reason for these kudos to the politicos is their recent agreement to banish tariffs in one area of trade between the two countries.

Through an executive agreement (perfectly legal) between President Johnson and Canada's prime minister, Lester B. Pearson, tariffs are to be entirely removed from automobiles and auto parts, subject to congressional approval. The president now has the power to reduce any and all tariffs, whenever he thinks it expedient, by 50 per cent. But to remove them altogether will require an act of Congress. We hope Congress finds it in its wisdom to concur with this long overdue movement towards free trade. It is a step — a long one — in the right direction.

This is, of course, a small beginning, a mere trifle in the face of the great tariff barriers that have been erected as almost unsurmountable walls to shut off the free flow of trade between the nations of the earth.

The phrase "protective tariffs" is a contradiction in terms. Tariffs protect nobody in the long run. They may bring some short-run aid to a few growers and manufacturers. But, because they are detrimental to the economy as a whole, they cannot bring lasting benefits to anyone. Quite the contrary, in fact.

The American example of free trade between the 50 sovereign states should have proved to the world the benefits to be derived from the free flow of goods across borders.

In the early days of this republic tariffs were collected at the borders between a few of the several states. This practice was discontinued with the adoption of the Constitution. But, during the period when tariffs were in order, there were various flare ups and near wars between some of the former colonies of King George. One of the greatest services the founding fathers performed for this country was to establish free trade between the states which, in those days, took their sovereignty seriously, and wars were averted only by this wise move of the founders.

There is an old saying, oft repeated and credited to several sources, to the effect that "if goods do not cross boundaries, armies will." And history has more than once proved that to be correct.

There are moves afoot at present to start cutting tariffs between all the "western" nations, and this is all to the good. Tariff barriers lead to other barriers and too many barriers spell trouble. The free trade era of the 19th Century, which was established and maintained by England, then the mightiest nation the world had ever seen was the greatest era of growth in history. It could be repeated in the latter half of the 20th Century, but on a much grander scale, if the politicians in the various countries would get together, as Johnson and Pearson have, and eliminate all tariffs on everything.

As we remarked in the beginning, this one small movement towards free trade is a long step in the right direction. Let us hope that more congratulations will be in order soon for more tariff removals. Tariffs are for the birds and pressure groups who never bothered to study economics. And for politicians who listen to the birds and pressure groups.

Ain't It the Truth?

POLITICAL ETHICS

If we are so far gone that we must devise a code of ethics for those in public office, we are too far gone for it to do any good.

But every so often the subject comes up, especially after some rather offensive political scandal, such as the Baker case, or the Billie Sol Estes case.

Even our own city council was talking of framing a code of ethics for themselves and city employees not too far back in the past. It seems to me that a code was drawn up and offered for the council's approval. Whether or not any action was taken on it, and whether our councilmen are now viewing their daily doings in the white light of the code, I do not know. And it wouldn't make a mite of difference. Politics and ethics don't mix, no more than water and oil.

It is not possible for a man to practice morals and at the same time make a living from that most immoral of all occupations, politics. And even when they serve "free," meaning without salary as do the city councilmen, they are still in a dirty business in which it is almost impossible to keep clean.

An honorable man needs no code of ethics — and a dishonorable one would disregard it. Of course an honorable man wouldn't be in politics in the first place. Or if he did, in all innocence, have a go at it, he would quickly get out in order to save his honor.

Adopting a code or passing a law is not going to bring honor to one who is dishonorable. It is more apt to have the opposite effect and bring dishonor to some who have been honorable. Prohibition made a nation of drinkers out of us simply because we were told not to drink.

Ethics, morals, conventions, are not susceptible to laws or orders. They are an integral part of the character of an individual. A person either practices them or he doesn't, all laws and codes notwithstanding. But men, being reasonable creatures, can always alibi themselves, find excuses, reason their way around the facts and kid themselves into believing they are as moral as the next one. "I'm an honest man, but . . ." How many times have you heard that old cliche repeated?

As for the politicians, anything that brings them votes is moral. Remember the Hatch Act that was supposed to cut the dirt out of campaign contributions? Everything had to be clean and above board, every penny accounted for and no more than so much from any one person or corporation. But the politicians still pay off to the big contributors, same as ever.

And the unions were excused. They could do anything, and have been doing it, to get their man elected. But the Congress is again debating whether or not a code of ethics would be ethical. It might fool some voters (some voters are easily fooled). The congressmen could say, "Look how honest we are, we even have a code of ethics to hold us in line." And many voters would believe they had done an honorable thing.

If they can't trust themselves, why should we trust them?

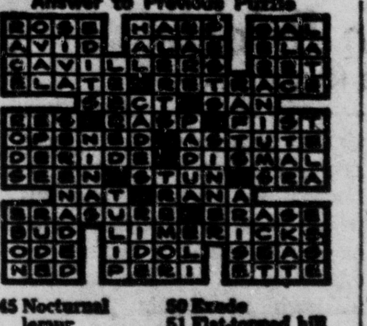
Answer to Previous Puzzle

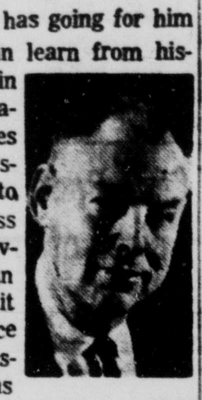


These Days

Johnson and the Lessons Of History

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

One of the things that President Johnson has going for him is that he can learn from history. Thus, in setting his table of priorities for the submission of bills to a Congress that is so heavily weighted in favor that it might induce carelessness, he has been taking precautions not to provoke the sort of fight that Franklin Roosevelt got into over the issue of packing the Supreme Court.



Lyndon Johnson knows about the need to keep congressional feathers unruffled because he was very much on the scene in the nineteen thirties. But the real test of his skill will come when he attempts to evade repeating the history of the nineteen twenties, which is something that he doesn't know about from experience.

The thing that threatens to dog him is the British economic crisis, which could be the sort of time bomb that resists even the most valiant effort to defuse it. As in Herbert Hoover's day, British troubles cast a long shadow over Washington. The pound sterling, now as in the twenties, is overvalued. With full realization of what might happen to the world if the British are compelled to devalue their currency, Washington has made emergency dollar advances to shore up London's credit.

'BOUGHT TIME'

But Britain's troubles are not purely monetary; they are deeply rooted in the apparent inability of British industry to cut its costs and to make itself competitive with more enterprising overseas economies. Britain has "bought time" with recent U.S. aid, but it gives no evidence of buying the necessary competitive philosophy that will enable it to do something constructive in the breathing space that it now has.

Dispatch after dispatch from London stresses the troubles which the Labor government is having in trying to stip the British economy for competitive action. The trade unions are demanding higher wages. London dockworkers insist on working short hours, and the mechanization of the Thames waterfront is still something for the future. The British steel industry is only half as efficient as steel in the U. S., and the prospect of nationalization is not designed to improve things. Prices in Britain are rising. Meanwhile, the "gnomes of Zurich" — meaning the Swiss bankers — are welcoming gold deposits that formerly went to London.

If the $3 billion dollar fund that has been put up to bring the British through their crisis fails, the pound will certainly be devalued. And this could mean devaluation of the dollar in spite of all the brave talk in Washington that this just won't be permitted to happen.

A SHIFT

Peering into the problem-shrouded future, De Gaulle has decided to hedge his bets on the U.S. monetary system. Just last week $200 million in gold was shifted from the U.S. Treasury to the exchange stabilization fund, a shift which no doubt included $150 million sold to France.

The U.S. could stanch its loss of gold if it cut down on the money it puts out to maintain military forces abroad. It could adopt measures designed to penalize American firms which have been establishing European manufacturing branches or buying into European companies. It could put a head-tax on U.S. tourists. But all of these measures would help constrict the volume of world production and world trade, and they would surely have an effect at one or two removes on our export market.

Looking into the future, Lyndon Johnson must be thinking more about Herbert Hoover's troubles in the White House than about Franklin Roosevelt's. Hoover always thought that our unsuccessful attempts to shore up the British pound in the late nineteen twenties had a good deal to do with the Wall Street collapse of 1929. There is no precise parallel between the late twenties and the middle sixties, but the difficulties of isolating the U.S. economy from British troubles must suggest to Lyndon Johnson that he has considerable more than Congress to wangle in his attempts to keep history from repeating itself.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION No. 643: "In a recent question box it was stated: 'Most widows are afraid to invest in anything other than keeping their money in the bank.' The return on real estate is bad also, so just what would you suggest widows do with small funds?" Sally Stern, 533 Country Club Dr., Wilmington, Delaware.

ANSWER: It is not the function of the Question Box to serve as investment adviser.

The previous question related to inflationary practices of the politicians who have used inflation to tax the savings of the small investors who cannot afford to place their funds in growth stocks and other investments which will increase in dollar value with inflation.

That is why we consider inflation the most cruel of all taxes. However, in France during that nation's rapid inflation, it seems those who invested in minerals that were under the grounds fared best.

IRREDEEMABLE CURRENCIES

To the Editor:

Would it matter if the present 25 per cent gold reserve behind the dollar was abolished? LBJ would have us believe it would be a good idea, just as his mentor the late FDR back on October 22, 1933 when he led us into "managed" irredeemable currency told us: "we shall seek to establish and maintain a dollar which will not change in purchasing and debt-paying power during the succeeding generation."

Conservatives then warned that irredemable currencies get out of hand and depreciate. What's a 1933 dollar worth today? Pennies? But did the official government experts learn, even admit how wrong they had been, let alone change and correct their ways?

Little analysis, even less understanding, of how the corruption and fraud which follows the wholly dishonest practice of I.O.U's. (citizens are sentenced to jail for this crime) has spread until today moral bankruptcy is upon us and fiscal bankruptcy faces us. Gambling and speculation has brought riches, senseless and extravagant luxury, cheatery and distrust, destroying faith in moral considerations, national honor became a fiction cherished only by hypocrites and the unrealistic as Patriotism rotted into cynicism.

Short-weight the housewife on packaged detergents or breakfast food, the husband on the gas for his car or the beer in a can, and Senate and House Committees are formed to investigate, presidential fact finders are mobilized. But short-change the citizen on the value in his dollars and the few who protest cannot even rate a single headline.

As the professor observed: "This is how the Constitution crumbles." Indeed, Kingdoms, Republics and Democracies alike have succumbed without exceptions, when money-managing was practiced.

OFF THE GOLD STANDARD

To the Editor:

We have been reading in the papers and hearing on TV considerably about the English pound sterling, our gold reserves, the price of silver, and the shortage of silver coinage. I'm a little hazy about how we were put off the gold standard. I've read where it was by executive order and some have said it was an enactment of Congress. In either case let us consider this, which may be found in Article 1, Section 10 of our Constitution: "No state shall make anything but GOLD and SILVER COIN a tender in payment of debts." Whose debts—private, commercial, state government debts?

Now HOW can this Constitutionally established rule be adhered to when a president, or the Congress, takes away our gold, and now is attempting to take away our silver? In the light of this clause in our Constitution it seems to me that we can refuse to give up our gold and silver—except that with a Supreme Court devoted to rendering decisions favorable to the party responsible for the majority of appointments regardless of what is stated in our Constitution, we are bound to lose.

In Section 8 of this same article I of the Constitution is this clause (the fifth) which reads, "to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin," but does "regulate the value" mean the value can be fluctuated by Congress or does it mean Congress shall determine the denominational value of the coinage? As for regulating the value of foreign coin, that could mean establishing a rate of exchange, for how can Congress arbitrarily "regulate the value" of the coin of a foreign country? Doesn't it have its own value as accepted in its own country of origin?

So I'm stating my firm conviction that the paper so-called "money" we are accepting and using is a practically worthless and an unconstitutional medium of exchange for the payment of debts. Unless such fiat money is re-established as legal tender by a "dollar for dollar" gold and silver (coinage or bullion) reserve, it should bear an imprint across its face, "Unsecured promissory note issued by—" and here insert "by the United States government," or "by the banking institution named hereon" as the case may be. Or, in the case of the federal "notes" they could be called a "second lien on taxes to be collected" (the government "bonds" being a first lien) and thus a semblance of honesty would be gained.

To repeat, I have been led to believe that any altering of the Constitution must be done by Constitutional Amendment proceedings, two methods being outlined in the Constitution. I have always felt that to evade or to go contrary to the Constitution in the conduct of government is just as much TREASON as "treating with the enemy" for it is an insidious means of our final and total destruction. Too bad we can do nothing now about the "treason" of a former president, and the "treason" through disregard of the Constitution by those in lesser offices who now are no longer with us. As for those still in office, going their own way in reckless disregard of Constitutional procedures and limitations, why do we tolerate them? My answer is, "Because there is something amiss in the mind of man"—the reason given by a writer several years ago in recounting the rise and fall of various civilizations.

HOWARD D. SELDEN
3940 N. Weber

Editor's note: In quoting Section 10 of Article I of the Constitution, Howard Selden correctly notes that "NO STATE shall make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debt." This provision dates to the time in which the separate states were issuing their own money. The provision was intended to prevent states from issuing any money in competition with the federal government, which in the same article, Section 8, was granted the power to coin money. Thus, by virtue of these two sections, the federal Congress was authorized to coin money and the states were prohibited from coining money, and the states were further barred from using anything other than federal (or private) money in the payment of state debts.

Private coinage was not banned in the Constitution. It was banned by law in the latter part of the 19th century when private mints, such as the original Denver mint, struck off coins of such superior quality that people preferred to use them. This interfered with the monopoly on money the federal government hoped to acquire and finally did acquire.

It might be noted that a private minting of coin is not counterfeiting, per se. A counterfeit coin is one that is, let us say, privately minted, but carries the government imprint as a forgery. A counterfeit is a spurious coin. Originally, a great deal of gold and silver coinage in this country was minted privately, carrying the imprint of the private firm which minted it.

DIRE POVERTY

To the editor:

The crime—the deliberate and methodical swindle of 2500 local citizens and taxpayers out of over 2½ million. The bail—$2,500. THAT'S ONE TENTH OF ONE PER CENT! The punishment—none yet.

After letting Joe Newcomer defraud you or your neighbors for ten years, the law let him enjoy almost two years of vacationing with our money, and now after a ridiculous bail of only one thousandth part of his crime he is once again breathing free air.

If a robber held up ten gas stations would he be guilty of one crime? Joe has defrauded 2,500 separate people or families and they have only eight counts against him! They should nail him for 20,000 counts!

Joe has inflicted dire poverty on hundreds of the best citizens, the ones who were ambitious enough to earn and save money. One old couple had sold their home and set aside $5,000 for a heart operation. Now, no operation. Another older couple sold their business, hoping to retire on the $50,000 proceeds. Now its worth only $5,000. We were going to buy a new house, for cash. We now live in a trailer. Hundreds of citizens who will never see 65 again, trying to stretch their savings rather than be a drain on the public or their grown children in their twilight years, have lost those savings, their hope and independence. What punishment could possibly fit this dastardly crime of cheating all these trusting people out of the fruits of a thousand or more years of sweat and toil??? We'll soon see how lightly the law deals with this bloodsucker, and then should we wonder why the crime rate is going up? We shall also soon see if President Johnson's war on poverty is truly a step toward "The Great Society" or just another farce jammed down the taxpayers' throats. A true war on poverty is first of all a war on crime, and I haven't heard him mention the word "crime" yet.

Drive your car without safety sticker past a policemen and see how fast the law reacts. He'd nail you right then and there and if you don't do as the law dictates and-or pay a fine you'd probably be in jail within thirty days, notwithstanding the fact that your car is in far better mechanical condition than most cars with safety stickers.

Compare now—the law has let Joe Newcomer to enjoy almost twelve years of high living without turning an honest dollar in all that time. This they call justice?

What fools these mortals be!

Frightening News Dispatches

By H. E. KERSHNER, L.H.D.

Two frightening news dispatches stare at me from my desk as these lines are written. One says, "another planned deficit" and goes on to say that President Johnson is now backing the idea that "unbalanced budgets spur economy."

Not many years ago a peacetime deficit was considered a tragedy. Later, it was regretfully tolerated now and then, always with apologies and promises that it would not happen in the future. Now apparently it is accepted without regret and even believed to be desirable. In other words, we have succumbed to the lure of continuing inflation. Unless we recover our sense, that marks the beginning of the end of the dollar as we have known it and a steady depreciation of this fine, historically - sound monetary unit. Of course it has not been sound for 32 years, but until recently most of us have hoped that we would recover from our inflationary binge and get back to sound money. Apparently that is not to be in the foreseeable future, and from here on further depreciation of the dollar and more inflationary boom is not only being accepted but welcomed.

The other item that frightens me in today's news is the announcement that the welfare rolls in New York City have increased by 12.4 per cent in the past year and that now just under half a million persons in this year of great prosperity are on the city's relief rolls. 282,000 of this number are dependent children. No doubt these children need help and every right - thinking person is deeply touched by their unfortunate condition. It is doubtful however if present policies will solve the problem. So far, they continue to make it worse. Not many more than a score of cities in the United States contain more than half a million inhabitants and yet that number of people are on relief right here in New York City.

A part of the reason is the ease with which new names are added to the relief rolls. Many of these people have discovered that they can spend their own money foolishly, extravagantly, and harmfully and then depend upon the city for the essential items of food, housing, and clothing.

We shall never solve the problem by payments to people who waste their own earnings in dissipation. We shall never solve it by condoning and even encouraging illegitimate children. We shall never solve it by putting a woman and her children on the relief rolls merely because she reports that her husband has deserted her, while the facts in multitudes of cases prove that this is merely a maneuver to increase and possibly double the family income.

Too many people in America have learned that they can live with little effort. Privately administered charity does not cultivate that attiude, but those who receive public charity soon come to look upon it as a right and to feel that no stigma attaches to the recipient thereof. Private charity is curative, but public relief destroys the initiative, self-reliance, and character of those who receive it and embitters and discourages those who are penalized more and more to pay it.

If hard work were provided for those on relief, not so many would accept it. Another provision that might help would be the cancellation of the right to vote while one was on the relief rolls and for, let us say, two years thereafter.

With half a million people on the relief rolls in one city and the number constantly increasing the American people cannot with safety further ignore this problem. Obviously, something is wrong and it will not get better until radical changes are made.

A Giant Falls

In any forest will be found many trees that grow taller than the others, and in some cases they will be veritable giants among trees. And when one of those giants falls, it is with a resounding crash that shakes the earth and is heard throughout the forest.

As with trees, so it is with men. And as the giants of an older generation tumble into the oblivion that is death, the resulting crash echoes around the world. We have lost two giants of our own recently in the deaths of General Douglas MacArthur and former President Herbert Hoover.

And in the death of Sir Winston Churchill, the English have lost what most of them will probably believe was their giant of all time. Sir Winston will certainly leave his mark on the pages of history. In fact, he wrote many thousands of pages of history himself which will undoubtedly be used for generations as references for scholars and historians. He even won the Nobel prize in history. He was also an accomplished painter and his works of art are headed for immortality now along with their painter.

We loved Churchill for his apt phrases and ready wit — for his facility with the king's English. History will probably name him a statesman. He was certainly a great politician and a great Englishman, and he knew how to handle other men to gain their aid, or their country's aid, for his cause.

When other politicians dragged England into war, Churchill was probably the only one among them who could have brought the war to a successful conclusion, so they called on him and he delivered the goods, but at what cost?

He was successful, as was Lloyd George before him, in once again getting the help of the United States to pull his beloved England out of her difficulties.

Yes, Sir Winston was a great Englishman and, in many respects, a great human being, one of the giants of the forest. And the echoes of his crash will resound throughout the world for many days.

Ideas

Be slow to claim an idea as something bright and new from your own mind. Remember that most ideas have been around for a long time and the best you can do is to put them in new clothes.

Pragmatists Should Be Happy

Recent disclosures of widespread cheating in colleges all over the country should make the pragmatists happy.

The pragmatic philosophy of "anything that works is good" dominates these United States today and cheating in college examinations is a natural results of this dominant philosophy.

Pragmatists sneer at teachers who try to emphasize the importance of principles to their students. Teachers who believe in stressing principles are often socially ostracized by the pragmatists, who sometimes go so far as to assert that "there is no such thing as a principle." Actually, pragmatists who go this far are so illogical they fail to realize that this assertion itself is a principle.

Acceptance of the philosophy that "anything that works is good" and that principles are unimportant, naturally results in unprincipled acts such as cheating in exams and the widespread juvenile and adult delinquency evident today.

A Good Start

It isn't that we are completely averse to complimenting politicians. It's just that they seldom give us an opportunity. It isn't once in a blue moon that the government, in any of its branches, does something of which we can wholeheartedly approve.

Therefore it gives us great pleasure to congratulate both our own federal government and that of Canada, as well. The reason for these kudos to the politicos is their recent agreement to banish tariffs in one area of trade between the two countries.

Through an executive agreement (perfectly legal) between President Johnson and Canada's prime minister, Lester B. Pearson, tariffs are to be entirely removed from automobiles and auto parts, subject to congressional approval. The president now has the power to reduce any and all tariffs, whenever he thinks it expedient, by 50 per cent. But to remove them altogether will require an act of Congress. We hope Congress finds it in its wisdom to concur with this long overdue movement towards free trade. It is a step — a long one — in the right direction.

This is, of course, a small beginning, a mere trifle in the face of the great tariff barriers that have been erected as almost unsurmountable walls to shut off the free flow of trade between the nations of the earth.

The phrase "protective tariffs" is a contradiction in terms. Tariffs protect nobody in the long run. They may bring some short-run aid to a few growers and manufacturers. But, because they are detrimental to the economy as a whole, they cannot bring lasting benefits to anyone. Quite the contrary, in fact.

The American example of free trade between the 50 sovereign states should have proved to the world the benefits to be derived from the free flow of goods across borders.

In the early days of this republic tariffs were collected at the borders between a few of the several states. This practice was discontinued with the adoption of the Constitution. But, during the period when tariffs were in order, there were various flare ups and near wars between some of the former colonies of King George. One of the greatest services the founding fathers performed for this country was to establish free trade between the states which, in those days, took their sovereignty seriously, and wars were averted only by this wise move of the founders.

There is an old saying, oft repeated and credited to several sources, to the effect that "if goods do not cross boundaries, armies will." And history has more than once proved that to be correct.

There are moves afoot at present to start cutting tariffs between all the "western" nations, and this is all to the good. Tariff barriers lead to other barriers and too many barriers spell trouble. The free trade era of the 19th Century, which was established and maintained by England, then the mightiest nation the world had ever seen was the greatest era of growth in history. It could be repeated in the latter half of the 20th Century, but on a much grander scale, if the politicians in the various countries would get together, as Johnson and Pearson have, and eliminate all tariffs on everything.

As we remarked in the beginning, this one small movement towards free trade is a long step in the right direction. Let us hope that more congratulations will be in order soon for more tariff removals. Tariffs are for the birds and pressure groups who never bothered to study economics. And for politicians who listen to the birds and pressure groups.

Ain't It the Truth?

POLITICAL ETHICS

If we are so far gone that we must devise a code of ethics for those in public office, we are too far gone for it to do any good.

But every so often the subject comes up, especially after some rather offensive political scandal, such as the Baker case, or the Billie Sol Estes case.

Even our own city council was talking of framing a code of ethics for themselves and city employees not too far back in the past. It seems to me that a code was drawn up and offered for the council's approval. Whether or not any action was taken on it, and whether our councilmen are now viewing their daily doings in the white light of the code, I do not know. And it wouldn't make a mite of difference. Politics and ethics don't mix, no more than water and oil.

It is not possible for a man to practice morals and at the same time make a living from that most immoral of all occupations, politics. And even when they serve "free," meaning without salary as do the city councilmen, they are still in a dirty business in which it is almost impossible to keep clean.

An honorable man needs no code of ethics — and a dishonorable one would disregard it. Of course an honorable man wouldn't be in politics in the first place. Or if he did, in all innocence, have a go at it, he would quickly get out in order to save his honor.

Adopting a code or passing a law is not going to bring honor to one who is dishonorable. It is more apt to have the opposite effect and bring dishonor to some who have been honorable. Prohibition made a nation of drinkers out of us simply because we were told not to drink.

Ethics, morals, conventions, are not susceptible to laws or orders. They are an integral part of the character of an individual. A person either practices them or he doesn't, all laws and codes notwithstanding. But men, being reasonable creatures, can always alibi themselves, find excuses, reason their way around the facts and kid themselves into believing they are as moral as the next one. "I'm an honest man, but . . ." How many times have you heard that old cliche repeated?

As for the politicians, anything that brings them votes is moral. Remember the Hatch Act that was supposed to cut the dirt out of campaign contributions? Everything had to be clean and above board, every penny accounted for and no more than so much from any one person or corporation. But the politicians still pay off to the big contributors, same as ever.

And the unions were excused. They could do anything, and have been doing it, to get their man elected. But the Congress is again debating whether or not a code of ethics would be ethical. It might fool some voters (some voters are easily fooled). The congressmen could say, "Look how honest we are, we even have a code of ethics to hold us in line." And many voters would believe they had done an honorable thing.

If they can't trust themselves, why should we trust them?

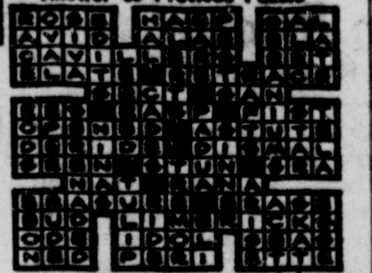
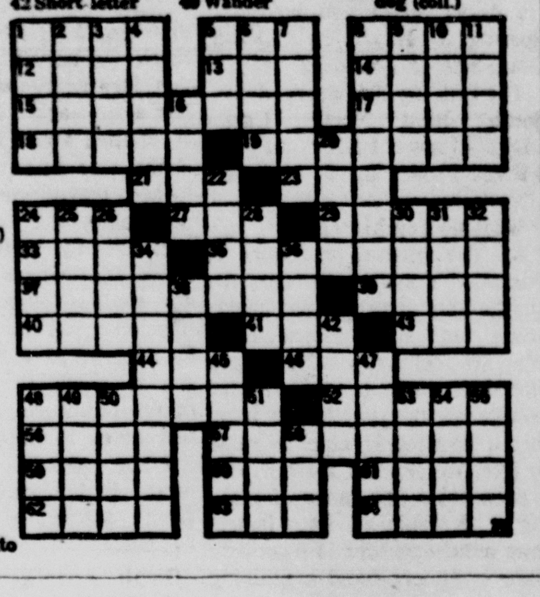
Answer to Previous Puzzle





These Days

Johnson and the Lessons Of History

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

One of the things that President Johnson has going for him is that he can learn from history. Thus, in setting his table of priorities for the submission of bills to a Congress that is so heavily weighted in favor that it might induce carelessness, he has been taking precautions not to provoke the sort of fight that Franklin Roosevelt got into over the issue of packing the Supreme Court.

Lyndon Johnson knows about the need to keep congressional feathers unruffled because he was very much on the scene in the nineteen thirties. But the real test of his skill will come when he attempts to evade repeating the history of the nineteen twenties, which is something that he doesn't know about from experience.

The thing that threatens to dog him is the British economic crisis, which could be the sort of time bomb that resists even the most valiant effort to defuse it. As in Herbert Hoover's day, British troubles cast a long shadow over Washington. The pound sterling, now as in the twenties, is overvalued. With full realization of what might happen to the world if the British are compelled to devalue their currency, Washington has made emergency dollar advances to shore up London's credit.

'BOUGHT TIME'

But Britain's troubles are not purely monetary; they are deeply rooted in the apparent inability of British industry to cut its costs and to make itself competitive with more enterprising overseas economies. Britain has "bought time" with recent U.S. aid, but it gives no evidence of buying the necessary competitive philosophy that will enable it to do something constructive in the breathing space that it now has.

Dispatch after dispatch from London stresses the troubles which the Labor government is having in trying to stip the British economy for competitive action. The trade unions are demanding higher wages. London dockworkers insist on working short hours, and the mechanization of the Thames waterfront is still something for the future. The British steel industry is only half as efficient as steel in the U. S., and the prospect of nationalization is not designed to improve things. Prices in Britain are rising. Meanwhile, the "gnomes of Zurich" — meaning the Swiss bankers — are welcoming gold deposits that formerly went to London.

If the $3 billion dollar fund that has been put up to bring the British through their crisis fails, the pound will certainly be devalued. And this could mean devaluation of the dollar in spite of all the brave talk in Washington that this just won't be permitted to happen.

A SHIFT

Peering into the problem-shrouded future, De Gaulle has decided to hedge his bets on the U.S. monetary system. Just last week $200 million in gold was shifted from the U.S. Treasury to the exchange stabilization fund, a shift which no doubt included $150 million sold to France.

The U.S. could stanch its loss of gold if it cut down on the money it puts out to maintain military forces abroad. It could adopt measures designed to penalize American firms which have been establishing European manufacturing branches or buying into European companies. It could put a head-tax on U.S. tourists. But all of these measures would help constrict the volume of world production and world trade, and they would surely have an effect at one or two removes on our export market.

Looking into the future, Lyndon Johnson must be thinking more about Herbert Hoover's troubles in the White House than about Franklin Roosevelt's. Hoover always thought that our unsuccessful attempts to shore up the British pound in the late nineteen twenties had a good deal to do with the Wall Street collapse of 1929. There is no precise parallel between the late twenties and the middle sixties, but the difficulties of isolating the U.S. economy from British troubles must suggest to Lyndon Johnson that he has considerable more than Congress to wangle in his attempts to keep history from repeating itself.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION No. 643: "In a recent question box it was stated: 'Most widows are afraid to invest in anything other than keeping their money in the bank.' The return on real estate is bad also, so just what would you suggest widows do with small funds?" Sally Stern, 533 Country Club Dr., Wilmington, Delaware.

ANSWER: It is not the function of the Question Box to serve as investment adviser.

The previous question related to inflationary practices of the politicians who have used inflation to tax the savings of the small investors who cannot afford to place their funds in growth stocks and other investments which will increase in dollar value with inflation.

That is why we consider inflation the most cruel of all taxes. However, in France during that nation's rapid inflation, it seems those who invested in minerals that were under the grounds fared best.

IRREDEEMABLE CURRENCIES

To the Editor:

Would it matter if the present 25 per cent gold reserve behind the dollar was abolished? LBJ would have us believe it would be a good idea, just as his mentor the late FDR back on October 22, 1933 when he led us into "managed" irredeemable currency told us: "we shall seek to establish and maintain a dollar which will not change in purchasing and debt-paying power during the succeeding generation."

Conservatives then warned that irredemable currencies get out of hand and depreciate. What's a 1933 dollar worth today? Pennies? But did the official government experts learn, even admit how wrong they had been, let alone change and correct their ways?

Little analysis, even less understanding, of how the corruption and fraud which follows the wholly dishonest practice of I.O.U's. (citizens are sentenced to jail for this crime) has spread until today moral bankruptcy is upon us and fiscal bankruptcy faces us. Gambling and speculation has brought riches, senseless and extravagant luxury, cheatery and distrust, destroying faith in moral considerations, national honor became a fiction cherished only by hypocrites and the unrealistic as Patriotism rotted into cynicism.

Short-weight the housewife on packaged detergents or breakfast food, the husband on the gas for his car or the beer in a can, and Senate and House Committees are formed to investigate, presidential fact finders are mobilized. But short-change the citizen on the value in his dollars and the few who protest cannot even rate a single headline.

As the professor observed: "This is how the Constitution crumbles." Indeed, Kingdoms, Republics and Democracies alike have succumbed without exceptions, when money-managing was practiced.

OFF THE GOLD STANDARD

To the Editor:

We have been reading in the papers and hearing on TV considerably about the English pound sterling, our gold reserves, the price of silver, and the shortage of silver coinage. I'm a little hazy about how we were put off the gold standard. I've read where it was by executive order and some have said it was an enactment of Congress. In either case let us consider this, which may be found in Article 1, Section 10 of our Constitution: "No state shall make anything but GOLD and SILVER COIN a tender in payment of debts." Whose debts—private, commercial, state government debts?

Now HOW can this Constitutionally established rule be adhered to when a president, or the Congress, takes away our gold, and now is attempting to take away our silver? In the light of this clause in our Constitution it seems to me that we can refuse to give up our gold and silver—except that with a Supreme Court devoted to rendering decisions favorable to the party responsible for the majority of appointments regardless of what is stated in our Constitution, we are bound to lose.

In Section 8 of this same article I of the Constitution is this clause (the fifth) which reads, "to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin," but does "regulate the value" mean the value can be fluctuated by Congress or does it mean Congress shall determine the denominational value of the coinage? As for regulating the value of foreign coin, that could mean establishing a rate of exchange, for how can Congress arbitrarily "regulate the value" of the coin of a foreign country? Doesn't it have its own value as accepted in its own country of origin?

So I'm stating my firm conviction that the paper so-called "money" we are accepting and using is a practically worthless and an unconstitutional medium of exchange for the payment of debts. Unless such fiat money is re-established as legal tender by a "dollar for dollar" gold and silver (coinage or bullion) reserve, it should bear an imprint across its face, "Unsecured promissory note issued by—" and here insert "by the United States government," or "by the banking institution named hereon" as the case may be. Or, in the case of the federal "notes" they could be called a "second lien on taxes to be collected" (the government "bonds" being a first lien) and thus a semblance of honesty would be gained.

To repeat, I have been led to believe that any altering of the Constitution must be done by Constitutional Amendment proceedings, two methods being outlined in the Constitution. I have always felt that to evade or to go contrary to the Constitution in the conduct of government is just as much TREASON as "treating with the enemy" for it is an insidious means of our final and total destruction. Too bad we can do nothing now about the "treason" of a former president, and the "treason" through disregard of the Constitution by those in lesser offices who now are no longer with us. As for those still in office, going their own way in reckless disregard of Constitutional procedures and limitations, why do we tolerate them? My answer is, "Because there is something amiss in the mind of man"—the reason given by a writer several years ago in recounting the rise and fall of various civilizations.

HOWARD D. SELDEN
3940 N. Weber

Editor's note: In quoting Section 10 of Article I of the Constitution, Howard Selden correctly notes that "NO STATE shall make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debt." This provision dates to the time in which the separate states were issuing their own money. The provision was intended to prevent states from issuing any money in competition with the federal government, which in the same article, Section 8, was granted the power to coin money. Thus, by virtue of these two sections, the federal Congress was authorized to coin money and the states were prohibited from coining money, and the states were further barred from using anything other than federal (or private) money in the payment of state debts.

Private coinage was not banned in the Constitution. It was banned by law in the latter part of the 19th century when private mints, such as the original Denver mint, struck off coins of such superior quality that people preferred to use them. This interfered with the monopoly on money the federal government hoped to acquire and finally did acquire.

It might be noted that a private minting of coin is not counterfeiting, per se. A counterfeit coin is one that is, let us say, privately minted, but carries the government imprint as a forgery. A counterfeit is a spurious coin. Originally, a great deal of gold and silver coinage in this country was minted privately, carrying the imprint of the private firm which minted it.

DIRE POVERTY

To the editor:

The crime—the deliberate and methodical swindle of 2500 local citizens and taxpayers out of over 2½ million. The bail—$2,500. THAT'S ONE TENTH OF ONE PER CENT! The punishment—none yet.

After letting Joe Newcomer defraud you or your neighbors for ten years, the law let him enjoy almost two years of vacationing with our money, and now after a ridiculous bail of only one thousandth part of his crime he is once again breathing free air.

If a robber held up ten gas stations would he be guilty of one crime? Joe has defrauded 2,500 separate people or families and they have only eight counts against him! They should nail him for 20,000 counts!

Joe has inflicted dire poverty on hundreds of the best citizens, the ones who were ambitious enough to earn and save money. One old couple had sold their home and set aside $5,000 for a heart operation. Now, no operation. Another older couple sold their business, hoping to retire on the $50,000 proceeds. Now its worth only $5,000. We were going to buy a new house, for cash. We now live in a trailer. Hundreds of citizens who will never see 65 again, trying to stretch their savings rather than be a drain on the public or their grown children in their twilight years, have lost those savings, their hope and independence. What punishment could possibly fit this dastardly crime of cheating all these trusting people out of the fruits of a thousand or more years of sweat and toil??? We'll soon see how lightly the law deals with this bloodsucker, and then should we wonder why the crime rate is going up? We shall also soon see if President Johnson's war on poverty is truly a step toward "The Great Society" or just another farce jammed down the taxpayers' throats. A true war on poverty is first of all a war on crime, and I haven't heard him mention the word "crime" yet.

Drive your car without safety sticker past a policemen and see how fast the law reacts. He'd nail you right then and there and if you don't do as the law dictates and-or pay a fine you'd probably be in jail within thirty days, notwithstanding the fact that your car is in far better mechanical condition than most cars with safety stickers.

Compare now—the law has let Joe Newcomer to enjoy almost twelve years of high living without turning an honest dollar in all that time. This they call justice?

What fools these mortals be!

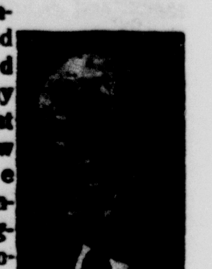
Frightening News Dispatches

By H. E. KERSHNER, L.H.D.



Two frightening news dispatches stare at me from my desk as these lines are written. One says, "another planned deficit" and goes on to say that President Johnson is now backing the idea that "unbalanced budgets spur economy."

Not many years ago a peacetime deficit was considered a tragedy. Later, it was regretfully tolerated now and then, always with apologies and promises that it would not happen in the future. Now apparently it is accepted without regret and even believed to be desirable. In other words, we have succumbed to the lure of continuing inflation. Unless we recover our sense, that marks the beginning of the end of the dollar as we have known it and a steady depreciation of this fine, historically - sound monetary unit. Of course it has not been sound for 32 years, but until recently most of us have hoped that we would recover from our inflationary binge and get back to sound money. Apparently that is not to be in the foreseeable future, and from here on further depreciation of the dollar and more inflationary boom is not only being accepted but welcomed.

The other item that frightens me in today's news is the announcement that the welfare rolls in New York City have increased by 12.4 per cent in the past year and that now just under half a million persons in this year of great prosperity are on the city's relief rolls. 282,000 of this number are dependent children. No doubt these children need help and every right - thinking person is deeply touched by their unfortunate condition. It is doubtful however if present policies will solve the problem. So far, they continue to make it worse. Not many more than a score of cities in the United States contain more than half a million inhabitants and yet that number of people are on relief right here in New York City.

A part of the reason is the ease with which new names are added to the relief rolls. Many of these people have discovered that they can spend their own money foolishly, extravagantly, and harmfully and then depend upon the city for the essential items of food, housing, and clothing.

We shall never solve the problem by payments to people who waste their own earnings in dissipation. We shall never solve it by condoning and even encouraging illegitimate children. We shall never solve it by putting a woman and her children on the relief rolls merely because she reports that her husband has deserted her, while the facts in multitudes of cases prove that this is merely a maneuver to increase and possibly double the family income.

Too many people in America have learned that they can live with little effort. Privately administered charity does not cultivate that attiude, but those who receive public charity soon come to look upon it as a right and to feel that no stigma attaches to the recipient thereof. Private charity is curative, but public relief destroys the initiative, self-reliance, and character of those who receive it and embitters and discourages those who are penalized more and more to pay it.

If hard work were provided for those on relief, not so many would accept it. Another provision that might help would be the cancellation of the right to vote while one was on the relief rolls and for, let us say, two years thereafter.

With half a million people on the relief rolls in one city and the number constantly increasing the American people cannot with safety further ignore this problem. Obviously, something is wrong and it will not get better until radical changes are made.

President's Budget Message

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a partial text of President Johnson's budget message to Congress today:

I am presenting to you today the budget of the United States for the fiscal year 1966.

A budget is a plan of action. It defines our goals, charts our courses, and outlines our expectations. It reflects hard decisions and difficult choices. This budget is no exception.

It is a budget of priorities. It provides for what we must do, but not for all we would like to do.

It is a budget of both opportunity and sacrifice. It begins to grasp the opportunities of the Great Society. It is restrained by the sacrifices we must continue to make in order to keep our defenses strong and flexible.

This budget provides reasonably for our needs. It is not extravagant. Neither is it miserly.

It stands on five basic principles:

— Government fiscal policies must promote national strength, economic progress, and individual opportunity.

— Our tax system must continue to be made less burdensome, more equitable, and more conducive to continued economic expansion.

— The Great Society must be a bold society. It must not fear to meet new challenges. It must not fail to seize new opportunities.

— The Great Society must be a compassionate society. It must always be responsive to human needs.

— The Great Society must be an efficient society. Less urgent programs must give way to needs. And each program, old and new, must be conducted with maximum efficiency, economy, and productivity.

The major features of the 1966 budget translate these principles into action.

First, excise taxes are substantially reduced. Social Security benefits, including hospital insurance, are increased. These are combined with other expenditure increases to yield an over-all fiscal policy designed to maintain our steady economic expansion.

Second, the budget supports a massive defense establishment of steadily growing power, within reduced outlays.

Third, our international and space programs are being advanced at a satisfactory rate, but with smaller increases than in earlier years.

Fourth, expanded programs and higher expenditures are proposed to:

— Provide better and more education for our children.

— Extend the war against poverty.

— Promote advances in the nation's health.

— Improve conditions in the urban areas where most of us live.

—Help the Appalachian region lift itself out of its present depressed condition.

— Strengthen our Social Security protection.

— Increase economic opportunities in rural communities.

— Encourage sound use of our national resources.

— Conserve natural beauty in our land.

Fifth, a large part of the funds for needed program expansion has come from savings, reductions, and economies in other parts of the budget.

FISCAL POLICY

This budget recognizes that a growing economy is needed to promote national strength and progress. It is also needed to move us toward a balanced budget.

Nearly four years ago, this nation began its fourth postwar economic expansion. With the help of last year's income tax reduction — the largest and most comprehensive ever enacted — this expansion has already outlasted each of the previous three postwar recoveries.

During the past four years, the nation's real output of goods and services — the Gross National Product — has grown at an average rate of about 5 per cent per year.

We must keep in mind that our economy is still producing at a level well below its potential. Nearly four million people are out of work. The unemployment rate is still nearly 5 per cent. Plants and machines are standing idle while human wants and needs go unmet. An estimated 35 million people continue to live in poverty.

The revenue and expenditure proposals presented in the 1966 budget are carefully designed to promote continued economic expansion and improved economic opportunities.

This budget takes into account the need to reduce the nation's balance of payments deficit. During the last calendar year, the deficit showed a significant decline. To help insure continued improvement, I will intensify efforts to carry out federal activities with the least possible burden on our balance of payments.

BUDGET SUMMARY

Administrative budget — Administrative budget expenditures are being held to $99.7 billion in 1966. Although expenditures will rise by a relatively small amount, they will decline as a per cent of the Gross National Product — to less than 15 per cent, the lowest ratio achieved in 15 years.

Administrative budget receipts are expected to increase in 1966 to $94.4 billion. This is $3.2 billion over the estimated level for 1965. This increase reflects the economic growth anticipated in calander year 1965. It also takes into account the revenue losses from proposed excise tax changes and from the second stage of income tax cuts enacted last year.

The resulting 1966 administrative budget deficit of $5.3 billion is $1 billion lower than the 1965 deficit, marking continued progress toward a balanced budget.

My budgets for both 1965 and 1966 have provided for major increases in areas of high national priority — particularly education, health, aid to the needy, housing, and the war on poverty. Also, for these two consecutive years, careful pruning of less urgent programs and vigorous cost reduction efforts have, on balance, resulttd in lower expenditures in other major sectors of the budget.

Consolidated cash statement — A more comprehensive measure of the government's finances is the consolidated cash budget which covers all of the government's programs.

On the consolidated cash basis, total payments to the public are estimated at $127.4 billion in 1966. Total receipts from the public are estimated at $123.5 billion, resulting in a net excess of payments of $3.9 billion. The estimated increase of $6.0 billion in cash payments in 1966 over 1965 is mostly in trust funds which are financed by special taxes.

About $9.5 billion of the nondefense payments recommended in this budget—almost 2½ times the size of the entire cash deficit—represent an investment in physical and financial assets which will provide benefits to the nation for many years to come. These payments are made for federal civic publi works, equipment, and loans as well as for highways, hospitals, and other state, local and private assets.

Federal sector, national income accounts—another measure of federal finance which includes trust funds emphasizes the direct impact of government fiscal activities on the economy. This measure is based on the national income accounts. Under this concept, federal fiscal data are estimated on an accrual rather than a cash basis. Purely financial transactions—such as loans—which do not directly affect production or income are excluded. On this basis the deficit for 1966 is estimated at $6.0 billion.

Federal expenditures as measured by the national income accounts are estimated to rise by $6.0 billion in 1966. This increase—covering both purchases of goods and services and other types of payments—will provide a strong stimulus for continued economic growth.

FEDERAL REVENUES

The Revenue Act of 1964 has played a major role in widening and strengthening our prosperity. At the beginning of this month, the second stage of the rate reductions provided under the act became effective. In total, last year's tax law will decrease consumer and business tax liabilities by about $14 billion in the current calendar year.

With this substantial change in income taxes completed, it is now appropriate to revise and adjust excise taxes as well

Within the revenue requirements for continued progress toward a balanced budget, I believe it is vital that we correct the most pressing of these deficiencies this year. I plan to transmit to the Congress recommendations to repeal some excise taxes and reduce others

These changes should become effective July 1, 1965. They will reduce tax liabilities on a full-year basis by $1.75 billion. Revenues collected by the Treasury in 1966 will be reduced by $1.5 billion.

My other major revenue proposals this year involve important activities financed through trust funds.

I am recommending prompt enactment of a hospital insurance program for elderly persons, who are finding hospital and medical costs far greater than their ability to pay. This program should be self-financing, with a combined employer-employee payroll contribution of 0.6 per cent on the first $5,600 of income to start in calendar year 1966.

While I am recommending reductions in certain excise taxes, I am also proposing increases in certain other excise taxes which are in the nature of user charge.

The excise taxes for which I am recommending reduction or repeal are not associated with the provision of particular government services.

However, certain existing excises on transportation are in effect a charge for the use of facilities and services provided by the government.

In these cases, I am proposing changes in user charges for transportation so that different modes of transportation can compete on more equitable and efficient terms and users of special government services will pay a greater share of the costs.

The estimated cost of completing the interstate highway system — which is financed by highway user taxes — has recently been increased by $5.8 billion. To avoid serious delay in completing the system, while remaining on a pay-as-you-go basis, I will include in my excise tax proposals specific recommendations for increasing certain highway user charges.

In contrast to the users of the highways, the users of the airways and inland waterways bear considerably less than the full cost of the government investments and services provided them.

Accordingly I am recommending increased or new taxes on aviation gasoline and jet fuels and a new tax on air freight for commercial aviation.

Receipts from the existing line should be kept in the general fund rather than transferred to the highway trust fund and the 5 per cent ticket tax on air passengers should be made permanent. A fuel tax for inland waterway users is also being proposed.

I will continue to press for other user charges in government programs where benefits are provided to specific identifiable individuals and businesses.

Fairness to all taxpayers demands that those who enjoy special benefits should bear a greater share of the costs.

Legislation is needed for some of the charges such as patent and meat inspection fees. In other instances equitable user charges will be instituted through administrative action.

I will also present recommendations to correct certain abuses in the tax-exempt privileges enjoyed by private foundations.

NEW AUTHORITY

This budget includes new obligational authority for 1966 of $106.4 billion in the administrative budget.

— $93.5 billion of this requires congressional action this year.

— $12.9 billion represents permanent authorizations that do not require further congressional action, mainly the appropriation for interest on the public debt.

Most of the $34.5 billion in new obligational authority recommended for 1966 for trust funds represents revenues from special taxes which are automatically appropriated.

The 1965 estimate in the administrative budget includes $6.0 billion of recommended supplemental authorizations. These authorizations will provide funds for several programs for immediate consideration and enactment—for example, housing activities and aid to Appalachia.

PROGRAMS—COSTS

The soundness of a budget can only be judged by the merits of the programs it proposes and the levels of expenditure it recommends. For both old and new programs, merit turns on a weighing of benefits against costs.

The budget includes an allowance for contingencies of $650 million in new obligational authority and $400 million in expenditures. These amounts are larger than is customary. Their iclusion makes it clear that the budget totals are intended to provide adequately for meeting new needs that may arise or seizing new opportunities that may be presented.

Here are the highlights of my expenditure recommendations:

National defense — We cannot afford second-best defense forces. Neither can we afford to be wasteful.

Our defense forces have reached new levels of strength. With the rapid strides made in the past four years and the future gains already scheduled, our powerful modern forces will be adequate to their tasks for years to come.

However, we are able to reduce our defense expenditures in 1966 because:

—The buildup of our forces which started in 1961 is nearly complete.

—The vigorous cost reduction program of the Department of Defense is producing large savings.

—Less effective and less economical forces are being retired or reduced as promptly as possible.

International affairs and finance—We cannot achieve lasting world peace with armaments alone. Nor can greater worldwide prosperity be bought with money alone. These goals will be achieved only through the hard work, patience, understanding, and strength of men of good will everywhere.

The 1966 budget calls for only a very modest increase in foreign economic assistance expenditures. With these funds, we will continue to concentrate our aid efforts in those less-developed countries that are demonstrating the will and determination required to achieve political stability and economic growth.

We shall maintain our firm commitment to the Alliance for Progress — the focus of our efforts to achieve unity and understanding in this hemisphere.

This budget also enables us to:

—Continue our participation in and support for the United Nations.

—Maintain an adequate and alert netwoork of diplomatic posts around the world.

—Improve our overseas information activities, so that others may know us not just as a rich nation, but as a free and responsible nation as well.

—Expand the Peace Corps, by now a proven experiment in international cooperation.

In an important step to strengthen the free world's financial system, the members of the International Monetary Fund are considering an increase in quotas.

Upon completion of these discussions, expected shortly, I shall recommend that the Congress authorize promptly the funds needed to provide the U.S. share of this increase.

Space research and technology — This nation has embarked on a bold program of space exploration and research which holds promise of rich rewards in many fields of American life.

The costs are high — as we knew they would be when we launched this effort. We have seen a rise in annual expenditures for the space program from less than one-half billion dollars in 1960 to over $4 billion in 1964.

Expenditures are continuing to increase. However, we have built up momentum and are concentrating on our highest priority goals. Therefore, we will no longer need to increase space outlays by huge sums each year in order to meet our present objectives.

This budget proposes that expenditures increase by $200 million in 1966 over 1965. This is the smallest annual increase since 1959. The new obligational authority requested is about the same as enacted for 1965.

Agriculture and agricultural resources —The increased productive efficiency of our farms has contributed greatly to growth of the national economy.

However, because of lack of adequate employment opportunities, the rapidly declining need for people to operate our farms has also meant low incomes for all too many of our rural families.

We must therefore find ways to help provide a greater share of our national prosperity for those rurals families that do not farm or who can no longer look to farming as a sole source of income.

Progress toward this goal will be made both through broader programs to fight poverty and through programs specially aimed at increasing economic opportunities and improving living conditions for rural people. The latter include a proposal for an insured loan program which will help provide more and better housing in rural areas.

I shall shortly transmit to the Congress my recommendations to continue and improve our farm commodity programs.

Natural resources — During its last session, the Congress passed a number of far-reaching laws that will advance significantly the development, conservation, and use of our natural resources. They include the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act, the Wilderness Act, and the Water Resources Research Act. the 1966 budget will implement these measures.

The budget also recommends the start of 37 new projects by the Corps of Engineers, nine new projects by the Bureau of Reclamation, and five new projects by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

About two-thirds of the total expenditures for natural resources will be used to continue construction and operation of projects to provide water, control floods, improve navigation, and generate power.

The budget provides for a major expansion in research to develop improved technology for desalting water, including the use of nuclear energy. This program holds important promise in a world where water is a key to economic development and well-being.

I am also again recommending legislation to authorize river basin planning commissions and grants to states for planning the best use of water resources.

Commerce and transportation —I urge prompt congressional action to:

—Extend the program begun by the Area Redevelopment Act of 1961, now scheduled to expire on June 30, 1965.

—Amend the act so that federal aids can be concentrated in areas of greatest need and can emphasize the most effective types of assistance.

To encourage long-overdue improvements in surface transportation in our densely populated regions, I will propose legislation to authorize a comprehensive program of technical research and development on high-speed, intercity surface transport.

As a first step, we will begin demonstrations of possible improvements in existing rail passenger services in the northeast corridor of the nation.

By increase efficiency and productivity, the Post Office Department has been able to avoid a general increase in postal rates since calendar year 1962.

Despite these efforts, however, significant postal deficits are now estimated in the current and future years. At my request, a panel of distinguished citizens will consider whether certain postal rates should be increased to bring them into line with postal costs.

Housing and community development — The federal government's role in the nation's huge annual investment in housing and community development is largely indirect.

The government insures savings and loan accounts and mortgages, encouraging private investment and making large direct federal investments unnecessary. Today these insurance programs are involved in about half of the homes purchased or being built.

Yet, some direct federal aid is, and will remain, necessary.

In a message on housing and urban development, I will present my proposals for further extension of the federal-local-private partnership in meeting city problems.

Revitalized federal leadership through a new department of housing and urban development will be coupled with increased emphasis on comprehensive local planning.

Federal financial assistance will be offered to:

— Support the neighborhood facilities needed to serve the city's people.

— Increase the supply of low and moderate income housing.

— Continue the attack on urban blight.

— Encourage better standards of development and more adequate public facilities at the growing urban fringe.

Health, labor, and welfare — The Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 rededicated the nation to a vigorous attack on the causes of the poverty which grips one-fifth of our population — including 15 million children.

The 1966 budget provides for almost doubling the new obligational authority and quadrupling the expenditures for this effort.

These funds will:

— Support 300 urban and rural community action programs.

— Provide work opportunities, remedial education, and vocational training for 330,000 youths in the Job Corps and the neighborhood Youth Corps.

—Provide work-study opportunities for 100,000 needy college students and work experience for 110,000 unemployed adults.

—Support the Volunteers In Service to America; finance literacy training for adults; and assist migrant workers, farmers, and other low-income rural families.

In addition to hospital insurance for the aged, I am proposing legislation to provide an average 7 per cent increase in Social Security benefits, retroactive to January 1, 1965. The increase in benefit payments will amount to about $2 billion in 1966.

I am proposing legislation to authorize long overdue improvements in the unemployment insurance system.

Legislation will be recommended to increase the federal share of public assistance payments, establish a program of medical care for children in families unable to afford such care, and authorize payments for needy aged persons in mental and tuberculosis hospitals.

Recommendations will also be made to broaden the Manpower Development and Training Act and increase the federal share of project costs to 90 per cent from the 66 per cent which would go into effect under present law in 1966.

Education — This budget recognizes the increasing federal responsibility to expand educational opportunity for all people and at all levels. It provides an increase in 1966 of over 60 per cent in new obligational authority and over 75 per cent in outlays.

The programs of the Office of Education alone are more than doubled in 1966.

About 30 per cent of the estimated increase in expenditures for education in 1966 is to carry out the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963, the Vocational Education Act of 1963, the Library Services and Construction Act of 1964, and the National Defense Education Act amendments of 1964.

— Veterans benefits and services under the basic, continuing compensation, pension, and medical care programs will be at record levels in 1966.

— Nearly 4½ million veterans or their survivors will receive compensation and pension payments.

— 690,000 veterans will be admitted to hospitals, domiciliary homes, or nursing homes.

Employee pay — In preparing this budget, I have given close attention to the matter of government pay.

I am appointing a special panel to make a prompt review of the present situation.

This panel will be composed equally of distinguished public members and officers of the executive branch.

It will report to me on April 1, 1965, after which I will make a recommendation to the Congress.

Provision has been made in the allowance for contingencies for a possible military and civilian pay increase.

PUBLIC DEBT

Changes in the amount of public debt from year to year reflect primarily the amount of the budget surplus or deficit. Based on the estimates presented in this budget, the debt on June 30, 1965, will be $316.9 billion and on June 30, 1966, $322.5 billion.

Under present law, the temporary debt limit of $324 billion will continue in effect through June 30, 1965. Then — if no action is taken — the permanent legislative ceiling of $285 billion will again become effective. It will be necessary, therefore, to raise the legal debt ceiling before that date.

REDUCING COSTS

This must be a year of renewal — a year that will accomplish much in bringing the public service to its highest state of readiness.

Government organization — We must reorganize and modernize the structure of the executive branch in order to focus responsibilities and increase efficiency.

I will shortly propose certain reorganizations which will constitute the initial and most urgent steps that I deem necessary to consolidate functions and strengthen coordination of related activities.

I will ask that permanent reorganization authority be granted to the President to initiate improvements in government organization, subject to the disapproval of the Congress.

Controlling employment — In this budget, as in the budget for 1965, I have insisted upon stringent criteria to control the growth of federal civilian employment.

It is important that we have enough people to carry on the government's business efficiently, but we must also see that we have no more employees than we need.

Realistic guidelines and goals have been established to aid administrators in the effective management of the government's large and diverse work force.

Controls on employment have been established for each agency.

To remove the guesswork from determination of employment needs, agencies are installing improved work measurement systems, and the Bureau of the Budget is providing advice and assistance in introducing measures of productivity into agency management systems.

Management improvement and cost reduction — Led by the outstanding performance of the Department of Defense, government agencies last year undertook cost reductions that saved almost $3.5 billion.

I am counting heavily on the continuation and acceleration of improvement efforts.

Among other things, we must:

—Continue our war on excessive paperwork.

—Increase our capacity to find and correct management weaknesses throughout the government.

— Re-examine our career services, making certain that they are all they should be with respect to selection, training, placement, promotion, rotation, retirement, and removal.

—Seek legislation that will remove legal barriers to efficient operation.

I have instructed the director of the Bureau of the Budget to give direction to a comprehensive government-wide cost reduction program to be put into effect in every department and agency.

CONCLUSION

No one of these goals is paramount at all times. Each must be balanced against the others to assure our continued progress toward a Great Society.

This progress does not rest on economic growth alone. It is aimed at improving the quality of our way of life. And it is aimed at insuring that all Americans share in this way of life.

It does mean spending more on some new and vital activities. But it also means cutting back or eliminating activities which are less urgent or no longer necessary.

Where there is waste, to end it; where there are needs, to meet them; where there are just hopes, to move toward their fulfillment — that is the object of the budget which I now submit to your consideration.

WASHINGTON, Jan 25 (AP)— This table from President Johnson's budget message today summarizes by federal agencies the proposed outlays of $99,687,000,000 (B) in fiscal 1966, starting next July 1, compared with the estimated outlays of fiscal 1965 and the actual spending in fiscal 1964, which ended last June 30 (in millions of dollars):

Country's Glory First, Churchill Told Boys

On one of his annual visits to Harrow, the school he attended when he was 12, Churchill had some philosophy for the new sons of Harrow.

"You are going out into the world," he told them. "You must never despair of your country's glory and never cease to labor for its enduring fame. Do not be daunted by dark signs. Do not be daunted by long monotony and wearing toil.

"Go forward unflinchingly, whether it be to cast lives away in the call of honor on the field of battle or whether it be in faithful toil of labor. Whatever it be, remember the reward is the same. You pass on to another generation the glories and happiness and virtue of our island home."

President's Budget Message

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a partial text of President Johnson's budget message to Congress today:

I am presenting to you today the budget of the United States for the fiscal year 1966.

A budget is a plan of action. It defines our goals, charts our courses, and outlines our expectations. It reflects hard decisions and difficult choices. This budget is no exception.

It is a budget of priorities. It provides for what we must do, but not for all we would like to do.

It is a budget of both opportunity and sacrifice. It begins to grasp the opportunities of the Great Society. It is restrained by the sacrifices we must continue to make in order to keep our defenses strong and flexible.

This budget provides reasonably for our needs. It is not extravagant. Neither is it miserly.

It stands on five basic principles:

— Government fiscal policies must promote national strength, economic progress, and individual opportunity.

— Our tax system must continue to be made less burdensome, more equitable, and more conducive to continued economic expansion.

— The Great Society must be a bold society. It must not fear to meet new challenges. It must not fail to seize new opportunities.

— The Great Society must be a compassionate society. It must always be responsive to human needs.

— The Great Society must be an efficient society. Less urgent programs must give way to needs. And each program, old and new, must be conducted with maximum efficiency, economy, and productivity.

The major features of the 1966 budget translate these principles into action.

First, excise taxes are substantially reduced. Social Security benefits, including hospital insurance, are increased. These are combined with other expenditure increases to yield an over-all fiscal policy designed to maintain our steady economic expansion.

Second, the budget supports a massive defense establishment of steadily growing power, within reduced outlays.

Third, our international and space programs are being advanced at a satisfactory rate, but with smaller increases than in earlier years.

Fourth, expanded programs and higher expenditures are proposed to:

— Provide better and more education for our children.

— Extend the war against poverty.

— Promote advances in the nation's health.

— Improve conditions in the urban areas where most of us live.

—Help the Appalachian region lift itself out of its present depressed condition.

— Strengthen our Social Security protection.

— Increase economic opportunities in rural communities.

— Encourage sound use of our national resources.

— Conserve natural beauty in our land.

Fifth, a large part of the funds for needed program expansion has come from savings, reductions, and economies in other parts of the budget.

FISCAL POLICY

This budget recognizes that a growing economy is needed to promote national strength and progress. It is also needed to move us toward a balanced budget.

Nearly four years ago, this nation began its fourth postwar economic expansion. With the help of last year's income tax reduction — the largest and most comprehensive ever enacted — this expansion has already outlasted each of the previous three postwar recoveries.

During the past four years, the nation's real output of goods and services — the Gross National Product — has grown at an average rate of about 5 per cent per year.

We must keep in mind that our economy is still producing at a level well below its potential. Nearly four million people are out of work. The unemployment rate is still nearly 5 per cent. Plants and machines are standing idle while human wants and needs go unmet. An estimated 35 million people continue to live in poverty.

The revenue and expenditure proposals presented in the 1966 budget are carefully designed to promote continued economic expansion and improved economic opportunities.

This budget takes into account the need to reduce the nation's balance of payments deficit. During the last calendar year, the deficit showed a significant decline. To help insure continued improvement, I will intensify efforts to carry out federal activities with the least possible burden on our balance of payments.

BUDGET SUMMARY

Administrative budget — Administrative budget expenditures are being held to $99.7 billion in 1966. Although expenditures will rise by a relatively small amount, they will decline as a per cent of the Gross National Product — to less than 15 per cent, the lowest ratio achieved in 15 years.

Administrative budget receipts are expected to increase in 1966 to $94.4 billion. This is $3.2 billion over the estimated level for 1965. This increase reflects the economic growth anticipated in calander year 1965. It also takes into account the revenue losses from proposed excise tax changes and from the second stage of income tax cuts enacted last year.

The resulting 1966 administrative budget deficit of $5.3 billion is $1 billion lower than the 1965 deficit, marking continued progress toward a balanced budget.

My budgets for both 1965 and 1966 have provided for major increases in areas of high national priority — particularly education, health, aid to the needy, housing, and the war on poverty. Also, for these two consecutive years, careful pruning of less urgent programs and vigorous cost reduction efforts have, on balance, resulttd in lower expenditures in other major sectors of the budget.

Consolidated case statement — A more comprehensive measure of the government's finances is the consolidated cash budget which covers all of the government's programs.

On the consolidated cash basis, total payments to the public are estimated at $127.4 billion in 1966. Total receipts from the public are estimated at $123.5 billion, resulting in a net excess of payments of $3.9 billion. The estimated increase of $6.0 billion in cash payments in 1966 over 1965 is mostly in trust funds which are financed by special taxes.

About $9.5 billion of the nondefense payments recommended in this budget—almost 2½ times the size of the entire cash deficit—represent an investment in physical and financial assets which will provide benefits to the nation for many years to come. These payments are made for federal civic publi works, equipment, and loans as well as for highways, hospitals, and other state, local and private assets.

Federal sector, national income accounts—another measure of federal finance which includes trust funds emphasizes the direct impact of government fiscal activities on the economy. This measure is based on the national income accounts. Under this concept, federal fiscal data are estimated on an accrual rather than a cash basis. Purely financial transactions—such as loans—which do not directly affect production or income are excluded. On this basis the deficit for 1966 is estimated at $6.0 billion.

Federal expenditures as measured by the national income accounts are estimated to rise by $6.0 billion in 1966. This increase—covering both purchases of goods and services and other types of payments—will provide a strong stimulus for continued economic growth.

FEDERAL REVENUES

The Revenue Act of 1964 has played a major role in widening and strengthening our prosperity. At the beginning of this month, the second stage of the rate reductions provided under the act became effective. In total, last year's tax law will decrease consumer and business tax liabilities by about $14 billion in the current calendar year.

With this substantial change in income taxes completed, it is now appropriate to revise and adjust excise taxes as well

Within the revenue requirements for continued progress toward a balanced budget, I believe it is vital that we correct the most pressing of these deficiencies this year. I plan to transmit to the Congress recommendations to repeal some excise taxes and reduce others

These changes should become effective July 1, 1965. They will reduce tax liabilities on a full-year basis by $1.75 billion. Revenues collected by the Treasury in 1966 will be reduced by $1.5 billion.

My other major revenue proposals this year involve important activities financed through trust funds.

I am recommending prompt enactment of a hospital insurance program for elderly persons, who are finding hospital and medical costs far greater than their ability to pay. This program should be self-financing, with a combined employer-employee payroll contribution of 0.6 per cent on the first $5,600 of income to start in calendar year 1966.

While I am recommending reductions in certain excise taxes, I am also proposing increases in certain other excise taxes which are in the nature of user charge.

The excise taxes for which I am recommending reduction or repeal are not associated with the provision of particular government services.

However, certain existing excises on transportation are in effect a charge for the use of facilities and services provided by the government.

In these cases, I am proposing changes in user charges for transportation so that different modes of transportation can compete on more equitable and efficient terms and users of special government services will pay a greater share of the costs.

The estimated cost of completing the interstate highway system — which is financed by highway user taxes — has recently been increased by $5.8 billion. To avoid serious delay in completing the system, while remaining on a pay-as-you-go basis, I will include in my excise tax proposals specific recommendations for increasing certain highway user charges.

In contrast to the users of the highways, the users of the airways and inland waterways bear considerably less than the full cost of the government investments and services provided them.

Accordingly I am recommending increased or new taxes on aviation gasoline and jet fuels and a new tax on air freight for commercial aviation.

Receipts from the existing line should be kept in the general fund rather than transferred to the highway trust fund and the 5 per cent ticket tax on air passengers should be made permanent. A fuel tax for inland waterway users is also being proposed.

I will continue to press for other user charges in government programs where benefits are provided to specific identifiable individuals and businesses.

Fairness to all taxpayers demands that those who enjoy special benefits should bear a greater share of the costs.

Legislation is needed for some of the charges such as patent and meat inspection fees. In other instances equitable user charges will be instituted through administrative action.

I will also present recommendations to correct certain abuses in the tax-exempt privileges enjoyed by private foundations.

NEW AUTHORITY

This budget includes new obligational authority for 1966 of $106.4 billion in the administrative budget.

— $93.5 billion of this requires congressional action this year.

— $12.9 billion represents permanent authorizations that do not require further congressional action, mainly the appropriation for interest on the public debt.

Most of the $34.5 billion in new obligational authority recommended for 1966 for trust funds represents revenues from special taxes which are automatically appropriated.

The 1965 estimate in the administrative budget includes $6.0 billion of recommended supplemental authorizations. These authorizations will provide funds for several programs for immediate consideration and enactment—for example, housing activities and aid to Appalachia.

PROGRAMS—COSTS

The soundness of a budget can only be judged by the merits of the programs it proposes and the levels of expenditure it recommends. For both old and new programs, merit turns on a weighing of benefits against costs.

The budget includes an allowance for contingencies of $650 million in new obligational authority and $400 million in expenditures. These amounts are larger than is customary. Their iclusion makes it clear that the budget totals are intended to provide adequately for meeting new needs that may arise or seizing new opportunities that may be presented.

Here are the highlights of my expenditure recommendations:

National defense — We cannot afford second-best defense forces. Neither can we afford to be wasteful.

Our defense forces have reached new levels of strength. With the rapid strides made in the past four years and the future gains already scheduled, our powerful modern forces will be adequate to their tasks for years to come.

However, we are able to reduce our defense expenditures in 1966 because:

—The buildup of our forces which started in 1961 is nearly complete.

—The vigorous cost reduction program of the Department of Defense is producing large savings.

—Less effective and less economical forces are being retired or reduced as promptly as possible.

International affairs and finance—We cannot achieve lasting world peace with armaments alone. Nor can greater worldwide prosperity be bought with money alone. These goals will be achieved only through the hard work, patience, understanding, and strength of men of good will everywhere.

The 1966 budget calls for only a very modest increase in foreign economic assistance expenditures. With these funds, we will continue to concentrate our aid efforts in those less-developed countries that are demonstrating the will and determination required to achieve political stability and economic growth.

We shall maintain our firm commitment to the Alliance for Progress — the focus of our efforts to achieve unity and understanding in this hemisphere.

This budget also enables us to:

—Continue our participation in and support for the United Nations.

—Maintain an adequate and alert netwoork of diplomatic posts around the world.

—Improve our overseas information activities, so that others may know us not just as a rich nation, but as a free and responsible nation as well.

—Expand the Peace Corps, by now a proven experiment in international cooperation.

In an important step to strengthen the free world's financial system, the members of the International Monetary Fund are considering an increase in quotas.

Upon completion of these discussions, expected shortly, I shall recommend that the Congress authorize promptly the funds needed to provide the U.S. share of this increase.

Space research and technology — This nation has embarked on a bold program of space exploration and research which holds promise of rich rewards in many fields of American life.

The costs are high — as we knew they would be when we launched this effort. We have seen a rise in annual expenditures for the space program from less than one-half billion dollars in 1960 to over $4 billion in 1964.

Expenditures are continuing to increase. However, we have built up momentum and are concentrating on our highest priority goals. Therefore, we will no longer need to increase space outlays by huge sums each year in order to meet our present objectives.

This budget proposes that expenditures increase by $200 million in 1966 over 1965. This is the smallest annual increase since 1959. The new obligational authority requested is about the same as enacted for 1965.

Agriculture and agricultural resources —The increased productive efficiency of our farms has contributed greatly to growth of the national economy.

However, because of lack of adequate employment opportunities, the rapidly declining need for people to operate our farms has also meant low incomes for all too many of our rural families.

We must therefore find ways to help provide a greater share of our national prosperity for those rurals families that do not farm or who can no longer look to farming as a sole source of income.

Progress toward this goal will be made both through broader programs to fight poverty and through programs specially aimed at increasing economic opportunities and improving living conditions for rural people. The latter include a proposal for an insured loan program which will help provide more and better housing in rural areas.

I shall shortly transmit to the Congress my recommendations to continue and improve our farm commodity programs.

Natural resources — During its last session, the Congress passed a number of far-reaching laws that will advance significantly the development, conservation, and use of our natural resources. They include the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act, the Wilderness Act, and the Water Resources Research Act. The 1966 budget will implement these measures.

The budget also recommends the start of 37 new projects by the Corps of Engineers, nine new projects by the Bureau of Reclamation, and five new projects by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

About two-thirds of the total expenditures for natural resources will be used to continue construction and operation of projects to provide water, control floods, improve navigation, and generate power.

The budget provides for a major expansion in research to develop improved technology for desalting water, including the use of nuclear energy. This program holds important promise in a world where water is a key to economic development and well-being.

I am also again recommending legislation to authorize river basin planning commissions and grants to states for planning the best use of water resources.

Commerce and transportation —I urge prompt congressional action to:

—Extend the program begun by the Area Redevelopment Act of 1961, now scheduled to expire on June 30, 1965.

—Amend the act so that federal aids can be concentrated in areas of greatest need and can emphasize the most effective types of assistance.

To encourage long-overdue improvements in surface transportation in our densely populated regions, I will propose legislation to authorize a comprehensive program of technical research and development on high-speed, intercity surface transport.

As a first step, we will begin demonstrations of possible improvements in existing rail passenger services in the northeast corridor of the nation.

By increase efficiency and productivity, the Post Office Department has been able to avoid a general increase in postal rates since calendar year 1962.

Despite these efforts, however, significant postal deficits are now estimated in the current and future years. At my request, a panel of distinguished citizens will consider whether certain postal rates should be increased to bring them into line with postal costs.

Housing and community development — The federal government's role in the nation's huge annual investment in housing and community development is largely indirect.

The government insures savings and loan accounts and mortgages, encouraging private investment and making large direct federal investments unnecessary. Today these insurance programs are involved in about half of the homes purchased or being built.

Yet, some direct federal aid is, and will remain, necessary.

In a message on housing and urban development, I will present my proposals for further extension of the federal-local-private partnership in meeting city problems.

Revitalized federal leadership through a new department of housing and urban development will be coupled with increased emphasis on comprehensive local planning.

Federal financial assistance will be offered to:

— Support the neighborhood facilities needed to serve the city's people.

— Increase the supply of low and moderate income housing.

— Continue the attack on urban blight.

— Encourage better standards of development and more adequate public facilities at the growing urban fringe.

Health, labor, and welfare — The Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 rededicated the nation to a vigorous attack on the causes of the poverty which grips one-fifth of our population — including 15 million children.

The 1966 budget provides for almost doubling the new obligational authority and quadrupling the expenditures for this effort.

These funds will:

— Support 300 urban and rural community action programs.

— Provide work opportunities, remedial education, and vocational training for 330,000 youths in the Job Corps and the neighborhood Youth Corps.

—Provide work-study opportunities for 100,000 needy college students and work experience for 110,000 unemployed adults.

—Support the Volunteers In Service to America; finance literacy training for adults; and assist migrant workers, farmers, and other low-income rural families.

In addition to hospital insurance for the aged, I am proposing legislation to provide an average 7 per cent increase in Social Security benefits, retroactive to January 1, 1965. The increase in benefit payments will amount to about $2 billion in 1966.

I am proposing legislation to authorize long overdue improvements in the unemployment insurance system.

Legislation will be recommended to increase the federal share of public assistance payments, establish a program of medical care for children in families unable to afford such care, and authorize payments for needy aged persons in mental and tuberculosis hospitals.

Recommendations will also be made to broaden the Manpower Development and Training Act and increase the federal share of project costs to 90 per cent from the 66 per cent which would go into effect under present law in 1966.

Education — This budget recognizes the increasing federal responsibility to expand educational opportunity for all people and at all levels. It provides an increase in 1966 of over 60 per cent in new obligational authority and over 75 per cent in outlays.

The programs of the Office of Education alone are more than doubled in 1966.

About 30 per cent of the estimated increase in expenditures for education in 1966 is to carry out the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963, the Vocational Education Act of 1963, the Library Services and Construction Act of 1964, and the National Defense Education Act amendments of 1964.

— Veterans benefits and services under the basic, continuing compensation, pension, and medical care programs will be at record levels in 1966.

— Nearly 4½ million veterans or their survivors will receive compensation and pension payments.

— 690,000 veterans will be admitted to hospitals, domiciliary homes, or nursing homes.

Employee pay — In preparing this budget, I have given close attention to the matter of government pay.

I am appointing a special panel to make a prompt review of the present situation.

This panel will be composed equally of distinguished public members and officers of the executive branch.

It will report to me on April 1, 1965, after which I will make a recommendation to the Congress.

Provision has been made in the allowance for contingencies for a possible military and civilian pay increase.

PUBLIC DEBT

Changes in the amount of public debt from year to year reflect primarily the amount of the budget surplus or deficit. Based on the estimates presented in this budget, the debt on June 30, 1965, will be $316.9 billion and on June 30, 1966, $322.5 billion.

Under present law, the temporary debt limit of $324 billion will continue in effect through June 30, 1965. Then — if no action is taken — the permanent legislative ceiling of $285 billion will again become effective. It will be necessary, therefore, to raise the legal debt ceiling before that date.

REDUCING COSTS

This must be a year of renewal — a year that will accomplish much in bringing the public service to its highest state of readiness.

Government organization — We must reorganize and modernize the structure of the executive branch in order to focus responsibilities and increase efficiency.

I will shortly propose certain reorganizations which will constitute the initial and most urgent steps that I deem necessary to consolidate functions and strengthen coordination of related activities.

I will ask that permanent reorganization authority be granted to the President to initiate improvements in government organization, subject to the disapproval of the Congress.

Controlling employment — In this budget, as in the budget for 1965, I have insisted upon stringent criteria to control the growth of federal civilian employment.

It is important that we have enough people to carry on the government's business efficiently, but we must also see that we have no more employees than we need.

Realistic guidelines and goals have been established to aid administrators in the effective management of the government's large and diverse work force.

Controls on employment have been established for each agency.

To remove the guesswork from determination of employment needs, agencies are installing improved work measurement systems, and the Bureau of the Budget is providing advice and assistance in introducing measures of productivity into agency management systems.

Management improvement and cost reduction — Led by the outstanding performance of the Department of Defense, government agencies last year undertook cost reductions that saved almost $3.5 billion.

I am counting heavily on the continuation and acceleration of improvement efforts.

Among other things, we must:

—Continue our war on excessive paperwork.

—Increase our capacity to find and correct management weaknesses throughout the government.

— Re - examine our career services, making certain that they are all they should be with respect to selection, training, placement, promotion, rotation, retirement, and removal.

—Seek legislation that will remove legal barriers to efficient operation.

I have instructed the director of the Bureau of the Budget to give direction to a comprehensive government-wide cost reduction program to be put into effect in every department and agency.

CONCLUSION

No one of these goals is paramount at all times. Each must be balanced against the others to assure our continued progress toward a Great Society.

This progress does not rest on economic growth alone. It is aimed at improving the quality of our way of life. And it is aimed at insuring that all Americans share in this way of life.

It does mean spending more on some new and vital activities. But it also means cutting back or eliminating activities which are less urgent or no longer necessary.

Where there is waste, to end it; where there are needs, to meet them; where there are just hopes, to move toward their fulfillment — that is the object of the budget which I now submit to your consideration.

WASHINGTON, Jan 25 (AP)— This table from President Johnson's budget message today summarizes by federal agencies the proposed outlays of $99,687,000,000 (B) in fiscal 1966, starting next July 1, compared with the estimated outlays of fiscal 1965 and the actual spending in fiscal 1964, which ended last June 30 (in millions of dollars):

Country's Glory First, Churchill Told Boys

On one of his annual visits to Harrow, the school he attended when he was 12, Churchill had some philosophy for the new sons of Harrow.

"You are going out into the world," he told them. "You must never despair of your country's glory and never cease to labor for its enduring fame. Do not be daunted by dark signs. Do not be daunted by long monotony and wearing toil.

"Go forward unflinchingly, whether it be to cast lives away in the call of honor on the field of battle or whether it be in faithful toil of labor. Whatever it be, remember the reward is the same. You pass on to another generation the glories and happiness and virtue of our island home."

Big Oil Warehouse Destroyed by Fire

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, (AP) — Fire destroyed a large warehouse and endangered thousands of barrels of oil at a Standard Oil Co. of California petroleum storage depot Saturday night.

The blaze raged uncontrolled for three hours and did at least $200,000 damage to a 200-yard metal office and warehouse, company officials reported. No one was injured.

The fire was blamed on a broken pump casing that sprayed gasoline around part of the warehouse. A spark evidently ignited the fuel.

Ecuador is short of water.

Four Americans Captured by Viet Cong Reds

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Communists who captured four Americans while they were fishing Saturday apparently executed one of them on the spot.

U.S. officials reported today that the body of one of the Americans was found floating in the water near the group's boat, a rope around its neck, the feet tied and with a bullet hole in the back of the head.

The body of another of the soldiers was found earlier. The other two are missing and presumed either captured or killed by the Viet Cong.

The defense department in Washington said the dead soldiers were Sgt. James T. H. Cordova of Glen Burnie, Md., and Spec. 4 Roger L. Buss of Cottage Grove, Wis.

Their deaths brought to 24 the number of Americans killed as a result of enemy action in Viet Nam since December 1961.

The missing men were Spec. 4 William E. Swaykos of Bloomfield, N.J., and Sgt. Harold E. Strong Jr. of Alexandria, Va.

The four soldiers went fishing Saturday in a cove near the coastal city of Qui Nhon, 270 miles northeast of Saigon. They had two rifles among them.

When they failed to return Saturday night, a search was started. Helicopters spotted the boat and one body Sunday, and the other body was found Sunday night nearby.

Mansfield Proposes 'Speedy Action'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield has decided on a get-well gift for President Johnson, hospitalized with a sore throat.

The Montana Democrat suggested speedy action on the Johnson legislative program.

Mansfield said the Appalachia development bill and a water pollution measure should be reported out of committee this week, and that hearings on the administration's health care plan should be scheduled soon.

Also listed for early Senate action is a constitutional amendment which would provide for filling the vice presidency when there is a vacancy and spell out methods of dealing with the disability of a president.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market moved generally higher early Monday afternoon despite softness in some groups. Trading was moderately active.

Gains and losses of leading issues were from fractions to a point or so. The trend was up for autos, steels, chemicals, building materials, rails and electronics.

Aerospace issues were weak as President Johnson's budget message focused further attention on plans to whittle about $1 billion from the defense budget.

Airlines were lower. The trend was lower also among farm implements and mail order-retails.

Trading was halted for two minutes on the New York Stock Exchange in tribute to the memory of Winston Churchill.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .6 at 334.5, with industrials up 1.0, rails up .4 and utilities off .1.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.48 at 895.07.

The AP average was moving above its recent closing high. The Dow Industries were a little below their latest record.

National Airlines was down about a point and Eastern Air Lines well over a point on news that Northeast Airlines had rejected a $15 million offer from the two carriers to give up its lucrative Florida run where the the carriers compete. Pan American was off nearly a point.

As aerospace issues declined, United Aircraft fell more than a point, Boeing neary a point, others fractions.

IBM cut an early loss of more than 2 to a fraction. Polaroid rose more than 2.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were mixed.

For a While Barry Still Campaigned

By WALTER R. MEARS

CHICAGO (AP) — For a while Barry Goldwater was back on the campaign stump.

He was, in effect, relinquishing his six-month command of the Republican party.

But the beaten presidential nominee coupled an apology to Republicans with an attack on Democrats.

The campaign speech was a bit rusty, but the themes he hammered at during his race against President Johnson were still there.

And Goldwater was personally accepting the responsibility for his landslide loss in November.

"Let's stop blaming everyone else for this defeat I suffered," the former Arizona senator said Friday. The Republican National Committee already had accepted the resignation of his chosen national chairman, Dean Burch, and elected Ray C. Bliss to take over.

Goldwater said Burch was blamed for decisions the nominee made himself.

"If mistakes were made, it was my fault," Goldwater said. "If television was no good, that's my fault. If the speeches were no good, that was my fault. I didn't have to make them, but I liked them. I thought they put my point across.

"I picked Dean Burch," Goldwater said. "I picked my team. I picked my writers.

"I'm sorry that I couldn't produce better results. I'm sorry that so many good men went down with me," he added.

But he told the Republicans, "We were not fighting the Democratic party, we were fighting the federal government in the presidential race."

Aerospace issues were weak as President Johnson's budget message focused further attention on plans to whittle about $1 billion from the defense budget.

Airlines were lower. The trend was lower also among farm implements and mail order-retails.

Trading was halted for two minutes on the New York Stock Exchange in tribute to the memory of Winston Churchill.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .6 at 334.5, with industrials up 1.0, rails up .4 and utilities off .1.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.48 at 895.07.

The AP average was moving above its recent closing high. The Dow Industries were a little below their latest record.

National Airlines was down about a point and Eastern Air Lines well over a point on news that Northeast Airlines had rejected a $15 million offer from the two carriers to give up its lucrative Florida run where the the carriers compete. Pan American was off nearly a point.

As aerospace issues declined, United Aircraft fell more than a point, Boeing neary a point, others fractions.

IBM cut an early loss of more than 2 to a fraction. Polaroid rose more than 2.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were mixed.

For a While Barry Still Campaigned

By WALTER R. MEARS

CHICAGO (AP) — For a while Barry Goldwater was back on the campaign stump.

He was, in effect, relinquishing his six-month command of the Republican party.

But the beaten presidential nominee coupled an apology to Republicans with an attack on Democrats.

The campaign speech was a bit rusty, but the themes he hammered at during his race against President Johnson were still there.

And Goldwater was personally accepting the responsibility for his landslide loss in November.

"Let's stop blaming everyone else for this defeat I suffered," the former Arizona senator said Friday. The Republican National Committee already had accepted the resignation of his chosen national chairman, Dean Burch, and elected Ray C. Bliss to take over.

Goldwater said Burch was blamed for decisions the nominee made himself.

"If mistakes were made, it was my fault," Goldwater said. "If television was no good, that's my fault. If the speeches were no good, that was my fault. I didn't have to make them, but I liked them. I thought they put my point across.

"I picked Dean Burch," Goldwater said. "I picked my team. I picked my writers.

"I'm sorry that I couldn't produce better results. I'm sorry that so many good men went down with me," he added.

But he told the Republicans, "We were not fighting the Democratic party, we were fighting the federal government in the presidential race."

Runner headed Goalward Usually Gets the Ball

By SAM CAMPBELL

When I was a kid, we used to play basketball with a single goal mounted just below the hayloft on the barnside. The way you play single - goal basketball is to dodge around a bit and scream for somebody to throw you the ball.

In a few years, we graduated to a gymnasium that had two goals. But for awhile I played the game in the same old way. I would dodge about and scream, but no one would throw me the ball. Then one day I made a marvelous discovery.

Instead of dodging and screaming, I started running — toward our goal. To my amazement somebody actually did throw me the ball I went in for the setup but missed. Nevertheless, that same day I tried running for the goal again, and sure enough the ball arrived. I came out of the game highpoint man.

The lesson lingers on. We capitalists spend a great deal of time dodging and screaming. As our socialist opponents say, we are too negative. The time has come for us to run for the goal. If we do, we can confidently expect that someone will throw us the ball.

What I propose is something like this:

Let us draw up the basic documents for a truly and totally free-enterprise society. Let us live and do business as nearly as we can in accordance with the structure of that society.

Continue To Obey

Of course we must continue to obey the rules and the regulations that our socialist friends impose upon us. We continue to pay the taxes that are exacted. Wherever necessary we continue to protect ourselves from civil liability by making the appropriate reference to the existing socialized civil law.

But while so doing, we subscribe also to a higher law the natural law, which is well documented — and between ourselves we write our contracts on that basis and arrange for private arbitration in event disputes cannot be resolved by informal discussion.

The natural law, by similar processes, becomes the basis of agreement between employer and employe; between buyer and seller, between retailer and customer.

My confidence is that a free society — even though formed in the midst of a socialist structure, even though entangled, even though impeded — will be able to out-compete its socialist counterparts, will be able to beat their price in the marketplace.

Not only that, but our socialist friends will be able to see not only that we are getting ahead faster than they, but that our system really does work just as we today tell them it will work.

When the socialists perceive that our system is working better than their system, they will have to do one of two things. Either they will have to speed up their destructivity, or they will have to witness the steady demolition of their own cherished empire. The result will be the same in both cases, the emergence of a free society.

History shows that new systems typically rise on new ground or upon the leveled ruins of old systems. But a footnote or two tells us that new social structures also can rise amid the standing landmarks of an existing order.

In short, we have graduated to a new stage of the contest. It is time to run toward the goal.

Local Motel Cited by Travelmats Co.

The Iowa Motel has been cited by Travelmats Corporation of America, Prairie du Chien, Wis. as one of the outstanding traveler stops in this part of the country.

J. Alvin Dru'yor, president of Travelmats, the largest travel-study agency of its kind in the nation, made the announcement following inspection of the local facilities including location, maintenance, services and value received by customers.

The recognition includes a prominent listing in Travelmats' current official issue of Travel Guide, an internationally distributed book for tourists; and publication of a highway placemat which will pinpoint the tourist attraction's location here.

Recognition came only after study by Travelmat representatives who annually review tourist stops on more than 150,000 miles of the nation's major highways.

Local residents planning trips during the coming vacation seasons may benefit from this listing too, Dru'yor said. A Copy of Travel Guide is available at the honored business place, either for loan or purchase.

Local residents as well as travelers will also enjoy reading the Travelmat placemants, Dry'yor predicted. In addition to helping call traveler-attention to the local businesses, these Travel Guides and placemats will help draw tourists to the area in general, he said.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — What's in a name, well it can be displeasing to some folks if a street is called a "dead end," according to Arthur Daniel, traffic engineer. Street signs are being replaced to read "No Outlet" instead of "Dead End."

McKesson Co. Profits Up on Record Volume

Consolidated net income of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1964, was $8,960,215, equivalent to $2.11 per share, according to unaudited figures released by Herman C. Nolen, chairman.

This represents an 11.4 per cent increase in earnings for the nine -month period, with all major departments of the Company reflecting increased earnings.

In the corresponding period of 1963, income was $8,041,869, equivalent to $1.90 per share.

Sales for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1964 were $633,380,713, a 7.5 per cent increase over sales of $589,419,238 in the previous year. Nolen reported that all major departments of the Company contributed to this volume gain, which established a record nine months for McKesson.

Consolidated net income of McKesson & Robbins for the fiscal year third quarter ended Dec. 31, 1964, amounted to $3,657,770. This was equivalent to 86 cents per share on 4,242,042 common shares outstanding.

In the corresponding quarter of the previous fiscal year, net income was $3,396,930, or 80 cents per share on 4,228,044 common shares outstanding.

Sales in the fiscal year third third quarter amounted to $231,132,640, compared with $214,700,982 for the same period in 1963.

TOO FAST OR TOO SLOW

MOBERLY, Mo. (AP) — A man from Kansas City, Kan., was arrested here for speeding—and for driving too slowly—all within a matter of minutes. Bob Tumin was halted by a radar unit officer for speeding and ordered to report to the city's police station. He did, but he drove about nine miles an hour and tied up traffic on a business route through the city and was nabbed again. His too-fast-too-slow driving cost him $32 in court.

Sears Catalog Features Variety Of New Items

A water-purifier for the home. . .handcrafted rugs, jewelry and native art objects from South America. . .an apartment house for birds — these are intriguing samples of new items in Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s 1965 Spring-Summer general catalog, now being distributed here.

The water purifier, an entirely new kitchen appliance, will remove mineral impurities from ordinary water and even makes sea water drinkable. It is designed to produce spring-fresh water which alone can release the full flavor of coffee, tea, soups, juices and instant foods.

The South American items — displayed in four colorful pages in the new catalog — are offered by Sears in cooperation with the government's Alliance for Progress program, which is designed to stimulate the economies of underdeveloped Latin American nations.

The apartment house for birds is designed to attract colonies of Purple Martins — one of nature's most prodigious insect destroyers — into taking up residence. The Purple Martin, largest of the swallows, often eats his own weight (about eight ounces) in flying insects each day. That, Sears points out, is equivalent to about 2,000 mosquitos!

Sears'' new catalog, which is 1,612 pages thick and weighs five pounds, contains approximately 140,000 items ranging from a two-cent chain hook to a $3,450 cabin cruiser. It is being distributed to nearly 11 million families throughout the nation, a process which will take about six weeks.

Leading off the book is a 20-page section which features outstanding examples of new and improved merchandise. Highlights include:

— An innovation in swimwear for young juniors — bathing suits sold by the piece. Bra tops, trunks, and cover-ups are sold separately — so different size tops and trunks may be selected for better fit, and colors may be mixed or matched. Thirteen outfit combinations are possible from the collection.

— A dramatic outdoor low-voltage lighting system in which six colored-lens spotlights can be placed anywhere along a 125-foot cable to add an aura of beauty-in-color to back yard or patio.

— A campers' tent feautring an exclusive one-piece telescoping aluminum frame for easier, quicker setting up.

— A fashion exclusive in yard goods — lock-lined lace, for the professional look of an elegantly lined garment without the trouble of double cutting and sewing.

Also being introduced in the catalog is a collection of colorful Rya rugs from Scandinavia, reviving a weaving art developed almost 4,000 years ago by the Vikings.

The fashion "look" in the catalog emphasizes white and pastel colors in coats and suits, as well as in dresses and sportswear. Long evening dresses are more in evidence than in previous years, as are ensembles of all kinds — coats-and-dresses, three-piece suits, and dresses-and-jackets.

Nearly one-third of the book is in full color. It includes 563 pages of wearing apparel for the family, 27 pages of home furnishings, 313 pages of home improvement items, 212 pages of automotive, recreation and garden equipment, and 64 pages of home appliances.

Man in Hospital From Gunshot Wound in Temple

A man identified as Jo W. Atkinson, 61, 10 Boulder Crescent, was admitted to Penrose Hospital Saturday suffering from a self-inflicted gnushot wound in his right temple, police reported.

Atkinson was described by his wife as being despondent because he was out of work. He lost his job when the Antlers Hotel was torn down, according to the report.

Police said he suffered the .22 caliber rifle wound at approximately 7:15 p.m. Saturday, and was taken to Penrose Hospital by E & E Ambulance.

When Atkinson was asked by a doctor at the hospital what had happened, he answered "I shot myself," according to the report. Atkinson was listed under intensive care in fair condition this morning.

Woman Injured By Gasoline Fire

Mrs. Hattie Kirkland, 1912 Meyers Ave., suffered possible first and second degree burns Sunday night at her home. She had cleaned some clothing in gasoline and then put the articles in a washing machine and started it up. In some way a spark was struck and the flames spread to her and her clothing.

The Fire Department was called at 8:08 p.m. and Companies 1 and 2 and a Fire Department car responded. Resuscitator action was not taken, The patient was taken to the Ent Air Force Hospital.

Stock Exchange Enjoys Best Year in '64

The New York Stock Exchange marked the eleventh anniversary of the Monthly Investment Plan today with the announcement that its invest-on-a budget program enjoyed its best year ever in 1964.

A total of 124,302 plans were in operation at year-end, topping the previous high of 122,955 set at the end of November. Net gain for the year was 27,493, the largest annual gain ever achieved by MIP. Previously the biggest year was 1956, when MIP increased by 17,542 plans.

The December increase marked the twelfth consecutive month in which MIP showed a gain.

Another high registered last year was in total plans opened — 61,561 — well above the previous high of 45,593 in 1959. During the year, 34,068 plans were terminated, the lowest since 1960. Terminations are for various reasons, such as the opening of regular accounts or the completion of a stock purchase.

On the average, 241 plans were begu neach day in 1964, bettering the 1959 daily average of 180.

For the first time in a single year, MIP investors purchased more than a million shares of stock — 1,109,529 shares, to be exact — in 1964. The previous high of 989,573 shares was set in 1960.

At the end of December, 96.1 per cent of all plans elected to reinvest dividends automatically, an optional feature of MIP. This was an all-time high, bettering the mark of 96 per cent established in November.

From the inauguration of the Monthly Invesment Plan on January 25, 1954, through December 1964, 413,418 accounts have been opened. During the same period, 8,534,100 shares of stock have been purchased at a cost of more than $347 million.

Under MIP:

. . .There are no down payments, no balances to pay, and no debt.

. . .Automatic dollar-cost averaging gives you more shares of stock when prices go down, fewer when prices rise, for the same dollar investment.

. . .Participants are not bound by any contract to make purchases on a specific date.

. . .Purchases may be skipped or payments may be larger than usual, at the discretion of the investor.

. . .The plan may be terminated at any time without penalty.

. . .The commission is the same as paid on any odd-lot transactions on the exchange; there are no starting fees, dues, or custody charges.

. . .Plans may be in effect in several stocks simultaneously or at alternate dates, such as three quarterly plans with a payment due each month. About two out of three plans now in effect are on a quarterly basis.

. . .Payments may be made by mail, and after each purchase a confirmation is sent showing the status of the account.

Runner headed Goalward Usually Gets the Ball

By SAM CAMPBELL

When I was a kid, we used to play basketball with a single goal mounted just below the hayloft on the barnside. The way you play single - goal basketball is to dodge around a bit and scream for somebody to throw you the ball.

In a few years, we graduated to a gymnasium that had two goals. But for awhile I played the game in the same old way. I would dodge about and scream, but no one would throw me the ball. Then one day I made a marvelous discovery.

Instead of dodging and screaming, I started running — toward our goal. To my amazement somebody actually did throw me the ball I went in for the setup but missed. Nevertheless, that same day I tried running for the goal again, and sure enough the ball arrived. I came out of the game highpoint man.

The lesson lingers on. We capitalists spend a great deal of time dodging and screaming. As our socialist opponents say, we are too negative. The time has come for us to run for the goal. If we do, we can confidently expect that someone will throw us the ball.

What I propose is something like this:

Let us draw up the basic documents for a truly and totally free-enterprise society. Let us live and do business as nearly as we can in accordance with the structure of that society.

Continue To Obey

Of course we must continue to obey the rules and the regulations that our socialist friends impose upon us. We continue to pay the taxes that are exacted. Wherever necessary we continue to protect ourselves from civil liabilty by making the appropriate reference to the existing socialized civil law.

But while so doing, we subscribe also to a higher law the natural law, which is well documented — and between ourselves we write our contracts on that basis and arrange for private arbitration in event disputes cannot be resolved by informal discussion.

The natural law, by similar processes, becomes the basis of agreement between employer and employe; between buyer and seller, between retailer and customer.

My confidence is that a free society — even though formed in the midst of a socialist structure, even though entangled, even though impeded — will be able to out-compete its socialist counterparts, will be able to beat their price in the marketplace.

Not only that, but our socialist friends will be able to see not only that we are getting ahead faster than they, but that our system really does work just as we today tell them it will work.

When the socialists perceive that our system is working better than their system, they will have to do one of two things. Either they will have to speed up their destructivity, or they will have to witness the steady demolition of their own cherished empire. The result will be the same in both cases, the emergence of a free society.

History shows that new systems typically rise on new ground or upon the leveled ruins of old systems. But a footnote or two tells us that new social structures also can rise amid the standing landmarks of an existing order.

In short, we have graduated to a new stage of the contest. It is time to run toward the goal.

Local Motel Cited by Travelmats Co.

The Iowa Motel has been cited by Travelmats Corporation of America, Prairie du Chien, Wis. as one of the outstanding traveler stops in this part of the country.

J. Alvin Dru'yor, president of Travelmats, the largest travel-study agency of its kind in the nation, made the announcement following inspection of the local facilities including location, maintenance, services and value received by customers.

The recognition includes a prominent listing in Travelmats' current official issue of Travel Guide, an internationally distributed book for tourists; and publication of a highway placemat which will pinpoint the tourist attraction's location here.

Recognition came only after study by Travelmat representatives who annually review tourist stops on more than 150,000 miles of the nation's major highways.

Local residents planning trips during the coming vacation seasons may benefit from this listing too, Dru'yor said. A Copy of Travel Guide is available at the honored business place, either for loan or purchase.

Local residents as well as travelers will also enjoy reading the Travelmat placemants, Dry'yor predicted. In addition to helping call traveler-attention to the local businesses, these Travel Guides and placemats will help draw tourists to the area in general, he said.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — What's in a name, well it can be displeasing to some folks if a street is called a "dead end," according to Arthur Daniel, traffic engineer. Street signs are being replaced to read "No Outlet" instead of "Dead End."

McKesson Co. Profits Up on Record Volume

Consolidated net income of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1964, was $8,960,215, equivalent to $2.11 per share, according to unaudited figures released by Herman C. Nolen, chairman.

This represents an 11.4 per cent increase in earnings for the nine -month period, with all major departments of the Company reflecting increased earnings.

In the corresponding period of 1963, income was $8,041,869, equivalent to $1.90 per share.

Sales for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1964 were $633,380,713, a 7.5 per cent increase over sales of $589,419,238 in the previous year. Nolen reported that all major departments of the Company contributed to this volume gain, which established a record nine months for McKesson.

Consolidated net income of McKesson & Robbins for the fiscal year third quarter ended Dec. 31, 1964, amounted to $3,657,770. This was equivalent to 86 cents per share on 4,242,042 common shares outstanding.

In the corresponding quarter of the previous fiscal year, net income was $3,396,930, or 80 cents per share on 4,228,044 common shares outstanding.

Sales in the fiscal year third third quarter amounted to $231,132,640, compared with $214,700,982 for the same period in 1963.

TOO FAST OR TOO SLOW

MOBERLY, Mo. (AP) — A man from Kansas City, Kan., was arrested here for speeding—and for driving too slowly—all within a matter of minutes. Bob Tumin was halted by a radar unit officer for speeding and ordered to report to the city's police station. He did, but he drove about nine miles an hour and tied up traffic on a business route through the city and was nabbed again. His too-fast-too-slow driving cost him $32 in court.

Sears Catalog Features Variety Of New Items

A water-purifier for the home. . .handcrafted rugs, jewelry and native art objects from South America. . .an apartment house for birds — these are intriguing samples of new items in Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s 1965 Spring-Summer general catalog, now being distributed here.

The water purifier, an entirely new kitchen appliance, will remove mineral impurities from ordinary water and even makes sea water drinkable. It is designed to produce spring-fresh water which alone can release the full flavor of coffee, tea, soups, juices and instant foods.

The South American items — displayed in four colorful pages in the new catalog — are offered by Sears in cooperation with the government's Alliance for Progress program, which is designed to stimulate the economies of underdeveloped Latin American nations.

The apartment house for birds is designed to attract colonies of Purple Martins — one of nature's most prodigious insect destroyers — into taking up residence. The Purple Martin, largest of the swallows, often eats his own weight (about eight ounces) in flying insects each day. That, Sears points out, is equivalent to about 2,000 mosquitos!

Sears'' new catalog, which is 1,612 pages thick and weighs five pounds, contains approximately 140,000 items ranging from a two-cent chain hook to a $3,450 cabin cruiser. It is being distributed to nearly 11 million families throughout the nation, a process which will take about six weeks.

Leading off the book is a 20-page section which features outstanding examples of new and improved merchandise. Highlights include:

— An innovation in swimwear for young juniors — bathing suits sold by the piece. Bra tops, trunks, and cover-ups are sold separately — so different size tops and trunks may be selected for better fit, and colors may be mixed or matched. Thirteen outfit combinations are possible from the collection.

— A dramatic outdoor low-voltage lighting system in which six colored-lens spotlights can be placed anywhere along a 125-foot cable to add an aura of beauty-in-color to back yard or patio.

— A campers' tent feautring an exclusive one-piece telescoping aluminum frame for easier, quicker setting up.

— A fashion exclusive in yard goods — lock-lined lace, for the professional look of an elegantly lined garment without the trouble of double cutting and sewing.

Also being introduced in the catalog is a collection of colorful Rya rugs from Scandinavia, reviving a weaving art developed almost 4,000 years ago by the Vikings.

The fashion "look" in the catalog emphasizes white and pastel colors in coats and suits, as well as in dresses and sportswear. Long evening dresses are more in evidence than in previous years, as are ensembles of all kinds — coats-and-dresses, three-piece suits, and dresses-and-jackets.

Nearly one-third of the book is in full color. It includes 563 pages of wearing apparel for the family, 27 pages of home furnishings, 313 pages of home improvement items, 212 pages of automotive, recreation and garden equipment, and 64 pages of home appliances.

Man in Hospital From Gunshot Wound in Temple

A man identified as Jo W. Atkinson, 61, 10 Boulder Crescent, was admitted to Penrose Hospital Saturday suffering from a self-inflicted gnushot wound in his right temple, police reported.

Atkinson was described by his wife as being despondent because he was out of work. He lost his job when the Antlers Hotel was torn down, according to the report.

Police said he suffered the .22 caliber rifle wound at approximately 7:15 p.m. Saturday, and was taken to Penrose Hospital by E & E Ambulance.

When Atkinson was asked by a doctor at the hospital what had happened, he answered "I shot myself," according to the report. Atkinson was listed under intensive care in fair condition this morning.

Woman Injured By Gasoline Fire

Mrs. Hattie Kirkland, 1912 Meyers Ave., suffered possible first and second degree burns Sunday night at her home. She had cleaned some clothing in gasoline and then put the articles in a washing machine and started it up. In some way a spark was struck and the flames spread to her and her clothing.

The Fire Department was called at 8:08 p.m. and Companies 1 and 2 and a Fire Department car responded. Resuscitator action was not taken. The patient was taken to the Ent Air Force Hospital.

Stock Exchange Enjoys Best Year in '64

The New York Stock Exchange marked the eleventh anniversary of the Monthly Investment Plan today with the announcement that its invest-on-a budget program enjoyed its best year ever in 1964.

A total of 124,302 plans were in operation at year-end, topping the previous high of 122,955 set at the end of November. Net gain for the year was 27,493, the largest annual gain ever achieved by MIP. Previously the biggest year was 1956, when MIP increased by 17,542 plans.

The December increase marked the twelfth consecutive month in which MIP showed a gain.

Another high registered last year was in total plans opened — 61,561 — well above the previous high of 45,593 in 1959. During the year, 34,068 plans were terminated, the lowest since 1960. Terminations are for various reasons, such as the opening of regular accounts or the completion of a stock purchase.

On the average, 241 plans were begu neach day in 1964, bettering the 1959 daily average of 180.

For the first time in a single year, MIP investors purchased more than a million shares of stock — 1,109,529 shares, to be exact — in 1964. The previous high of 989,573 shares was set in 1960.

At the end of December, 96.1 per cent of all plans elected to reinvest dividends automatically, an optional feature of MIP. This was an all-time high, bettering the mark of 96 per cent established in November.

From the inauguration of the Monthly Invesment Plan on January 25, 1954, through December 1964, 413,418 accounts have been opened. During the same period, 8,534,100 shares of stock have been purchased at a cost of more than $347 million.

Under MIP:

. . .There are no down payments, no balances to pay, and no debt.

. . .Automatic dollar-cost averaging gives you more shares of stock when prices go down, fewer when prices rise, for the same dollar investment.

. . .Participants are not bound by any contract to make purchases on a specific date.

. . .Purchases may be skipped or payments may be larger than usual, at the discretion of the investor.

. . .The plan may be terminated at any time without penalty.

. . .The commission is the same as paid on any odd-lot transactions on the exchange; there are no starting fees, dues, or custody charges.

. . .Plans may be in effect in several stocks simultaneously or at alternate dates, such as three quarterly plans with a payment due each month. About two out of three plans now in effect are on a quarterly basis.

. . .Payments may be made by mail, and after each purchase a confirmation is sent showing the status of the account.

Old Museum Guns Bluff by Churchill

Though Britain was in great peril right after Dunkerque, Churchill defiantly warned Hitler than any attempt at invasion would find the British defending their island to the last.

"We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills, we shall never surrender," he declared. The invasion was not attempted.

Two years later Churchill made a speech in which he chided the Nazis for being bluffed.

"Look at the mistake that Hitler made in not trying invasion in 1940," he said. "We had not, at that time, 50 tanks; we had a couple of hundred field guns, some of them brought out of museums."

"I've never seen a rat race, but my daddy goes to one every day."

Oratory Was Like Blend of Colors

Churchill's oratory was a finely-tooled product. It was his old friend, Lord Birkenhead, who equipped that he had "devoted the best years of his life to the preparation of his impromptu speeches." His voice was husky, he always had trouble with the letter "s," his delivery was not exceptional — but his words were golden.

Words to Churchill were like the bricks and mortar he liked to lay so carefully as an amateur bricklayer, like the colors he loved to blend brightly in his capable but untutored landscape painting.

He spoke best in adversity in such moving language as "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat," or "we are fighting by ourselves alone but we are not fighting for ourselves alone."

When Churchil spoke the world listened.

BELL TOLLS AGAIN

DELTONA, Fla. (AP) — A bell cast in 1859 is coming out of retirement for the second time.

The bell, manufactured in West Troy, N.Y., clanged for 25 years on a railroad locomotive plying between New York and Florida. Retired from this service, it called pupils to class at a one-room schoolhouse near Pierson, Fla., for half a century.

With the passing of the one-room schoolhouse era the bell fell silent for 30 years. Now it has been dusted off and installed in a Deltona building which will be used as an adult education center.

Many Famous Quotations Attributed to Churchill

By The Associated Press

"I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat." (At the time he became Prime Minister.)

"We shall defend our island whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills, we shall never surrender."

"You ask, what is our policy? I say it is to wage war by land, sea and air, war with all our might and with all the strength that God has given us; to wage war against a monstrous tyranny never surpassed in the dark and lamentable catalogue of human crime. That is our policy. You ask what is our aim and I can answer in one word. It is victory. . .

'Even though large tracts of Europe and many old famous states have fallen, or many fall, into the grip of the Gestapo and all the odious apparatus of Nazi rule, we shall not flag nor fail, we shall go onto the end."

"We shall fight him (Hitler) by land, we shall fight him by sea, we shall fight him in the air, until with God's help, we have rid the earth of his shadow and liberated his peoples from the yoke."

"If we can stand up to him, all Europe will be free. . . Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duty, and so bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men will still say, 'This was their finest hour.'"

"Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few." (Tribute to the RAF during blitz.)

"We are fighting by ourselves alone; but we are not fighting for ourselves alone." (After the fall of France.)

"Good night, then; sleep to gather strength for the morning, for the morning will come. Brightly will it shine on the brave and true, the kindly, on all who suffer for the cause, and gloriously upon the tombs of heroes. Thus will shine the dawn. Vive La France!. . ." (From Broadcast to French people in autumn of 1940 when Germans were trying to woo France into the Axis.)

"Munich is a defeat without a war," (A protest against the Chamberlain government's appeasement-of-Hitler policy at Munich in 1938.)

"At 4 o'clock this morning Hitler attacked and invaded Russia. All his usual formalities of perfidy were observed with scrupulous technique." (at time German armies invaded Soviet Russia.)

"Hitler is a monster of wickedness, insatiable in his lust for blood and plunder. . . So now this bloodthirsty guttersnipe must launch his mechanized armies upon new fields of slaughter, pillage and devastation."

"This whipped jackal (Mussolini), who, to save his own skin, has made of Italy a vassal state of Hitler's empire, is frisking up by the side of the German tiger with yelps not only of appetite—that could be understood—but even of triumph."

"The dictator in all his pride is held in the grip of his party regime. He can go forward; he cannot go back. He must blood his hounds and show them sport, or else be destroyed by them. All strong without, he is all weak within."

"Do not let us speak of darker days. Let us speak rather of sterner days. These are not dark days; these are great days —the greatest days our country has ever lived; and we must all thank God that we have been allowed, each of us according to our stations, to play a part in making these days memorable in the history of our race."

"We need not bewail the fact that we have been called upon to face such solemn responsibilities. We may be proud and even rejoice amid our tribulations that we have been born at this cardinal time for so great an age, so splendid an opportunity of service here below."

"The day will come when the joy bells will ring again throughout Europe and when vitorious nations, masters not only of their foes but of themselves, will plan and build in justice, in tradition and in freedom a house of many mansions, where there will be room for all."

"We do not need the gallant armies which are forming throughout the American Union. We do not need them this year nor next year nor any year that I can foresee. But we do need most urgently ammunition and materials. . ." (Feb. 10, 1941.)

"Here is the answer that I will give to President Roosevelt: Put your confidence in us. Give us your faith and your blessing, and, under Providence, all will be well. We shall not fail or falter; we shall not weaken or tire. . . Give us the tools and we will finish the job."

"Undoubtedly this process (cooperation) means that these two great organizations of the English-speaking democracies . . . will have to be somewhat mixed up together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage. For my part . . . I do not view the process with any misgivings; no one can stop it. Like the Mississippi, it just keeps rolling along. Let it roll. Let it roll on full flood, inexorable, irresistable, benighter days."

"They (Britain and the United States) are now warrior nations walking in fear, of the Lord, very heavily armed and with an increasingly clear view of their salvation." (After Pearl Harbor.)

"I have never promi ed anything but blood, toil, tears and sweat. Now, however, we have a new experience. We have victory. The bright gleam has caught the helmets of our soldiers and warmed and cheered all our hearts." (After the rout of the Germans in Egypt.)

"Little did we guess that what has been called the Century of the Common Man would witness as its outstanding feature more common men killing each other with greater facilities than any other five centuries put together in the history of the world."

(It is) "with deep grief that I watch the clattering down of the British Empire with all its glories and all the services it has rendered to mankind." (Protest against plan for independence of India during the Labor regime.)

"The British Empire seems to be running off almost as fast as the American loan." (Comment uring debate on BDURMA'S independence.)

'888

"From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an Iron Curtain has descended across the Continent." (A reference to Russia's sphere after World War II.)

"Let us then move forward together in discharge of our mission and our duty, fearing God and nothing else."

"I am nearing the end of my journey." (on his 80th birthday.)

Woman Arrested in Counterfeit Probe

DENVER (AP)—Denver FBI chief Scott Werner Friday reported the arrest of 56-year-old Diane Twitchell, wanted for conspiracy, handling counterfeit foreign (out-of-state) securities, and transferring fraudulent checks across a state line.

She was apprehended by agents at her Denver home.

Miss Twitchell, according to Werner, is sought in connection with defrauding of the Colorado Springs First National Bank in Colorado Springs, the Minnequa and Arkansas Valley Bank in Pueblo, and the Poudre Valley National Bank in Fort Collins.

Werner said the woman—who posed variously as a nurse, physician, and doctor's wife—used the alias of "Karla Mattson."

Typically, Werner said, Miss Twitchell would:

—Open a checking account with a cash deposit;

—Deposit a bogus out-of-state check in amounts up to $5,000;

—Make a substantial withdrawal before the check was returned, and leave town.

Drink of Water Noted by Churchill

Churchill's appreciation of good brandy was a British legend, but one day during a lengthy speech to Conservative party workers he reached for a glass of water and took a long drink. Then he looked up grinning and said:

"I don't often do that."

Ironically, he was defeated for the House of Commons in 1922 by a candidate of the Prohibition party.

Westminster Pays Tribute To Churchill

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

FULTON, Mo. (AP) — With dignity that seemed to say "we are proud that he stood among us," Westminster College paid tribute Sunday to Sir Winston Churchill in the same gymnasium where he delivered his Iron Curtain speech nearly 19 years ago.

The students, who were only babies at the time, talked in hushed voices before the memorial service, sharing in recapitulation the honor he conferred on the Presbyterian college in this town of 11,000. They and townsfolk filled the modest gymnasium.

"For 10 years now men have watched the ebb of vitality as age took its toll," said Dr. Robert L. D. Davidson, president of Westminster. "We have witnessed his personal heroism, dignity and courage, even when physical strength had deserted him."

With President Harry S. Truman sharing the platform, Churchill, on March 5, 1946, thundered the words that were to replace the title, "Sinews of Peace," that he had chosen for his speech:

"From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an iron curtain has descended across the Continent. Behind that line lie all the capitals of the ancient states of central and eastern Europe."

Churchill and his Conservative government had been voted out of office nine months before, robbed of the rewards that the World War II leadership should have bestowed. The invitation from the then Westminster president, Franc L. McCluer, gave Churchill a pulpit from which to voice his fears about the Soviet Union's desire of "the indefinite expansion of their power and doctrines."

He spoke of his hopes for the United Nations . . . for a special relationship between the United States and the British Commonwealth, and for a shield from what he called "the two gaunt marauders — war and tyranny."

Last year Westminster began — with Churchill's approval — an unusual national monument to Churchill, an honorary American citizen. With publicly donated funds, the college will transport, stone by stone, the St. Mary Aldermanbury church from London to be used as a non-denominational chapel.

The site, now marked with three stones and a wooden cross from the church, is only a block from the gymnasium.

In his tribute, Dr. Davidson quoted Churchill's closing words from the speech that forever enobled this town:

"If we adhere faithfully to the

"If we adhere faithfully to the Charter of the United Nations and walk forward in sedate and sober strength, seeking no one's land or treasure, seeking to lay no arbitrary control upon the thought of men the high roads of the future will be clear not only for us, but for all, not only for our time, but for the century to come."

Shell for Hitler Fired by Churchill

Despite his years, the Prime Minister visited various battlefronts. At the time of the Rhine crossing, he came wihin 50 yards of being struck by a German artillery shell.

An American lieutenant said that Churchill "seemed more perturbed about lighting his cigar in the wind than he was about the shell fire" and that after he succeeded he "walked away as if nothing had happened."

On an earlier tour of German soil, he fired an artillery shell directd to Hitler. Entering a gun pit, he wrote on a 240-milimeter shell: "To Hitler personally." It then was loaded in an American-made gun. Churchill chewed grimly on his cigar as he pulled the lanyard. With a heavy boom, the shell whizzed in the general direction of the target.

War Tanks Credited To Churchill's Idea

Churchill received major credit for introducing tanks to warfare.

It was in the battle of the Somme in 1916 that these monsters made their debut and caught the Germans completely by surprise.

In a speech in the House of Commons a short time later, Prime Minister David Lloyd George said:

"It really is Winston Churchill, more than any one else, to whom credit for the new armored cars is due.

"He took up with enthusiasm the idea of making them a long time ago, but met with many difficulties. Then he converted me and at the Ministry of Munitions we went ahead."

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain
New York, N. Y. (Special) — For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain — without surgery.
In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verifed by a doctor's observations.
Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.
And most amazing of all — this improvement was maintained in cases where a doctor's observations were continued over a period of many months!
In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.
All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®) — the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.
This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H®. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold all drug counters.

Old Museum Guns Bluff by Churchill

Though Britain was in great peril right after Dunkerque, Churchill defiantly warned Hitler than any attempt at invasion would find the British defending their island to the last.

"We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills, we shall never surrender," he declared. The invasion was not attempted.

Two years later Churchill made a speech in which he chided the Nazis for being bluffed.

"Look at the mistake that Hitler made in not trying invasion in 1940," he said. "We had not, at that time, 50 tanks; we had a couple of hundred field guns, some of them brought out of museums."

For Want Ads Dial — 632-4641.

"I've never seen a rat race, but my daddy goes to one every day."

Oratory Was Like Blend of Colors

Churchill's oratory was a finely-tooled product. It was his old friend, Lord Birkenhead, who equipped that he had "devoted the best years of his life to the preparation of his impromptu speeches." His voice was husky, he always had trouble with the letter "s," his delivery was not exceptional — but his words were golden.

Words to Churchill were like the bricks and mortar he liked to lay so carefully as an amateur bricklayer, like the colors he loved to blend brightly in his capable but untutored landscape painting.

He spoke best in adversity in such moving language as "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat," or "we are fighting by ourselves alone but we are not fighting for ourselves alone."

When Churchil spoke the world listened.

BELL TOLLS AGAIN

DELTONA, Fla. (AP) — A bell cast in 1859 is coming out of retirement for the second time.

The bell, manufactured in West Troy, N.Y., clanged for 25 years on a railroad locomotive plying between New York and Florida. Retired from this service, it called pupils to class at a one-room schoolhouse near Pierson, Fla., for half a century.

With the passing of the one-room schoolhouse era the bell fell silent for 30 years. Now it has been dusted off and installed in a Deltona building which will be used as an adult education center.

First Program In Seminar Slated Tonight

The first program of a two-series seminar on "Inner Dynamics" will begin tonight.

Robert W. Huffman of Boulder is presenting the program on "the science of functioning as a whole" by tapping often unused resources of the mind.

"How the Mind Works" will be the first program, beginning at 7:45 p.m. in the conference room of the Mayfair Hotel, 120 E. Platte Ave.

The second program will begin at the same time Tuesday in the Mayfair and deal with "Principles of Action."

The public lectures will be free.

According to Huffman, "The nature of man's inner force is good, and it offers to each man a greater view of his potential as he desires to see that view.

"At times we are so burdened with fears and discouragements of trying to achieve a small bit of happiness that we can see little beyond the moment, and hope for a better way of life seems to disappear.

"Inner Dynamics bases its foundational principles on the belief that all men contain endless good that can be expressed freely once we have learned the simple secret of allowing its release."

Two page matrixes of a May 18, 1922 issuse of The Weekly Gazette, predecessor of the Gazette Telegraph, were found last week by a pair of brothers. The pages, numbers two and four, were found by 21-year-old Glyn Judson and his brother, Marc, 17.

The 45-year-old matrixes which are cardboard imprints of a page used for printing the paper, contained stories about the number one crime in the city at that time — bootlegging liquor. They also contained stories of prospecting for gold, driving to the summit of Pikes Peak and student pranksters at Colorado College.

On that date in 1922, the big story was of a $500,000 fire set in Chicago by strikers.

Man Held in Theft Probe

A man was being held today for investigation of larceny from a person after he was picked out of a police line-up by a man who said $100 in cash was taken from his shirt pocket during a party at his house police reported.

Richard L. Weber, 538 E. Rio Grande St., told police he was having a small party at his house Saturday when his wife gave him $100 for safe-keeping and he put it in the left pocket of his shirt. He said a man asked him for a cigarette, and Weber told him to reach into his pocket and get one. Weber said the man did so, and also pulled out the cash which was with the cigarettes.

Weber said that he asked for the money back, but the man refused to give it to him and left the house. The police were contacted and at approximately 6:15 p.m. Saturday they apprehended a man who answered the description provided by Weber.

Weber picked the man out of a police line-up as the man who had robbed him, but the man said he had no knowledge of the theft, and hadn't been to any party at 538 E. Rio Grande St.

He was identified as Clarence Williams, 29, 933 E. Cucharras St., and he is being held for investigation of larceny from a person.

Liquor Store Robbed Over Weekend

A liquor store burglary over the weekend netted thieves more than $35 in cash and $17 worth of liquor, police reported.

An employe, of Audubon Liquors, 2433 N. Union Blvd., told police he had locked the store at 10 p.m. Saturday evening. The burglary was discovered at 7 a.m. Sunday when a man passing the store noticed the front door glass was kicked in.

Police said a check revealed that several liquor bottles were broken and their contents splashed around the front of the store. Hugo Gendicke, owner of the store, told police that $38.82 was taken from the cash register, and five bottles of liquor valued at $17 were also taken.

Canon ROTC Termination Is Explained by Board

Termination of the Jr. ROTC Program in Canon City High School was explained in a letter to the citizens of School District Fremont Re-1 by the area's board of education Friday.

Board members, after studying the program, voted to end it in a meeting Jan. 13. Board members gave the following reasons for their decision.

"We always are faced with a shortage of three items," the letter said, "time, classroom space and money. We must evaluate our progam at frequent intervals. After due consideration, we vote our convictions.

The Jr. ROTC program has been discussed often especially since the Department of Defense said local taxpayers would be expected to finance a larger portion of the expense of the program."

After a study of the program, board members and administrative staff members reported "that the Jr. ROTC program benefits and accomplishments did not justify the efforts and time involved. The Department of Defense itself does not consider Jr. ROTC of much value to the armed forces.

"After the hours of discussion, we do not consider this a hurried decision but one of the reasons we took final action Jan. 13, 1965, was the coming reassignment of your present military instructor who will be leaving in April. We thought it would be unfair to have another officer assigned and perhaps in the process of moving to Canon City at the time our board met in March.

"Unsolicited letters and calls received by us in favor of our action abolishing Jr. ROTC have been running in the ratio of seven calls in favor of abolishing the program to one call in favor of continuing the program."

The letter is signed by the members of the district's board of education.

Local Elks Re-Elected To Laradon Hall Board

John Godec Jr. has been reelected vice president of araelected vice president of Laradon Hall, a school for the mentally retarded in Denver, that is sponsored by the Colorado State Elks Association.

He was among the founders of the 16-year old school and has been an officer and director since its establishment in 1949.

Godec is a former exalted ruler of Colorado Springs Lodge 309, BPO Elks, and is presently serving as treasurer. He is also a past state president of the state association, and a member of the state Elks advisory board for the Laradon Hall committee.

Walter Johnson, former exalted ruler of Longmont Lodge 1055 and now a resident of Colorado Springs, was elected for another three-year term to the school's board of directors.

Will L. Anderson Died Here Sunday

Will L. Anderson, 1928 W. Platte Ave., retired truck driver who had been a resident of Colorado Springs since 1928, died Sunday at a local hospital.

Mr. Anderson was born in Farlington, Kan., Dec. 11, 1890. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ruth J. Allison, of Ethiopia, Africa; a brother, J. C. Anderson, Monument; two sisters, Mrs. T. H. Jacobs and Mrs. ters, Mrs. T. H. Jacobs and Mrs. Edith Bray, both of Denver.

Graveside funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Tuesday in Evergreen Cemetery. The Rev. Ervin Ericson will officiate.

Three Injured In One-Car Mishap Sunday

A single - car accident two miles north of Ellicott on Ellicott Road at 2:30 a.m. Sunday resulted in injuries to three persons, the State Patrol reported.

Lawrence T. Wilbertson, 19, Lamar, Colo., suffered a shoulder injury.

Richard Fell, 18, also of Lamar, suffered a laceration to his right side, and abrasions to his head and face.

Richard Kelly, 19, Peyton, Colo., suffered a fractured pelvis, abdominal injuries and head injuries.

All three of the injured boys were taken to Memorial hospital by E & E Ambulance.

The Patrol siad Wilbertson was southbound on Ellicott Road and going around a right curve when he lost control of his car. The car skidded off the left side of the highway, traveled down the left edge of the road, and knocking down a section of barbed wire fence and fence posts.

The car then rolled over, throwing out Fell and Kelly, who landed in the tangled barbed wire. The vehicle then came to rest against a post supporting a bridge railing.

Patrolman Nathan Boals said seatbelts were installed in the car, but weren't in use at the time of the accident. Patrolman Boals estimated the damage to the 1965 model car at $2,500.

Minor Injuries Reported in Sunday Accident

A one - car accident at 8 p.m. Sunday one mile north of Fountain on Colorado Highway 27 resulted in minor injuries to the driver, the State Patrol reported.

Fred L. Matlock, 25, Ft. Carson, complained of back injuries and was taken to Ft. Carson Hospital by army ambulance.

The Patrol said Matlock was southbound on Colorado 27 when he lost control of his car, ran off the roadway to the right and skidded for 220 feet back across the roadway. He then ran off the road to the left and skidded broadside for 150 feet and rolled over once.

The car then came to rest on its wheels. A 1965 model, the vehicle was termed a total loss with $2385 damage.

Three Males Being Held for Burglary

Two teen-age boys and a 21-year-old man are being investigated for burglary and larceny, the sheriff's office said Sunday.

According to Deputy Sheriff Woodrow Littrell the three were caught by Ted Sager, 525 Cheyenne Blvd. as they were coming out of J and S Auto Sales, 1502 S. Tejon St. The building was checked and several items found missing.

The teen-agers were placed in Zebulon Pike Center and the 21-year-old was taken to county jail.

Car Parts Valued At $32 Stolen

Roy Weaver, 240 Sherri Dr. reported to the sheriff's office Sunday that he had advertised a number of car parts for sale and that they were stolen from his car while it was parked at his home.

The missing parts are worth a total of $32.90 Deputy Sheriff Harry Orvis said.

Computer Classes Set Again at CU Center Here

A coordinated program of computer classes will again be offered during the spring semester at the Colorado Springs Center of the University of Colorado. Richard Vogel, director of the computer activities at Kaman Nuclear, has acted as coordinator in developing the local computer program. The various courses are structured to meet the needs of many persons, range in content from a brief survey course to advanced programming courses.

"Survey of Computers" is a short 6 weeks course designed especially for management, administrators and other persons who are not primarily associated with computers. Detailed technical language is avoided and the emphasis is placed on concepts associated with computers. Taught by Richard Smith, the class will meet on Wednesdays, from 6:00 to 8:10 p.m. beginning February 3.

"Introduction to Electronic Computers is designed for the person with little or no previous experience with computers. The course covers a broad survey of the computer field and of programming, concepts and terminology of computer components, problem solving sessions. Taught by Richard Vogel, the class will meet on Wednesdays, from 6:00 to 8:10 p.m. from February 3 to May 26.

"Business Data Processing" covers the use of COBOL and its application to business problems. COBOL is a result of effort to produce an English-like programming language which can be used with many different types of data processing systems. The language and the techniques for using it are conceived in terms of the problems to be solved and the results attained, not, in terms of technical features of the computer. A pre - requisite for this course is an introductory computer course covering an introduction to programming electronic computers. Pre - requisites to this class include College Algebra, and introductory computer course or special permission of the instructor. The course covers a survey of programming systems with major emphasis on the FORTRAN system. Problems in the engineering and scientific fields are analyzed, programmed, and solved on a large scale electronic computer. Taught by Celestino Archuleta, the class will meet on Wednesdays, from 6:00 to 8:10 p.m. from February 3 to May 26.

Registration for spring semester will be held Wednesday and Thursday, January 27 and 28 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Jackson House, San Rafael and Nevada.

AFA Contributes $22 Million To Area Economy

The Air Force Academy leads a "triple life." In addition to being an innovator in service school education and Colorado's leading tourist attraction, the Academy is "big business" in the Pikes Peak region.

During 1964, the Academy made a contribution of over $22 million to the local economy. Biggest single item in the total is the $8 million in wages paid 1,779 civilian employees.

Military pay and allowances for officers, airmen, and Preparatory School students numbering 1,771, was almost $6 million.

Cadet pay and allowances accounted for about $6 million.

Contribution to the Pikes Peak economy through paid utilities, local purchases, transportation, supplies, equipment, communications, etc. was $750,000.

The total 1964 contributions are comparable to the 1963 figure.

Man Says Another Used His Credit Card

A Limon man, Dale Evans, 27, who is being held in county jail for investigation of short check, is also alleged to have fraudulently used a Standard Oil Co. credit card, the sheriff's office said this morning.

According to Deputy Sheriff Wodrow Littrell, the card belongs to Robert Kilgore, 1424 Acacia Dr. and Evans stated he had used it to pay for a trip he made recently to Texas. Kilgore said he had either lost the card or it was stolen. He also said he never gave Evans permission to use it and has indicated he will sign a complaint against Evans who has already been charged in county court with short check.

Man Injured When Car Falls on Him

William C. Tankersley, 33, 1217 Hartford St. suffered a fractured shoulder and possible fractured ribs, arm and hip when his car fell on him as he was working underneath it, the sheriff's office reported Saturday.

According to Deputy Sheriff Arthur Tolch, the car was jacked up and Tankersley was pulling the transmission when the vehicle fell on him. He was found by his wife and taken to Ft. Carson Hospital.

Scientists Set For Workshop On CU Campus

A group of scientists representing a wide variety of interests will meet on the University of Colorado campus Feb. 11-12 for a workshop on the Inter-Disciplinary Aspects of Radiative Energy Transfer.

The workshop is sponsored by the Joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophysics (JILA), a cooperative enterprise of the National Bureau of Standards and CU, with the support of the Office of Naval Research (ONR). Scientists who will participate include experts in applied mathematics, aerospace science, physical chemistry, propulsion, oceanography, meterology, astrophysics, geophysics, heat transfer, blastwaves, glass technology and plasma physics.

All are prominent within their fields. They will come from industry research organizations and universities. Several representatives of the ONR also are expected to attend the workshop.

Among speakers during the eight-session workshop will be Anthony Hearn of Britain's Atomic Energy Authority, who is on a one-year joint appointment at CU's High Altitude Observatory and JILA. He will speak at a session on plasma physics.

Richard N. Thomas, a fellow of JILA and a member of the laboratory astrophysics division of the National Bureau of Standards (NBS), will speak at a session on stellar atmospheres.

Robert J. Low, acting assistant dean of the CU Graduate School, will deliver welcoming remarks on behalf of the University.

Robert Goulard, a 1965-66 JILA Visiting-Fellow from Purdue University, and Thomas are in charge of the workshop, with arrangements made by the CU Bureau of Continuation Education.

Burglars Hit Local Restaurant

A local restaurant was burglarized of $143 Sunday by thieves who entered the store through an unlocked window, police reported.

Richard E. Clark, manager of Vincent's Fine Foods, 211 E. Cucharras St., told police the restaurant was closed at approximately 3 a.m. Sunday, and the help finished cleaning up at approximately 4:15 a.m. Clark said he came to work at 6:30 a.m. and discovered that someone had taken Saturday night's receipts from the cash register.

He said the receipts were behind the cast register drawer, and the thieves had removed the drawer to get at the money. Clark added that the intruders had messed up the kitchen while apparently looking for more money, but after not finding any had left the establishment by unlocking the back door and walking out.

Window Smashed by BB Gun in Broadmoor

Miss Dorothy Carrigue, 2527 Old Broadmoor Rd. reported to the sheriff's office Sunday that a picture window at her home has been broken with a BB gun causing $75 damage.

According to Broadmoor Policeman E. McCudden, Miss Carrigue was watching television at the time.

Armed Forces News

By STEVE TILLMAN

WASHINGTON — (Special to the Gazette Telegraph) —While the President's Message to Congress on Defense did not make reference to any specific pay increase for the military, it did point out that the Administration will review the military pay rates annually. There will be more information on this when the President submits his budget message to Congress.

Informed Congressional observers considered that the President's calling attention to the fact that the pay increases were "the largest military pay increases in our history," (meaning the increases since 1961) might indicate a complete overhauling of the pay tables before a new increase is requested of Congress.

While the American public has repeatedly taken a dim view of the "shelter program," it may well become a political issue in the new Congress.

Jan. 17 marked the 10th birthday of the Nuclear Navy. It was on January 17, 1955 that the submarine Nautilus sent the historic message "Underway on nuclear power."

Naval Reserve will be spared the anguish that the Army and the Air Force Reserve is undergoing, since there is no Naval Militia or Guard. There had been some talk here of both the Naval Reserve and the Marine Reserve being reduced in strength. The word now is no cuts for the seagoing Reserves.

Support is growing in this Congress to eliminate the reduction in annuities of retired Civil Service employes to provide for survivors benefits. The proposal would include annuities of retired Civil Service employes as well as those yet to be retired.

This would put Civil Service survivors benefits on a par with those of Social Security, excepting the fact that Civil Service survivors benefits are Federally taxable. If the Civil Service employes with their strong political representations can put their measure through Congress the military might expect the same consideration. The proposal would give survivors 55 per cent of the amount of the original annuity.

The Army is holding up newly awarded construction contracts for Guard and Reserve armories pending the merger of the two components. Work already started will be continued. If it is not needed after the merger the buildings will probably be used as Poverty Training Centers.

Maj. Gen. Ted Clifton is expected to remain with the President as the White House senior Military Aide. Army retired General now on active duty Lyman Lemnitzer is expected to stay with NATO in Paris. A bill is now pending in Congress to increase his pay and allowances by $4,075 a year. On the long range level it looks like Gen. Hamilton Howze will succeed Gen. Paul Adams when the latter retires.

How many readers know the author's name of "This Sir is Leather"? The information is needed for a book now in preparation. Replies should be sent in care of this paper.

As of Jan. 18 the Congressional Reserve units are no more. The Department of Defense abolished them as of that date. Along with this order 150,000 federal employes holding reserve commissions were out of the Ready Reserve.

Balked in any effort to have the legal question of whether a member of Congress could also be a Reserve commission passed on by the Supreme Court, due to the power of the Congressional Reserve lobby, the Department of Defense did the next best thing. It abolished the Reserve units on the Hill.

The story of these units and the question as to the validity of the members of Congress holding Reserve commissions was first raised by this reporter four years ago. While there were several precedents supporting this view, it ran headlong into opposition from the Reserve lobby. Subsequently the story was picked up by several nationally known news columnists. It was not until Senators Barry Goldwater and Strom Thurmond left them that the Department of Defense decided to do away with the units.

The deactivation of the Congressional Reserve units is also expected to kill off the special Legislative Advisory Committee, made up of members of Congress holding Reserve commissions, to the Reserve lobby. Here is Conflict of Interest at its worst.

Trustees Named For Foundation

Samuel C. Waugh of Washington, D. C. and Mrs. Hermine Goldberg of Phoenix, Ariz., have been elected honorary trustees of the Cooper Foundation, it was announced today.

Waugh is a former active trustee of the Foundation and since 1953 has been a resident of Washington, D. C., where he served as Deputy Under Secretary of State and later as president of the Export-Import Bank. He is currently a director of the General Reinsurance Corporation, Pittsburgh, Penn., and a consultant to the Bank of New York and to the Blaw-Knox Company.

Mrs. Goldberg is the widow of the late Ralph Goldberg, former theatre owner in Omaha, Neb. In 1958 the Cooper Foundation purchased part of the Goldberg theatre holdings in Omaha and the remainder were donated to the Cooper Foundation.

The following officers of the Cooper Foundation also were reelected at the annual meeting. T. A. Sick, chairman of the board; E. N. Thompson, president; C. Wheaton Battey, vice pesident; E. N. Van Horne, vice president; W. W. Putney, secretary & treasurer; George Gaughan, vice president in charge of theatre operations; Herman Hallberg, assistant vice president in charge of theatre operations.

Sullivan Lauded By Sheriff's Posse

Sheriff Earl L. Sullivan was awarded a certificate of appreciation for "outstanding service in the office of sponsor" by the Peak Region, El Paso County, at a meeting Saturday night.

Sheriff Sullivan was also made a life member of the posse.

Stalwarts See Progress in Bowling Scores

A little special equipment, a lot of special effort and 11 members of Stalwarts and Pals Club for the Handicapped are beginning to see some progress in their bowling scores.

The group began bowling in November and has gotten together every Saturday night since, needling, enouraging and trying to improve their games.

Two use crutches. One bowls from his wheel chair. The others use no aids. They bowl three lines a night, two frames at a time. Typical to most bowlers, the most body action is seen between the time the ball leaves the bowler's hand and tht time it makes contact with the pins.

"We have a good time and it gives us a chance to get out socially every week," Emery Ricketts, president of the club, said. He was keeping score for the group Saturday night.

"We have a few who have bowled before and their scores are pretty good most of the time. Fred Stubbs holds the record for high in a three-game series with 354. Donna Hill has the women's high-game title with 114. Her high for a series also is a record for the group at 283. Margaret Chafee is second with 282.

"Tulie Bennett has shown the most improvement. Nov. 14 she bowled a 31. Last time she had a 56 and is improving all the time.

"What we would like to do is get enough handicappers interested to form two three - person teams and challenge the club in Pueblo.

"There are 27 memebers of the club now but not all of them are interested in bowling.

"We could use more help. We always need ball-carriers to help get the balls to the bowlers who are on crutches, etc. And I am the only one who can keep score most of the time so I don't have much chance to bowl. But we have a fine time getting out and encouraging each other. I think it's good for handicappers to get out socially and try doing some of the thigns everyone else does. A lot of times, the reason a handicapper doesn't try is because he feels self-conscious or doesn't have any confidence. When he sees others trying and doing things, he is encouraged and tries himself."

Latin Teachers To Meet at CU

More than 60 high school Latin teachers from throughout Colorado will meet at the University of Colorado Saturday to discuss mutual problems and to learn more about their field.

Highlight of the one-day conference will be two addresses by Dr. Austin Lashbrook, chairman of the classics department at the University of Kansas. Lashbrook will discuss a new method of language teaching, "Structural Linguistics," and "Cicero's Rhetorical Style."

Other subjects to be discussed include travel abroad and Latin grammatical problems in high school.

CU faculty members participating will be Prof. Karl K. Hulley and Asst. Prof. Harold D. Evjen, both of the Department of Classics. Evjen also is in charge of arrangements.

The meeting will take place in the University Memorial Center and will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

First Program In Seminar Slated Tonight

The first program of a two-series seminar on "Inner Dynamics" will begin tonight.

Robert W. Huffman of Boulder is presenting the program on "the science of functioning as a whole" by tapping often unused resources of the mind.

"How the Mind Works" will be the first program, beginning at 7:45 p.m. in the conference room of the Mayfair Hotel, 120 E. Platte Ave.

The second program will begin at the same time Tuesday in the Mayfair and deal with "Principles of Action."

The public lectures will be free.

According to Huffman, "The nature of man's inner force is good, and it offers to each man a greater view of his potential as he desires to see that view.

"At times we are so burdened with fears and discouragements of trying to achieve a small bit of happiness that we can see little beyond the moment, and hope for a better way of life seems to disappear.

"Inner Dynamics bases its foundational principles on the belief that all men contain endless good that can be expressed freely once we have learned the simple secret of allowing its release."

Two page matrixes of a May 18, 1922 issue of The Weekly Gazette, predecessor of the Gazette Telegraph, were found last week by a pair of brothers. The pages, numbers two and four, were found by 21-year-old Glyn Judson and his brother, Marc, 17.

The 45-year-old matrixes which are cardboard imprints of a page used for printing the paper, contained stories about the number one crime in the city at that time — bootlegging liquor. They also contained stories of prospecting for gold, driving to the summit of Pikes Peak and student pranksters at Colorado College.

On that date in 1922, the big story was of a $500,000 fire set in Chicago by strikers.

Man Held in Theft Probe

A man was being held today for investigation of larceny from a person after he was picked out of a police line-up by a man who said $100 in cash was taken from his shirt pocket during a party at his house police reported.

Richard L. Weber, 538 E. Rio Grande St., told police he was having a small party at his house Saturday when his wife gave him $100 for safe-keeping and he put it in the left pocket of his shirt. He said a man asked him for a cigarette, and Weber told him to reach into his pocket and get one. Weber said the man did so, and also pulled out the cash which was with the cigarettes.

Weber said that he asked for the money back, but the man refused to give it to him and left the house. The police were contacted and at approximately 6:15 p.m. Saturday they apprehended a man who answered the description provided by Weber.

Weber picked the man out of a police line-up as the man who had robbed him, but the man said he had no knowledge of the theft, and hadn't been to any party at 538 E. Rio Grande St.

He was identified as Clarence Williams, 29, 933 E. Cucharras St., and he is being held for investigation of larceny from a person.

Liquor Store Robbed Over Weekend

A liquor store burglary over the weekend netted thieves more than $35 in cash and $17 worth of liquor, police reported.

An employe, of Audubon Liquors, 2433 N. Union Blvd., told police he had locked the store at 10 p.m. Saturday evening. The burglary was discovered at 7 a.m. Sunday when a man passing the store noticed the front door glass was kicked in.

Police said a check revealed that several liquor bottles were broken and their contents splashed around the front of the store. Hugo Genicke, owner of the store, told police that $38.82 was taken from the cash register, and five bottles of liquor valued at $17 were also taken.

Canon ROTC Termination Is Explained by Board

Termination of the Jr. ROTC Program in Canon City High School was explained in a letter to the citizens of School District Fremont Re-1 by the area's board of education Friday.

Board members, after studying the program, voted to end it in a meeting Jan. 13. Board members gave the following reasons for their decision.

"We always are faced with a shortage of three items," the letter said, "time, classroom space and money. We must evaluate our progam at frequent intervals. After due consideration, we vote our convictions.

The Jr. ROTC program has been discussed often especially since the Department of Defense said local taxpayers would be expected to finance a larger portion of the expense of the program."

After a study of the program, board members and administrative staff members reported "that the Jr. ROTC program benefits and accomplishments did not justify the efforts and time involved. The Department of Defense itself does not consider Jr. ROTC of much value to the armed forces.

"After the hours of discussion, we do not consider this a hurried decision but one of the reasons we took final action Jan. 13, 1965, was the coming reassignment of your present military instructor who will be leaving in April. We thought it would be unfair to have another officer assigned and perhaps in the process of moving to Canon City at the time our board met in March.

"Unsolicited letters and calls received by us in favor of our action abolishing Jr. ROTC have been running in the ratio of seven calls in favor of abolishing the program to one call in favor of continuing the program."

The letter is signed by the members of the district's board of education.

Local Elks Re-Elected To Laradon Hall Board

John Godec Jr. has been reelected vice president of araelected vice president of Laradon Hall, a school for the mentally retarded in Denver, that is sponsored by the Colorado State Elks Association.

He was among the founders of the 16-year old school and has been an officer and director since its establishment in 1949.

Godec is a former exalted ruler of Colorado Springs Lodge 309, BPO Elks, and is presently serving as treasurer. He is also a past state president of the state association, and a member of the state Elks advisory board for the Laradon Hall committee.

Walter Johnson, former exalted ruler of Longmont Lodge 1055 and now a resident of Colorado Springs, was elected for another three-year term to the school's board of directors.

Three Injured In One-Car Mishap Sunday

A single - car accident two miles north of Ellicott on Ellicott Road at 2:30 a.m. Sunday resulted in injuries to three persons, the State Patrol reported.

Lawrence T. Wilbertson, 19, Lamar, Colo., suffered a shoulder injury.

Richard Fell, 18, also of Lamar, suffered a laceration to his right side, and abrasions to his head and face.

Richard Kelly, 19, Peyton, Colo., suffered a fractured pelvis, abdominal injuries and head injuries.

All three of the injured boys were taken to Memorial hospital by E & E Ambulance.

The Patrol siad Wilbertson was southbound on Ellicott Road and going around a right curve when he lost control of his car. The car skidded off the left side of the highway, traveled down the left edge of the road, and knocking down a section of barbed wire fence and fence posts.

The car then rolled over, throwing out Fell and Kelly, who landed in the tangled barbed wire. The vehicle then came to rest against a post supporting a bridge railing.

Patrolman Nathan Boals said seatbelts were installed in the car, but weren't in use at the time of the accident. Patrolman Boals estimated the damage to the 1965 model car at $2,500.

Minor Injuries Reported in Sunday Accident

A one - car accident at 8 p.m. Sunday one mile north of Fountain on Colorado Highway 27 resulted in minor injuries to the driver, the State Patrol reported.

Fred L. Matlock, 25, Ft. Carson, complained of back injuries and was taken to Ft. Carson Hospital by army ambulance.

The Patrol said Matlock was southbound on Colorado 27 when he lost control of his car, ran off the roadway to the right and skidded for 220 feet back across the roadway. He then ran off the road to the left and skidded broadside for 150 feet and rolled over once.

The car then came to rest on its wheels. A 1965 model, the vehicle was termed a total loss with $2385 damage.

Three Males Being Held for Burglary

Two teen-age boys and a 21-year-old man are being investigated for burglary and larceny, the sheriff's office said Sunday.

According to Deputy Sheriff Woodrow Littrell the three were caught by Ted Sager, 525 Cheyenne Blvd. as they were coming out of J and S Auto Sales, 1502 S. Tejon St. The building was checked and several items found missing.

The teen-agers were placed in Zebulon Pike Center and the 21-year-old was taken to county jail.

Car Parts Valued At $32 Stolen

Roy Weaver, 240 Sherri Dr. reported to the sheriff's office Sunday that he had advertised a number of car parts for sale and that they were stolen from his car while it was parked at his home.

The missing parts are worth a total of $32.30 Deputy Sheriff Harry Orvis said.

Computer Classes Set Again at CU Center Here

A coordinated program of computer classes will again be offered during the spring semester at the Colorado Springs Center of the University of Colorado. Richard Vogel, director of the computer activities at Kaman Nuclear, has acted as coordinator in developing the local computer program. The various courses are structured to meet the needs of many persons, range in content from a brief survey course to advanced programming courses.

"Survey of Computers" is a short 6 weeks course designed especially for management, administrators and other persons who are not primarily associated with computers. Detailed technical language is avoided and the emphasis is placed on concepts associated with computers. Taught by Richard Smith, the class will meet on Wednesdays, from 6:00 to 8:10 p.m. beginning February 3.

"Introduction to Electronic Computers is designed for the person with little or no previous experience with computers. The course covers a broad survey of the computer field and of programming, concepts and terminology of computer components, problem solving sessions. Taught by Richard Vogel, the class will meet on Wednesdays, from 6:00 to 8:10 p.m. from February 3 to May 26.

"Business Data Processing" covers the use of COBOL and its application to business problems. COBOL is a result of effort to produce an English-like programming language which can be used with many different types of data processing systems. The language and the techniques for using it are conceived in terms of the problems to be solved and the results attained, not, in terms of technical features of the computer. A pre - requisite for this course is an introductory computer course covering an introduction to programming electronic computers. Pre - requisites to this class include College Algebra, and introductory computer course or special permission of the instructor. The course covers a survey of programming systems with major emphasis on the FORTRAN system. Problems in the engineering and scientific fields are analyzed, programmed, and solved on a large scale electronic computer. Taught by Celestino Archuleta, the class will meet on Wednesdays, from 6:00 to 8:10 p.m. from February 3 to May 26.

Registration for spring semester will be held Wednesday and Thursday, January 27 and 28 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Jackson House, San Rafael and Nevada.

AFA Contributes $22 Million To Area Economy

The Air Force Academy leads a "triple life." In addition to being an innovator in service school education and Colorado's leading tourist attraction, the Academy is "big business" in the Pikes Peak region.

During 1964, the Academy made a contribution of over $22 million to the local economy. Biggest single item in the total is the $8 million in wages paid 1,779 civilian employees.

Military pay and allowances for officers, airmen, and Preparatory School students numbering 1,771, was almost $6 million.

Cadet pay and allowances accounted for about $6 million.

Contribution to the Pikes Peak economy through paid utilities, local purchases, transportation, supplies, equipment, communications, etc. was $750,000.

The total 1964 contributions are comparable to the 1963 figure.

Man Says Another Used His Credit Card

A Limon man, Dale Evans, 27, who is being held in county jail for investigation of short check, is also alleged to have fraudulently used a Standard Oil Co. credit card, the sheriff's office said this morning.

According to Deputy Sheriff Wodrow Littrell, the card belongs to Robert Kilgore, 1424 Acacia Dr. and Evans stated he had used it to pay for a trip he made recently to Texas. Kilgore said he had either lost the card or it was stolen. He also said he never gave Evans permission to use it and has indicated he will sign a complaint against Evans who has already been charged in county court with short check.

Man Injured When Car Falls on Him

William C. Tankersley, 33, 1217 Hartford St. suffered a fractured shoulder and possible fractured ribs, arm and hip when his car fell on him as he was working underneath it, the sheriff's office reported Saturday.

According to Deputy Sheriff Arthur Tolch, the car was jacked up and Tankersley was pulling the transmission when the vehicle fell on him. He was found by his wife and taken to Ft. Carson Hospital.

Scientists Set For Workshop On CU Campus

A group of scientists representing a wide variety of interests will meet on the University of Colorado campus Feb. 11-12 for a workshop on the Inter-Disciplinary Aspects of Radiative Energy Transfer.

The workshop is sponsored by the Joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophysics (JILA), a cooperative enterprise of the National Bureau of Standards and CU, with the support of the Office of Naval Research (ONR). Scientists who will participate include experts in applied mathematics, aerospace science, physical chemistry, propulsion, oceanography, meterology, astrophysics, geophysics, heat transfer, blastwaves, glass technology and plasma physics.

All are prominent within their fields. They will come from industry research organizations and universities. Several representatives of the ONR also are expected to attend the workshop.

Among speakers during the eight-session workshop will be Anthony Hearn of Britain's Atomic Energy Authority, who is on a one-year joint appointment at CU's High Altitude Observatory and JILA. He will speak at a session on plasma physics.

Richard N. Thomas, a fellow of JILA and a member of the laboratory astrophysics division of the National Bureau of Standards (NBS), will speak at a session on stellar atmospheres.

Robert J. Low, acting assistant dean of the CU Graduate School, will deliver welcoming remarks on behalf of the University.

Robert Goulard, a 1965-66 JILA Visiting-Fellow from Purdue University, and Thomas are in charge of the workshop, with arrangements made by the CU Bureau of Continuation Education.

Burglars Hit Local Restaurant

A local restaurant was burglarized of $143 Sunday by thieves who entered the store through an unlocked window, police reported.

Richard E. Clark, manager of Vincent's Fine Foods, 211 E. Cucharras St., told police the restaurant was closed at approximately 3 a.m. Sunday, and the help finished cleaning up at approximately 4:15 a.m. Clark said he came to work at 6:30 a.m. and discovered that someone had taken Saturday night's receipts from the cash register.

He said the receipts were behind the cast register drawer, and the thieves had removed the drawer to get at the money. Clark added that the intruders had messed up the kitchen while apparently looking for more money, but after not finding any had left the establishment by unlocking the back door and walking out.

Window Smashed by BB Gun in Broadmoor

Miss Dorothy Carrigue, 2527 Old Broadmoor Rd. reported to the sheriff's office Sunday that a picture window at her home has been broken with a BB gun causing $75 damage.

According to Broadmoor Policeman E. McCudden, Miss Carrigue was watching television at the time.

TAKING A BREAK—Six members of Stalwarts and Pals Club for the Handicapped take a break in an evening of bowling to pose for a picture. The group bowls every Saturday night. Armed Forces News

By STEVE TILLMAN

WASHINGTON — (Special to the Gazette Telegraph) —While the President's Message to Congress on Defense did not make reference to any specific pay increase for the military, it did point out that the Administration will review the military pay rates annually. There will be more information on this when the President submits his budget message to Congress.

Informed Congressional observers considered that the President's calling attention to the fact that the pay increases were "the largest military pay increases in our history," (meaning the increases since 1961) might indicate a complete overhauling of the pay tables before a new increase is requested of Congress.

While the American public has repeatedly taken a dim view of the "shelter program," it may well become a political issue in the new Congress.

Jan. 17 marked the 10th birthday of the Nuclear Navy. It was on January 17, 1955 that the submarine Nautilus sent the historic message "Underway on nuclear power."

Naval Reserve will be spared the anguish that the Army and the Air Force Reserve is undergoing, since there is no Naval Militia or Guard. There had been some talk here of both the Naval Reserve and the Marine Reserve being reduced in strength. The word now is no cuts for the seagoing Reserves.

Support is growing in this Congress to eliminate the reduction in annuities of retired Civil Service employes to provide for survivors benefits. The proposal would include annuities of retired Civil Service employes as well as those yet to be retired.

This would put Civil Service survivors benefits on a par with those of Social Security, excepting the fact that Civil Service survivors benefits are Federally taxable. If the Civil Service employes with their strong political representations can put their measure through Congress the military might expect the same consideration. The proposal would give survivors 55 per cent of the amount of the original annuity.

The Army is holding up newly awarded construction contracts for Guard and Reserve armories pending the merger of the two components. Work already started will be continued. If it is not needed after the merger the buildings will probably be used as Poverty Training Centers.

Maj. Gen. Ted Clifton is expected to remain with the President as the White House senior Military Aide. Army retired General now on active duty Lyman Lemnitzer is expected to stay with NATO in Paris. A bill is now pending in Congress to increase his pay and allowances by $4,075 a year. On the long range level it looks like Gen. Hamilton Howze will succeed Gen. Paul Adams when the latter retires.

How many readers know the author's name of "This Sir is Leather"? The information is needed for a book now in preparation. Replies should be sent in care of this paper.

As of Jan. 18 the Congressional Reserve units are no more. The Department of Defense abolished them as of that date. Along with this order 150,000 federal employes holding reserve commissions were out of the Ready Reserve.

Balked in any effort to have the legal question of whether a member of Congress could also be a Reserve commission passed on by the Supreme Court, due to the power of the Congressional Reserve lobby, the Department of Defense did the next best thing. It abolished the Reserve units on the Hill.

The story of these units and the question as to the validity of the members of Congress holding Reserve commissions was first raised by this reporter four years ago. While there were several precedents supporting this view, it ran headlong into opposition from the Reserve lobby. Subsequently the story was picked up by several nationally known news columnists. It was not until Senators Barry Goldwater and Strom Thurmond left them that the Department of Defense decided to do away with the units.

The deactivation of the Congressional Reserve units is also expected to kill off the special Legislative Advisory Committee, made up of members of Congress holding Reserve commissions, to the Reserve lobby. Here is Conflict of Interest at its worst.

Trustees Named For Foundation

Samuel C. Waugh of Washington, D. C. and Mrs. Hermine Goldberg of Phoenix, Ariz., have been elected honorary trustees of the Cooper Foundation, it was announced today.

Waugh is a former active trustee of the Foundation and since 1953 has been a resident of Washington, D. C., where he served as Deputy Under Secretary of State and later as president of the Export-Import Bank. He is currently a director of the General Reinsurance Corporation, Pittsburgh, Penn., and a consultant to the Bank of New York and to the Blaw-Knox Company.

Mrs. Goldberg is the widow of the late Ralph Goldberg, former theatre owner in Omaha, Neb. In 1958 the Cooper Foundation purchased part of the Goldberg theatre holdings in Omaha and the remainder were donated to the Cooper Foundation.

The following officers of the Cooper Foundation also were re-elected at the annual meeting. T. A. Sick, chairman of the board; E. N. Thompson, president; C. Wheaton Battey, vice president; E. N. Van Horne, vice president; W. W. Putney, secretary & treasurer; George Gaughan, vice president in charge of theatre operations; Herman Hallberg, assistant vice president in charge of theatre operations.

Sullivan Lauded By Sheriff's Posse

Sheriff Earl L. Sullivan was awarded a certificate of appreciation for "outstanding service in the office of sponsor" by the Peak Region, El Paso County, at a meeting Saturday night.

Sheriff Sullivan was also made a life member of the posse.

Stalwarts See Progress in Bowling Scores

A little special equipment, a lot of special effort and 11 members of Stalwarts and Pals Club for the Handicapped are beginning to see some progress in their bowling scores.

The group began bowling in November and has gotten together every Saturday night since, needling, enouraging and trying to improve their games.

Two use crutches. One bowls from his wheel chair. The others use no aids. They bowl three lines a night, two frames at a time. Typical to most bowlers, the most body action is seen between the time the ball leaves the bowler's hand and tht time it makes contact with the pins.

"We have a good time and it gives us a chance to get out socially every week," Emery Ricketts, president of the club, said. He was keeping score for the group Saturday night.

"We have a few who have bowled before and their scores are pretty good most of the time. Fred Stubbs holds the record for high in a three-game series with 354. Donna Hill has the women's high-game title with 114. Her high for a series also is a record for the group at 283. Margaret Chafee is second with 282.

"Tulie Bennett has shown the most improvement. Nov. 14 she bowled a 31. Last time she had a 56 and is improving all the time.

"What we would like to do is get enough handicappers interested to form two three - person teams and challenge the club in Pueblo.

"There are 27 memebers of the club now but not all of them are interested in bowling.

"We could use more help. We always need ball-carriers to help get the balls to the bowlers who are on crutches, etc. And I am the only one who can keep score most of the time so I don't have much chance to bowl. But we have a fine time getting out and encouraging each other. I think it's good for handicappers to get out socially and try doing some of the thigns everyone else does. A lot of times, the reason a handicapper doesn't try is because he feels self-conscious or doesn't have any confidence. When he sees others trying and doing things, he is encouraged and tries himself."

Latin Teachers To Meet at CU

More than 60 high school Latin teachers from throughout Colorado will meet at the University of Colorado Saturday to discuss mutual problems and to learn more about their field.

Highlight of the one-day conference will be two addresses by Dr. Austin Lashbrook, chairman of the classics department at the University of Kansas. Lashbrook will discuss a new method of language teaching, "Structural Linguistics," and "Cicero's Rhetorical Style."

Other subjects to be discussed include travel abroad and Latin grammatical problems in high school.

CU faculty members participating will be Prof. Karl K. Hulley and Asst. Prof. Harold D. Evjen, both of the Department of Classics. Evjen also is in charge of arrangements.

The meeting will take place in the University Memorial Center and will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Cowboys Take Command In Big Eight Cage Chase

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oklahoma State took command in the Big Eight by escaping its Nebraska jinx Saturday while Kansas was upset by Iowa State. Oklahoma State has a golden opportunity this week to pad its lead against Colorado and Missouri in Stillwater.

Hank Iba's veterans face Colorado Thursday and Missouri Saturday in Gallagher Hall. Colorado and Missouri are tied for second with 2-1 records at this stage, behind OSU's 4-0. A sweep would give Iba's club an iron grip on first place.

Oklahoma plays at Iowa State in the only game tonight.

Kansas State, 2-2, and Kansas, 3-3, still are in contention for the title race, although the Jayhawks have their backs to the wall after Iowa State shocked them 64-58 at Lawrence in a televised game.

Kansas was trying to beat the same club for the third time in four weeks — a difficult job against any team in the Big Eight. OSU was shooting for the same triple at Lincoln, and was almost bumped off.

Nebraska led 50-44 with 3:21 left but Gary Hassmann, top scorer with 17, paced a Cowboy rally. Gene Johnson's goal with five seconds left won it 55-53.

Iowa State outrebounded, outshot and outhustled Kansas with Dave Fleming scoring 19 and Al Koch 16. Walt Wesley, 6-foot-11 Kansas pivot who came in with a 26-point league scoring average, fouled out with 6:45 left and tallied 15 points. By then, Iowa State led 48-40.

The race is still young and fans of the other contenders like to point out that all four Oklahoma State league victories were over Iowa State and Nebraska. A closer look, however, shows the Cowboys have a perfect 5-0 record at home, 4-2 on the road and 2-2 on neutral courts.

Oklahoma was upset 75-74 by Northern Michigan at Norman Saturday on a goal by Gene Summers with 13 seconds to go.

CSC Takes Over First In RMC; Alamosa Second

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Colorado State College took a firm hold on first place in Rocky Mountain Conference basketball over the weekend with a pair of victories over Western State.

CSC turned back Western 72-66 Saturday night after taking a 73-55 victory Friday.

The defeats dropped Western into the league basement with Colorado Mines, which was idle.

Next weekend's action features two meetings between CSC and second-place Adams State, which has split series with Western and Mines in four league games.

Western takes a breather from league action, meeting nonconference foes Regis and Ft. Lewis on Thursday and Saturday respectively.

Jim Brown Named Top Pro Athlete

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "This has been a great year — the championship and now this. Honestly, I can't say which means more now. They're both great."

It was Jimmy Brown talking. The great fullback of the champion Cleveland Browns of the National Football League had just been named winner of the S. Rae Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award Sunday and the $10,000 diamond-studded, gold-buckled belt that goes with it.

The championship was Brown's first with the Browns since he came up as an All-America from Syracuse.

"I would rather have the NFL title than any individual rushing championship," said the 28-year-old star who has captured the rushing crown in seven of the eight years he's been with the Browns.

Brown nosed out auto driving ace A.J. Foyt of Houston for the prize in the second closest vote in 10 years of the award. Brown won by seven points in the vote by a national panel of 136 sports writers and sporcasters.

Jimmy received 26 first place votes and a total of 161 points. Foyt, winner of the Indianapolis 500, collected more first place votes, 38, but less points, 154.

Points were counted on a basis of three for a first place vote, two for a second and one for a third.

In third place was Dean Chance of the Los Angeles Angels, baseball's outstanding pitcher of 1964, with 18 firsts and 97 points. Johnny Unitas, quarterback of the Baltimore Colts, was fourth with 12 first and 80 points. Bob Gibson, pitching star of the champion St. Louis Cardinals, and golfing comeback star Ken Venturi tied for fifth with eight first and 68 points each.

Brown received the award and an ovation from some 1,000 guests at this annual charity dinner of the Rochester Press and Radio Club.

'Chuvalo by Kayo', Louis

NEW YORK (AP) — "Chuvalo, by a knockout," says Joe Louis.

"Patterson, all the way," says Jimmy Braddock.

"Patterson, 8½ to 5," say the odds makers.

The two former world heavyweight champions made their picks after a weekend visit to the snowbound training camps of Floyd Patterson and George Chuvalo, while the odds favoring Patterson in next Monday's fight took a slight dip.

Patterson, former two-time champion attempting still another comeback against Chuvalo, had been a 2 to 1 favorite last week. The Canadian Chuvalo is ranked No. 3 among the world's heavyweight challengers by the World Boxing Association. Patterson is No. 2.

Their bout in Madison Square Garden is regarded as the last stepping stone to a shot at the vacant WBA version of the title.

The fight is scheduled for 12 rounds, but Louis said it won't last that long.

"Chuvalo punches too hard for Patterson," said the old Brown Bomber, who held the heavyweight title from 1937 until 1949. "I watched him work out for two days and I never saw him take a backward step. He'll wear Floyd down in seven or eight rounds and then knock him out.

"A lot of men have knocked Patterson down, but he got up to win. When this boy knocks him down, I think he'll stay down. Don't forget he knocked out Doug Jones and nobody ever did that before."

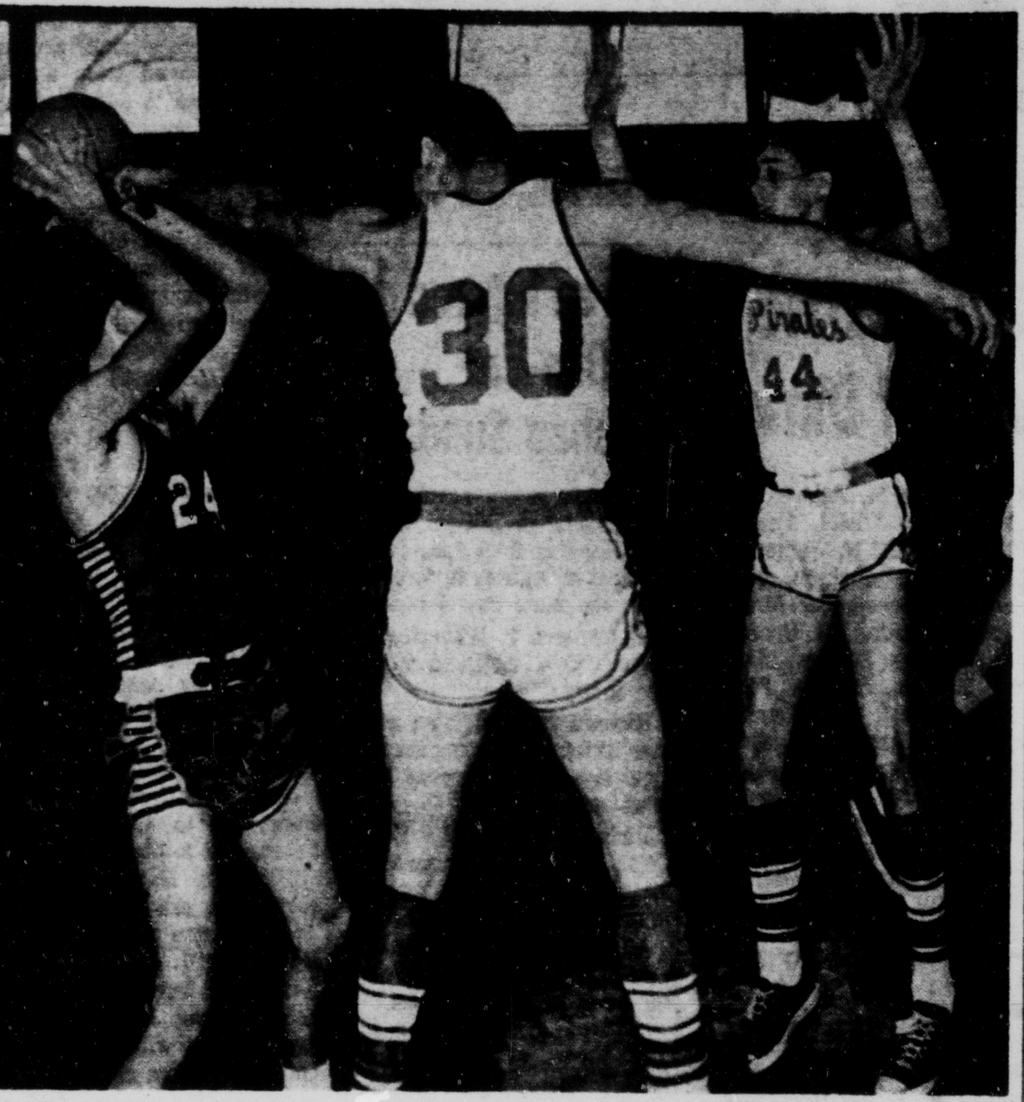
Braddock, who won the title in 1935 and lost it to Louis, disagreed.

"Patterson won the title twice, don't forget, and he must have something to be able to do that," Braddock said Sunday.

"I think he's got too much experience for Chuvalo. He's the fastest heavyweight I ever saw. His speed is in his hands, not his feet. I don't think his punch is enough to knock out George, so I look for the fight to go all the way with Patterson winning."

Chuavlo, who is training in Monticello, N.Y., went six rounds against three sparring partners Sunday.

Patterson, training in Marlboro, N.Y., boxed four rounds and concentrated on speed.



YOU WANT A PUNCH IN THE BASKETBALL — Sam Zavatti (30) of St. Mary's appears to have a good left jab headed for the basketball during this action from the Pirates' game with St. Joseph's of Denver Sunday. In fact, Zavatti apparently already has teammate Larry Walters (44) ready to surrender. Actually, it all occurred as the two Pirates were attempting to stop a shot by the Bulldogs' Marv Lauer (24). St. Mary's grabbed an easy 71-40 victory to remain tied with Mullen for the Denver Parochial League lead.

Bucs Easily Whip Bulldogs To Remain Tied for First

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

That misstep against Mullen two weeks ago continues to loom bigger in the battle plans of Dan Wright's St. Mary's Pirates these days as the Denver Parochial League basketball chase nears the conclusion of the first round.

Sunday afternoon at the St. Mary's Gymnasium, the Bucs defensed St. Joseph's of Denver into submission 71-40, but at the same hour the Mustangs were streaking past Cathedral 72-58, thus retaining the knot at the top of the DPL standings. And as the weeks tick by it becomes increasingly evident that if the Pirates hope to annex the 1965 championship, their big move will have to come at the Mullen Gymnasium, Feb. 12.

Of course, there are a lot of basketballs to go through the nets before then and another of the clutch situations is upcoming this Friday. St. Francis sounded a stern warning Sunday afternoon with a 76-60 triumph over a strong Machebeauf team and the Gremlins will be here Friday night to challenge the Pirates in a game that was originally scheduled for Denver. Once past that one, the local club can breathe easier Sunday. The home court foe that day will be the last place Mt. Carmel, a team that is winless — and likely to stay that way!

The Pirates tried to make Sunday's task against the Bulldogs appear demanding for the better part of three quarters. But they eventually tried of that sport and applied a thick coat of shellac in the final 10 minutes of action. St. Joseph's had only periodic success at picking its way through the tight net of St. Mary's defense and the Bulldogs could do little in the way of containing the balanced Buc attack.

The contest was never really close, although the visitors managed to hang within a 10 or 11 point spread until the midway point of the third period. Then the remaining defensive resistance crumbled and the Pirates had scooted to a lead of some 25 points when Wright started sweeping off the bench with several minutes still remaining.

The word for the Buc offense Sunday was balance. Four starters hit in double figures, one reserve almost got there, and 10 of the 12 players employed by the St. Mary's coach got on the scorepad. Tom McCarthy, the Pirates' high-scorer for the season, jitterbugged through the Bulldogs for 13 points to gain top honors but Sam Zavatti had 12, John Van Horn 11, and Tom Socha 10. Larry Walters came to the rescue of Van Horn who was in foul trouble on a couple of occasions and finished with nine points.

It was Zavatti's hot hand that provided the early edge. He got things going with a long arching jumper from the side with less than a minute gone and Van Horn and McCarthy quickly added goals to run the edge to 6-0 before the Bulldogs had even penetrated close enough to get a decent cast at the bucket.

Zavatti looped in another pair as the Bucs spread the margin to 11-3 with 4:11 to go in the period but St. Joseph's crept back to within five points before Socha and Zavatti closed out the quarter with a pair of two-pointers that jumped the advantage to 19-10.

That's just about where it stayed during the next eight minutes. The Bulldogs got within seven at 23-16 with 5:30 left and were just eight back before Jerry Knauf's closing goal that provided a 31-21 spread at halftime. It was still just 11 points at 41-30 with 4:06 to go in the third stanza but the Pirates then ran in eight points while the 'Dogs were scoring one and the romp was on. The bulge had swelled to 60-34 by the midpoint of the final period before Wright called off his hounds. The reserves finished out.

Gophers Get Big 10 Test Against Purdue

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP) — If the Minnesota Gophers still harbor preseason hopes of winning the Big Ten basketball championship, they will have to prove they can win away from home.

And the Gophers get their chance tonight when they invade Lafayette to take on Purdue's bruised and battered Boilermakers.

A victory over Purdue — a tough chore in the Boilermaker lair — would keep Minnesota in Big Ten contention, assuming somewhere along the line somebody knocks off Michigan. A loss to Purdue would give the Gophers a 2-2 mark and drop them close to the second division.

Minnesota has scored impressive home triumphs, whipping Wisconsin 81-57 and dumping Ohio State 97-77 Saturday night. But in between those games, the Gophers were sidetracked at Illinois, 75-72.

Purdue, still smarting from Saturday's 103-84 loss at Michigan, is in no mood to suffer its third conference loss in four games. A defeat by Minnesota virtually would eliminate Purdue from the title race.

Northwestern recorded its first Big Ten triumph with a 76-75 decision at Michigan State on Jim Cummins' goal with six seconds to play.

Upsetting Gators Meet Crimson Tide Tonight

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Florida won't have to wait long to learn whether its latest basketball meeting with Kentucky symbolized an ascent, a descent or both.

The Gators, usually one of the weakest teams in the Southeast Conference, tangle with Alabama tonight following an 84-68 triumph over Kentucky that kept them in the middle of the league race.

The victory marked the first time in 31 years and only the second time in 23 meetings the Gators have beaten Kentucky. The unusual development thus raises the question:

Does the outcome herald Florida's ascent toward the top of the SEC, or does it primarily emphasize the Wildcats' march in the other direction?

Florida now holds third place in the conference with a 5-1 record while posting an 11-3 mark over-all.

The Wildcats, 3-3 and 8-7, are within striking distance of their worst record under Rupp.

With the Baron in charge the past 23 years, Kentucky teams have lost more than nine games in a season.

But while the Wildcats early could surpass the loss record, the Gators most likely will find it much more difficult reaching the top of the SEC and a spot in the post-season NCAA tournament.

After Alabama tonight, Florida plays Kentuckey again on Saturday, this time on the Wildcats' home court, than clashes with Auburn, Tennessee and Vanderbilt in the following three weeks. Kentucky plays the same teams in the latter half of February.

Vanderbilt leads the league race with a 4-0 record while Auburn is second at 6-1 and Tennessee fourth with 4-1. Alabama holds fifth place, one notch ahead of Kentucky, with . 3-2 mark.

In Saturday's game, Florida's height proved too much for the Wildcats, who trailed 37-31 at halftime and never caught up in the second half. Gary Keller and Brooks Henderson each scored 20 points for Florida while Lou Dampier had 20 for the losers.

Elsewhere on the relatively light schedule, only four of the Top Ten teams played. Sixth-ranked Providence maintained its standing as the nation's only unbeaten major team by defeating Seton Hall 88-81 second-rated Michigan crushed Purdue 103-84; St. Joseph's, No. 3, downed Penn 88-72 and St. John's, No. 8, whipped St. Francis, N.Y., 75-61.

Providence won its 12th game behind Jim Walker's 25 points while Tom Duff scored 22 in St. Joseph's triumph over Penn in the second game of a Philadelphia doubleheader. Villanova edged Detroit 72-70 in the first game on Bill Melchionni's two free throws with four seconds left.

Michigan extended its record to 11-2 as Oliver Darden poured in 27 points, and Ken McIntyre's 25 points led St. John's to its eighth straight victory.

Oklahoma State held onto its unbeaten record, 4-0, in the Big Eight with a 55-53 victory over Nebraska on Gene Johnson's field goal with five seconds to play.

Both Miami teams won. Rick Barry pumped in 46 points as Miami, Fla., trouned Rollins 128-95 while Miami, Ohio, rolled to its ninth victory without a loss in the Mid-American Conference, an 87-55 decision over Kent State.

In other games, Drake downed Cincinnati 89-80, Xavier, Ohio, outlasted Duquesne 96-90, Northern Michigan upset Oklahoma 75-74, Northwestern edged Michigan State 76-75, Iowa State upset Kansas 64-58, Canisius did the same to St. Bonaventure 70-67.

Dayton defeated Louisville 83-76, Minnesota crushed Ohio State 97-77, Brigham Young walloped Utah 88-67, Auburn romped over Georgia 96-65, Tennessee stopped Georgia Tech 55-48 and Oregon beat Washington State 74-60.

Palmer, Danes Meet Tonight

Palmer and Fountain Valley play tonight in the finale of the second round of City Hockey League play. After tonight, each team has four more games before the league tournament, scheduled for Feb. 17-18 in the Broadmoor World Areana.

Cheyenne leads the league with a 7-1 record, with games left (in order) with Fountain Valley, Wasson, Widefield and Palmer. Each win by the Indians will eliminate the team they are playing from title competition. Fountain Valley and Wasson each have four losses. The most losses Cheyenne can accumulate is five.

Thus the three teams still with a mathematical chance at the crown — Palmer, Wasson and Fountain Valley — will be looking to stop the Indians.

Palmer is the only team with a real chance at the title. The Terrors, defending champions, are 5-2. If both Palmer and Cheyenne continue to win, the championship will be decided Feb. 11 when the two teams meet.

Cheyenne's front line continues to dominate the scoring. Don Heyliger has nine goals and 13 assists for 18 points. Following the leaders are Fountain Valley's Newell Weed, six goals and nine assists, and Palmer's Greg Good, seven goals and five assists.

Leading goalie is Cheyenne's Sandy Dee, who has made 83 saves and allowed 11 goals. Dee also leads by a slim margin in the average goals allowed per game department. Dee has allowed 1.375 goals per game, compared to John Wendt of Wasson's 1.385.

Cowboys Take Command In Big Eight Cage Chase

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oklahoma State took command in the Big Eight by escaping its Nebraska jinx Saturday while Kansas was upset by Iowa State. Oklahoma State has a golden opportunity this week to pad its lead against Colorado and Missouri in Stillwater.

Hank Iba's veterans face Colorado Thursday and Missouri Saturday in Gallagher Hall. Colorado and Missouri are tied for second with 2-1 records at this stage, behind OSU's 4-0. A sweep would give Iba's club an iron grip on first place.

Oklahoma plays at Iowa State in the only game tonight.

Kansas State, 2-2, and Kansas, 3-3, still are in contention for the title race, although the Jayhawks have their backs to the wall after Iowa State shocked them 64-58 at Lawrence in a televised game.

Kansas was trying to beat the same club for the third time in four weeks — a difficult job against any team in the Big Eight. OSU was shooting for the same triple at Lincoln, and was almost bumped off.

Nebraska led 50-44 with 3:21 left but Gary Hassmann, top scorer with 17, paced a Cowboy rally. Gene Johnson's goal with five seconds left won it 55-53.

Iowa State outrebounded, outshot and outhustled Kansas with Dave Fleming scoring 19 and Al Koch 16. Walt Wesley, 6-foot-11 Kansas pivot who came in with a 26-point league scoring average, fouled out with 6:45 left and tallied 15 points. By then, Iowa State led 48-40.

The race is still young and fans of the other contenders like to point out that all four Oklahoma State league victories were over Iowa State and Nebraska. A closer look, however, shows the Cowboys have a perfect 5-0 record at home, 4-2 on the road and 2-2 on neutral courts.

Oklahoma was upset 75-74 by Northern Michigan at Norman Saturday on a goal by Gene Summers with 13 seconds to go.

CSC Takes Over First In RMC; Alamosa Second

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Colorado State College took a firm hold on first place in Rocky Mountain Conference basketball over the weekend with a pair of victories over Western State.

CSC turned back Western 72-66 Saturday night after taking a 73-55 victory Friday.

The defeats dropped Western into the league basement with Colorado Mines, which was idle.

Next weekend's action features two meetings between CSC and second-place Adams State, which has split series with Western and Mines in four league games.

Western takes a breather from league action, meeting nonconference foes Regis and Ft. Lewis on Thursday and Saturday respectively.

Jim Brown Named Top Pro Athlete

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "This has been a great year — the championship and now this. Honestly, I can't say which means more now. They're both great."

It was Jimmy Brown talking. The great fullback of the champion Cleveland Browns of the National Football League had just been named winner of the S. Rae Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award Sunday and the $10,000 diamond-studded, gold-buckled belt that goes with it.

The championship was Brown's first with the Browns since he came up as an All-America from Syracuse.

"I would rather have the NFL title than any individual rushing championship," said the 28-year-old star who has captured the rushing crown in seven of the eight years he's been with the Browns.

Brown nosed out auto driving ace A.J. Foyt of Houston for the prize in the second closest vote in 10 years of the award. Brown won by seven points in the vote by a national panel of 136 sports writers and sporcasters.

Jimmy received 26 first place votes and a total of 161 points. Foyt, winner of the Indianapolis 500, collected more first place votes, 38, but less points, 154.

Points were counted on a basis of three for a first place vote, two for a second and one for a third.

In third place was Dean Chance of the Los Angeles Angels, baseball's outstanding pitcher of 1964, with 18 firsts and 97 points. Johnny Unitas, quarterback of the Baltimore Colts, was fourth with 12 first and 80 points. Bob Gibson, pitching star of the champion St. Louis Cardinals, and golfing comeback star Ken Venturi tied for fifth with eight first and 68 points each.

Brown received the award and an ovation from some 1,000 guests at this annual charity dinner of the Rochester Press and Radio Club.

'Chuvalo by Kayo', Louis

NEW YORK (AP) — "Chuvalo, by a knockout," says Joe Louis.

"Patterson, all the way," says Jimmy Braddock.

"Patterson, 8½ to 5," say the odds makers.

The two former world heavyweight champions made their picks after a weekend visit to the snowbound training camps of Floyd Patterson and George Chuvalo, while the odds favoring Patterson in next Monday's fight took a slight dip.

Patterson, former two-time champion attempting still another comeback against Chuvalo, had been a 2 to 1 favorite last week. The Canadian Chuvalo is ranked No. 3 among the world's heavyweight challengers by the World Boxing Association. Patterson is No. 2.

Their bout in Madison Square Garden is regarded as the last stepping stone to a shot at the vacant WBA version of the title.

The fight is scheduled for 12 rounds, but Louis said it won't last that long.

"Chuvalo punches too hard for Patterson," said the old Brown Bomber, who held the heavyweight title from 1937 until 1949. "I watched him work out for two days and I never saw him take a backward step. He'll wear Floyd down in seven or eight rounds and then knock him out.

"A lot of men have knocked Patterson down, but he got up to win. When this boy knocks him down, I think he'll stay down. Don't forget he knocked out Doug Jones and nobody ever did that before."

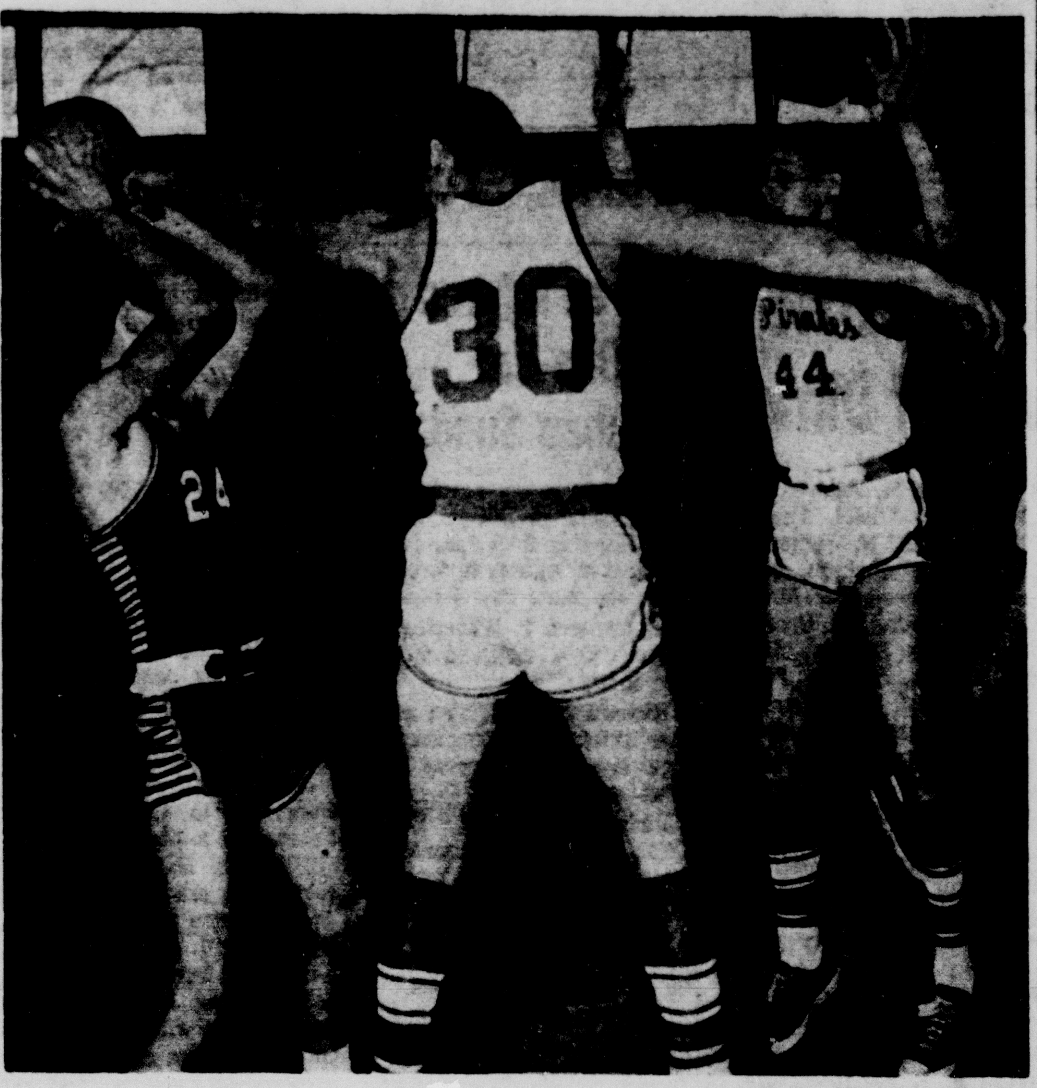
Braddock, who won the title in 1935 and lost it to Louis, disagreed.

"Patterson won the title twice, don't forget, and he must have something to be able to do that," Braddock said Sunday.

"I think he's got too much experience for Chuvalo. He's the fastest heavyweight I ever saw. His speed is in his hands, not his feet. I don't think his punch is enough to knock out George, so I look for the fight to go all the way with Patterson winning."

Chuavlo, who is training in Monticello, N.Y., went six rounds against three sparring partners Sunday.

Patterson, training in Marlboro, N.Y., boxed four rounds and concentrated on speed.



YOU WANT A PUNCH IN THE BASKETBALL — Sam Zavatti (30) of St. Mary's appears to have a good left jab headed for the basketball during this action from the Pirates' game with St. Joseph's of Denver Sunday. In fact, Zavatti apparently already has teammate Larry Walters (44) ready to surrender. Actually, it all occurred as the two Pirates were attempting to stop a shot by the Bulldogs' Marv Lauer (24). St. Mary's grabbed an easy 71-40 victory to remain tied with Mullen for the Denver Parochial League lead.

Bucs Easily Whip Bulldogs To Remain Tied for First

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

That misstep against Mullen two weeks ago continues to loom bigger in the battle plans of Dan Wright's St. Mary's Pirates these days as the Denver Parochial League basketball chase nears the conclusion of the first round.

Sunday afternoon at the St. Mary's Gymnasium, the Bucs defensed St. Joseph's of Denver into submission 71-40, but at the same hour the Mustangs were streaking past Cathedral 72-58, thus retaining the knot at the top of the DPL standings. And as the weeks tick by it becomes increasingly evident that if the Pirates hope to annex the 1965 championship, their big move will have to come at the Mullen Gymnasium, Feb. 12.

Of course, there are a lot of basketballs to go through the nets before then and another of the clutch situations is upcoming this Friday. St. Francis sounded a stern warning Sunday afternoon with a 76-60 triumph over a strong Machebeauf team and the Gremlins will be here Friday night to challenge the Pirates in a game that was originally scheduled for Denver. Once past that one, the local club can breathe easier Sunday. The home court foe that day will be the last place Mt. Carmel, a team that is winless — and likely to stay that way!

The Pirates tried to make Sunday's task against the Bulldogs appear demanding for the better part of three quarters. But they eventually tried of that sport and applied a thick coat of shellac in the final 10 minutes of action. St. Joseph's had only periodic success at picking its way through the tight net of St. Mary's defense and the Bulldogs could do little in the way of containing the balanced Buc attack.

The contest was never really close, although the visitors managed to hang within a 10 or 11 point spread until the midway point of the third period. Then the remaining defensive resistance crumbled and the Pirates had scooted to a lead of some 25 points when Wright started sweeping off the bench with several minutes still remaining.

The word for the Buc offense Sunday was balance. Four starters hit in double figures, one reserve almost got there, and 10 of the 12 players employed by the St. Mary's coach got on the scorepad. Tom McCarthy, the Pirates' high-scorer for the season, jitterbugged through the Bulldogs for 13 points to gain top honors but Sam Zavatti had 12, John Van Horn 11, and Tom Socha 10. Larry Walters came to the rescue of Van Horn who was in foul trouble on a couple of occasions and finished with nine points.

It was Zavatti's hot hand that provided the early edge. He got things going with a long arching jumper from the side with less than a minute gone and Van Horn and McCarthy quickly added goals to run the edge to 6-0 before the Bulldogs had even penetrated close enough to get a decent cast at the bucket.

Zavatti looped in another pair as the Bucs spread the margin to 11-3 with 4:11 to go in the period but St. Joseph's crept back to within five points before Socha and Zavatti closed out the quarter with a pair of two-pointers that jumped the advantage to 19-10.

That's just about where it stayed during the next eight minutes. The Bulldogs got within seven at 23-16 with 5:30 left and were just eight back before Jerry Knauf's closing goal that provided a 31-21 spread at halftime. It was still just 11 points at 41-30 with 4:06 to go in the third stanza but the Pirates then ran in eight points while the 'Dogs were scoring one and the romp was on. The bulge had swelled to 60-34 by the midpoint of the final period before Wright called off his hounds. The reserves finished out.

Gophers Get Big 10 Test Against Purdue

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP) — If the Minnesota Gophers still harbor preseason hopes of winning the Big Ten basketball championship, they will have to prove they can win away from home.

And the Gophers get their chance tonight when they invade Lafayette to take on Purdue's bruised and battered Boilermakers.

A victory over Purdue — a tough chore in the Boilermaker lair — would keep Minnesota in Big Ten contention, assuming somewhere along the line somebody knocks off Michigan. A loss to Purdue would give the Gophers a 2-2 mark and drop them close to the second division.

Minnesota has scored impressive home triumphs, whipping Wisconsin 81-57 and dumping Ohio State 97-77 Saturday night. But in between those games, the Gophers were sidetracked at Illinois, 75-72.

Purdue, still smarting from Saturday's 103-84 loss at Michigan, is in no mood to suffer its third conference loss in four games. A defeat by Minnesota virtually would eliminate Purdue from the title race.

Northwestern recorded its first Big Ten triumph with a 76-75 decision at Michigan State on Jim Cummins' goal with six seconds to play.

Upsetting Gators Meet Crimson Tide Tonight

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Florida won't have to wait long to learn whether its latest basketball meeting with Kentucky symbolized an ascent, a descent or both.

The Gators, usually one of the weakest teams in the Southeast Conference, tangle with Alabama tonight following an 84-68 triumph over Kentucky that kept them in the middle of the league race.

The victory marked the first time in 31 years and only the second time in 23 meetings the Gators have beaten Kentucky. The unusual development thus raises the question:

Does the outcome herald Florida's ascent toward the top of the SEC, or does it primarily emphasize the Wildcats' march in the other direction?

Florida now holds third place in the conference with a 5-1 record while posting an 11-3 mark over-all.

The Wildcats, 3-3 and 8-7, are within striking distance of their worst record under Rupp.

With the Baron in charge the past 23 years, Kentucky teams have lost more than nine games in a season.

But while the Wildcats early could surpass the loss record, the Gators most likely will find it much more difficult reaching the top of the SEC and a spot in the post-season NCAA tournament.

After Alabama tonight, Florida plays Kentuckey again on Saturday, this time on the Wildcats' home court, than clashes with Auburn, Tennessee and Vanderbilt in the following three weeks. Kentucky plays the same teams in the latter half of February.

Vanderbilt leads the league race with a 4-0 record while Auburn is second at 6-1 and Tennessee fourth with 4-1. Alabama holds fifth place, one notch ahead of Kentucky, with . 3-2 mark.

In Saturday's game, Florida's height proved too much for the Wildcats, who trailed 37-31 at halftime and never caught up in the second half. Gary Keller and Brooks Henderson each scored 20 points for Florida while Lou Dampier had 20 for the losers.

Elsewhere on the relatively light schedule, only four of the Top Ten teams played. Sixth-ranked Providence maintained its standing as the nation's only unbeaten major team by defeating Seton Hall 88-81 second-rated Michigan crushed Purdue 103-84; St. Joseph's, No. 3, downed Penn 88-72 and St. John's, No. 8, whipped St. Francis, N.Y., 75-61.

Providence won its 12th game behind Jim Walker's 25 points while Tom Duff scored 22 in St. Joseph's triumph over Penn in the second game of a Philadelphia doubleheader. Villanova edged Detroit 72-70 in the first game on Bill Melchionni's two free throws with four seconds left.

Michigan extended its record to 11-2 as Oliver Darden poured in 27 points, and Ken McIntyre's 25 points led St. John's to its eighth straight victory.

Oklahoma State held onto its unbeaten record, 4-0, in the Big Eight with a 55-53 victory over Nebraska on Gene Johnson's field goal with five seconds to play.

Both Miami teams won. Rick Barry pumped in 46 points as Miami, Fla., trouned Rollins 128-95 while Miami, Ohio, rolled to its ninth victory without a loss in the Mid-American Conference, an 87-55 decision over Kent State.

In other games, Drake downed Cincinnati 89-80, Xavier, Ohio, outlasted Duquesne 96-90, Northern Michigan upset Oklahoma 75-74, Northwestern edged Michigan State 76-75, Iowa State upset Kansas 64-58, Canisius did the same to St. Bonaventure 70-67.

Dayton defeated Louisville 83-76, Minnesota crushed Ohio State 97-77, Brigham Young walloped Utah 98-67, Auburn romped over Georgia 96-65, Tennessee stopped Georgia Tech 55-48 and Oregon beat Washington State 74-60.

Palmer, Danes Meet Tonight

Palmer and Fountain Valley play tonight in the finale of the second round of City Hockey League play. After tonight, each team has four more games before the league tournament, scheduled for Feb. 17-18 in the Broadmoor World Areana.

Cheyenne leads the league with a 7-1 record, with games left (in order) with Fountain Valley, Wasson, Widefield and Palmer. Each win by the Indians will eliminate the team they are playing from title competition. Fountain Valley and Wasson each have four losses. The most losses Cheyenne can accumulate is five.

Thus the three teams still with a mathematical chance at the crown — Palmer, Wasson and Fountain Valley — will be looking to stop the Indians.

Palmer is the only team with a real chance at the title. The Terrors, defending champions, are 5-2. If both Palmer and Cheyenne continue to win, the championship will be decided Feb. 11 when the two teams meet.

Cheyenne's front line continues to dominate the scoring. Don Heyliger has nine goals and 13 assists for 18 points. Following the leaders are Fountain Valley's Newell Weed, six goals and nine assists, and Palmer's Greg Good, seven goals and five assists.

Leading goalie is Cheyenne's Sandy Dee, who has made 83 saves and allowed 11 goals. Dee also leads by a slim margin in the average goals allowed per game department. Dee has allowed 1.375 goals per game, compared to John Wendt of Wasson's 1.385.

Cepeda Returns Signed Contract

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Orlando Cepeda, slugging first baseman of the San Francisco Giants, heads the list of players who signed contracts during the weekend for the 1965 baseball season.

Cepeda received a $2,000 raise, bringing his salary to about $55,000. Only Willie Mays, who earns $105,000, has a bigger salary on the team.

The Puerto Rican led the Giants with a .304 batting average last year, adding 31 homers and 97 runs batted in. He said his right knee is okay after an operation in New York last month.

Other National Leaguers to sign were second baseman Bill Mazeroski and relief pitcher Roy Face of Pittsburgh, outfielder Ty Cline of Milwaukee and five New York Mets — outfielder Billy Cowan and pitchers Tom Parsons, Darrell Sutherland, Dick Selma, Jerry Hinsley and Frank McGraw.

Crampton First Foreigner To Take Clambake Crown

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Bing Crosby's annual experiment in human endurance — his $84,500 golf tournament — is over and handsome australian Bruce Crampton emerged the winner.

Today the golfers and their fans could discard their rain coats, greatcoats and all-weather gear after a weekend that must be known as the big blow—cold and rainy.

The skies turned bright Sunday, afternoon, but not until they'd delivered a final brisk shower in the morning.

Next stop on the pro tour is the $55,000 Lucky International Open in San Francisco. "Crosby weather" may prevail there but it can't be worse than it was here.

Crampton, 29, who won the Australian open at age 20, is the first foreigner to win the Crosby.

He moved into the lead for the first time early in Sunday's round and finished with a three-under-par 69 and a three-under 284 for the 72 holes. It was worth $7,500.

Crampton whipped "The Monster," the Pebble Beach Golf course which is 6,320 yards of golfing chagrin and frustration with a par 36-36—72, in 32-73—69.

Tony Lema, the defending champion, finished with a 72 for 287. Jack Nicklaus, with a 71, and Bill Casper Jr. with a 72, tied at 288.

Lema won $4,000. Casper and Nicklaus each got $3,100.

Arnold Palmer shot an 80 for a 302 total.

National Open champion Ken Venturi and PGA ruler Bobby Nichols failed to survive the 54-hole cut.

Newcomer Rocky Thompson of Wichita Falls, Tex., who was the surprise leader going into the final round, scored a 78 for 290, along with Ken Still, 70, and Jacky Cupit, 75. Each received $1,833.33.

Crampton credited Nicklaus with a big assist in his play. Jack volunteered to give Bruce a lesson Wednesday while they fired away on the practice tee.

"I want you to tell everyone," said Bruce later, "how much I appreciate that Jack took the time to help a nobody like me."

Nicklaus has a successful custom, it seems, of helping Australian golfers. He gave Bruce Devlin aid in the St. Petersburg, Fla. Open last March and Devlin won.

In the pro-amateur play, there was a tie between the teams of pros George Archer and amateur Nelson Cullenward, San Francisco sports writer, and George Bayer and Morgan Barofsky, Walnut Creek of Calif., with best ba scores of 260. The pros won $3,350 apiece.

Western Conference Fives Take League Breather

By BOB EGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Western Athletic Conference basketball teams turn to competition of the non-league variety as they sharpen their claws for the stretch run in the wide-open title chase.

The league's six members resume conference warfare Feb. 11, but before that they have 23 contests in which to improve their collective 53-19 record against non league opposition.

They face an ambitious 11-game slate this week, highlighted by a San Francisco invasion of Arizona territory. The ninth-ranked Dons play at Arizona Thursday night and Arizona State University on Saturday.

Brigham Young, the pre-season favorite, surprised a few people Saturday night. The Cougars were favored to whip Utah at Provo, but not by a 98-67 margin.

Arizona State outscrambled Utah State 99-93 and Wyoming topped Colorado State University 77-68 in other games Saturday night.

Brigham Young's victory over Utah hiked the Cougars' record to 11-4 and boosted them into a tie with Wyoming (10-5) and New Mexico (12-2) for second place in the conference standing All have 2-1 records and stand just one-half game behind Arizona (11-4 and 3-1).

All is not lost for Utah (12-4). The Redskins stand only 1-2 in league play, but all three of their games have been on the road. Things may change when they start playing host.

The Redskins couldn't match Brigham Young's firepower Saturday. The Cougars jumped ahead on two quick buckets by Dick Nemelka and never were headed.

WESTERN ATHLETIC CONFERENCE

Ariz. St.	0	4	.000	7	10	.412	1473	1488

Nemelka finished with 21 points to lead both teams in scoring. John Chambers had 16 for Utah.

Arizona State, likewise, took command from the outset and never relinquished the lead in its game against Utah State.

The Sun Devils, who still entertain hopes of an eighth straight .500 or better season, got a 35 point performance from junior Dennis Hamilton. Utah State's Wayne Estes and Leroy Walker scored 29 and 28 respectively.

Wyoming reached a milestone in its win over Colorado State. It was the first time in 13 tries the Cowboys have beaten the Rams.

Flynn Robinson hit 28 points and Leon Clark 24 as the Cowboys won their fifth straight. CSU's Lonnie Wright had 21.

Although the two Arizona schools must face the nation's ninth-ranked team this week, at least they'll be doing it on their home floors.

Utah's two conference members face the unpopular assignment of meeting respected foes on the road.

Brigham Young is at Air Force Friday and Denver Saturday while Utah travels to Logan Saturday to meet Utah State.

Other games this week:

Wednesday — Arizona at Arizona State College.

Thursday — New Mexico at Texas Western.

Friday — San Jose at Wyoming.

Saturday — Memphis State at Arizona, New Mexico at New Mexico State, Wyoming at Air Force.

Crosby Golf Receip's Reach All-Time High

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gate receipts for the 1965 Bing Crosby Golf Tournament reached an all-time high of $116,130, officials reported Sunday.

The previous high was $113,432 in 1963. It was estimated that 35,000 persons watched the four days of golf — some of them seeing the play on more than one day.

The biggest gate total was 50,967 on Saturday, ironically during a wind and rain storm.

Celts Don't Mourn At Death of Streak

BOSTON (AP) — "It's great to be a winner again," someone shouted in the Celtics' dressing room.

The Boston club, careening toward a record number of victories in a National Basketball Association season, didn't stop to mourn the end of a 16-game winning streak.

Instead, the seven-time world champions took it out on Los Angeles 117-93 Sunday, administering a stern lesson in the arts of basket making-and-stopping.

The triumph was the 24th in the last 26 starts for Boston which at 42-8 is eight full games ahead of Eastern Division runner-up Cincinnati with 30 to play.

The Royals beat San Francisco 124-103 Sunday, enabling the Warriors to set a league mark for consecutive losses at 16. The Warriors had previously tied the old mark of 15 set by Denver in 1949.

In the only game played Sunday night, the Baltimore Bullets turned back the St. Louis Hawks 114-106.

The Celts remain on target for 67 victories, seven better than the one season high they established in 1960.

Coach Red Auerbach discussed the anatomy of a streak on his team after the nationally televised battle was settled by a third quarter blitz. Boston outscored the Lakers 16-2 in the final minutes of the period it dominated 31-19.

K. C. Jones set up five baskets and scored three. Hobbling Tommy Heinsohn got seven points in the stretch and the Lakers, who had five times rallied to within a single point, were left breathless in the wake.

Sam Jones was Boston's high man with 27. Elgin Baylor collected 30 for Los Angeles but didn't have enough help.

Boston was one short of the NBA winning streak record when it lost to Philadelphia 104-100 at Syracuse Saturday night. Did the loss ease any tension on the club?

"No," Auerbach said. "There is no pressure as such.

"These guys are all pros. When you get eight or nine in a row you don't even think about it. This team has done it so often.

"When it gets to around 12 or 13 straight and the papers start building it up, naturally you can't help thinking about it.

"Then you look at your schedule of games coming up and tell yourself you haven't got a chance.

"But suddenly you're right on the verge of it. So you think about it. But you don't get beaten by those thoughts."

"No pressure," added Heinsohn. "We were ice cold. It was a bad game for us, and yet we were never out of it. Philadelphia played one of its best games. Simple as that."

Heinsohn, seated in a whirlpool bath where he was getting treatment for the foot injury and blood clot which had sidelined him a month until recently, was asked how soon he thought he'd be in top shape again.

"I should be ready for the playoffs," he said with a wink. But he took a look to make sure Auerbach didn't hear before he said it.

Nate Thurmond, successer to Wilt Chamberlain as the Warriors' big man, scored 31 points, but San Francisco couldn't come close to Cincinnati, which had four men with more than 20 points.

Bruins Brake Tailspin

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

They may not be the toast of the town, but Boston's battered Bruins are all even with their uppity basketball neighbors, the Celtics, today.

The National Hockey League tailenders and the National Basketball Association pace-setters each own one-game winning streaks.

The Bruins finally cornered the Montreal Canadiens Sunday, goalie Ed Johnston blanking the NHL leaders 3-0 to brake a five-game Boston tailspin.

Earlier in the day at Boston Garden, the Celtics, whose 16-game NBA winning skein was snapped Saturday night, had rebounded for a runaway victory over Los Angeles.

Johnston stopped 30 Montreal shots for his third shutout of the season and Ab McDonald led the attack with his 100th career goal as Boston beat the Canadiens for the first time in nine meetings. Goals by Tom Williams and Forbes Kennedy, the latter on a solo dash while the Bruins were shorthanded, padded the decision.

Montreal had won four straight with goalie Gump Worlsey, promoted from the Canadiens' Quebec farm club. The loss was the first for Worlsey in six NHL games this season.

The second-place Chicago Black Hawks cut Montreal's lead to two points by staggering New York 7-2 and the Detroit Red Wings moved to within one point of third-place Toronto by beating the Maple Leafs 4-1 in Sunday's other games.

The Canadiens topped the Bruins 5-1 while Toronto and New York played to a 1-1 standoff Saturday night.

Bobby Hull failed to boost his 37-goal total against the Rangers but the league point leader set up three tallies, including a breakaway score by younger brother Dennis while New York had a manpower advantage in the final period.

Kenny Wharram scored twice for the Hawks, who have hit for 14 goals in their last two games. Stan Mikita, Doug Mohns, Chico Makie and Phil Esposito also connected for Chicago, Camille Henry and Vic Hadfield for the road-weary Rangers.

Parker MacDonald and Larry Jeffrey got Detroit off to a 2-0 start with the game less than five minutes old. Eddie Joyal increased the margin early in the middle period before Toronto broke through goalie Roger Crozier on rookie Ron Ellis' 14th goal.

Gordie Howe completed the scoring, deflecting a Norm Ullman shot past Johnny Bower on a Detroit power play. The Wings peppered Bower with 42 shots.

Two U.S. Netters Post Victories

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Carole Caldwell Graebner of Beachwood, Ohio, overcame an injury today to move into the quarter-finals of the women's singles at the Australian Tennis Championships at Kooyong along with her Federation Cup teammate Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif.

Mrs. Graebner, who has a pulled hamstring muscle in the right leg, won her fourth-round match against South Australian Jill Starr, 6-4, 6-2.

Also gaining the quarter-finals were South Africa's Annette Van Zyl and Brazilian star Maria Bueno.

Miss Moffitt was a 5-7, 6-4, 6-1 victor over 17-year-old Kerry Melville of Australia. Miss Van Zyl provided the surprise of the tournament so far by beating Australian Lesley Turner 6-4, 7-5. Miss Bueno ousted Helen Gourlay of Tasmania 6-2, 6-4.

Despite her injury, Mrs. Graebner's victory was easy. She relied on her strong service and was able to beat Miss Starr in driving rallies.

Other quarter-final pairings include: Miss Tegart vs. Miss Bueno and Miss Smith vs. the winner of Tuesday's match between Jill Blackman of New South Wales and Francoise Durr of France.

Other results:

In the second round of the men's doubles, Pierre Barthes and Francois Jauffret of France defeated Bob Sherriff of New South Wales and Masanori Asai of Japan 7-5, 3-6, 7-5, 6-1; Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle of Australia defeated John Cottrill of Australia and Colin Zeeman of South Africa 6-4, 6-3, 6-3; Bill Bowrey and Owen Davidson of Australia defeated Barry Phillips Moore of South Australia and Christer Hol of Sweden 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3.

Pierre Darmon and Jean Noel Grinda of France, defeated Mitsuro Motoi and Ichizo Konishi of Japan 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 7-5; Tom Okker and Jan Majer of Holland defeated Eddie Beers and Geoff Pollard of Australia 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 7-9, 6-4, and Osamu Ishiguro and Kojii Watanabe of Japan defeated Bert Kearney and Graeme Stewart of Australia 6-3, 6-3, 10-8.

In the first round of women's doubles, Mrs. Graebner and Mrs. Pierre Darmo of France defeated Mary Harris and Aline Jenkins of Australia 6-2, 6-1.

MUTUAL CONGRATULATIONS—Dick Weber (left) of St. Louis, Mo., and Anne Slattery of Salt Lake City, exchange a kiss of mutual congratulations after they won the men's and women's title, respectively, in the All-State Bowling Championships in Philadelphia on Sunday. Weber won his third title with a victory over Jim St. John, Santa Clara, Calif., 608-586 for $15,000 in three games. Miss Slattery won $5,000 women's title in defeating Sandy Hooper of Anaheim, Calif., 597-550 in three games. (AP Wirephoto)

Weber, Slattery Come Back to Win Bowl Meet

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dick Weber of St. Louis and Ann Slattery of Salt Lake City spotted their opponents formidable leads in the opening game but battled back to win the championship matches at the $100,000 All-Star Bowling Tournament.

Weber won his third All-Star title Sunday by outscoring Jim St. John of Santa Clara, Calif., 608-586 in the three-game title match. St. John jumped off to a 34-pin lead when he outscored the champion 224-190 in the first game. But Weber came back with a 192-226 as St. John tapered off to 165 and 197 in the remaining games.

Weber, who pocketed $15,000, won the 1962 All-Star in Miami Beach and repeated the following year in Kansas City, Mo. He has the added satisfaction this year of being the first bowler in the tournament's 24 - year history to win the qualifying trophy and the championship.

Mrs. Slattery won the $5,000 women's title by crushing pretty Sandy Hooper of Anaheim, Calif., 597-550, for three games. Mrs. Hooper took a 26-pin lead when she shot 204 to Mrs. Slattery's 178 in the first game. Mrs. Slattery bounced back with 207 and 212, however, while Mrs. Hooper lost the range and shot 163 and 183.

Weber earned his berth in the title match by winning the American Division in the four-day, 56-game round robin series which ended Saturday night. He compiled a record of 37 wins and 19 losses and averaged more than 216. St. John won the National Division with a 32 won and 24 lost record and a 213 plus average.

St. John's $8,000 second place prize gives him an income of $15,500 from two tournaments conducted less than two months apart. He won the $7,500 World's Invitational Championship in Chicago last November.

Mrs. Slattery, 35, mother of a 9-year-old daughter, won the National Division in the 44-game women's round robin to set the stage for her appearance in Sunday's roll-off.

Mills Upset Highlights L.A. Track

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Schoolteacher George Young was chosen athlete of the meet after his upset of veteran distance runner Lt. Billy Mills and little Gerry Lindgren in the Los Angeles Invitational Indoor track meet.

Young, who set an American steeplechase record at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo, surprised the Marine officer and 18-year-old Lindgren by taking the two-mile run Saturday night.

The 27-year-old Young, of Casa Grande, Ariz., sprinted the final quarter in 58.3 for an easy victory.

Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State set an American women's record of 6.7 in the 60-yard dash. Miss Tyus won the 100 meters at the Olympics.

Ralph Boston of the Southern California Striders sailed 26 feet, 5 inches in the long jump for victory, and Bill Crothers of Canada took the 600-yard run.

Dyrol Burleson of Oregon captured the mile in a slow 4:07.2, unheralded Earl McCullouch won the 60-yard hurdles in 7.2 as Rex Cawley, 400-meter hurdles gold medalist in the Olympics was second, and Jack Yerman of the Santa Clara Youth Village finished first in the 500-yard dash with a 59.0 clocking while Mike Larrabee, 400-meter winner at Tokyo, was last.

Young, timed in 8:41.2, outdistanced Mills by 25 yards while young Lindgren, who had led most of the way, was third.

Young said the most satisfying aspect of his victory was not in beating Mills, the surprise U.S. winner in the 10,000 meters at the Olympics, but in bettering the meet and arena record of 8:41.4, held by Gaston Reolants of Belgium.

"Roelants won the steeplechase in the Olympics at Tokyo and I finished fifth," said the handsome high school science teacher. "So erasing his record here was some kind of revenge."

Lindgren set the pace and held onto his lead for 17 laps of the 22-lap event. Mills then took over, but only briefly as Young began his tremendous kick in the final quarter-mile.

Get there faster in a SAAB!

Skiers! Get skiing faster in a true skier's car. SAAB climbs rugged mountain roads with the sure-footed traction that only front-wheel drive can provide. Front-wheel drive also reduces dangerous rear end "swing and sway" that often occurs when roads are icy and slick. Up front SAAB's powerful economy-minded engine has the pull it takes to get you there and back quickly and safely. And wait until you test SAAB's big heater-defroster system — so hot you can go up and back in shirt sleeves. There are many more reasons why the 1965 SAAB is THE car for skiers, or for that matter, THE car for any kind of winter driving. See your local dealer soon for the full story on the 1965

Crampton First Foreigner To Take Clambake Crown

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Bing Crosby's annual experiment in human endurance — his $84,500 golf tournament — is over and handsome australian Bruce Crampton emerged the winner.

Today the golfers and their fans could discard their rain coats, greatcoats and all-weather gear after a weekend that must be known as the big blow—cold and rainy.

The skies turned bright Sunday, afternoon, but not until they'd delivered a final brisk shower in the morning.

Next stop on the pro tour is the $55,000 Lucky International Open in San Francisco. "Crosby weather" may prevail there but it can't be worse than it was here.

Crampton, 29, who won the Australian open at age 20, is the first foreigner to win the Crosby.

He moved into the lead for the first time early in Sunday's round and finished with a three-under-par 69 and a three-under 284 for the 72 holes. it was worth $7,500.

Crampton whipped "The Monster," the Pebble Beach Golf course which is 6,320 yards of golfing chagrin and frustration with a par 36-36—72, in 32-73—69.

Tony Lema, the defending champion, finished with a 72 for 287. Jack Nicklaus, with a 71, and Bill Casper Jr. with a 72, tied at 288.

Lema won $4,000. Casper and Nicklaus each got $3,100.

Arnold Palmer shot an 80 for a 302 total.

National Open champion Ken Venturi and PGA ruler Bobby Nichols failed to survive the 54-hole cut.

Newcomer Rocky Thompson of Wichita Falls, Tex., who was the surprise leader going into the final round, scored a 78 for 290, along with Ken Still, 70, and Jacky Cupit, 75. Each received $1,833.33.

Crampton credited Nicklaus with a big assist in his play. Jack volunteered to give Bruce a lesson Wednesday while they fired away on the practice tee.

"I want you to tell everyone," said Bruce later, "how much I appreciate that Jack took the time to help a nobody like me."

Nicklaus has a successful custom, it seems, of helping Australian golfers. He gave Bruce Devlin aid in the St. Petersburg, Fla. Open last March and Devlin won.

In the pro-amateur play, there was a tie between the teams of pros George Archer and amateur Nelson Cullenward, San Francisco sports writer, and George Bayer and Morgan Barofsky, Walnut Creek of Calif., with best ba scores of 200. The pros won $3,350 apiece.

Western Conference Fives Take League Breather

By BOB EGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Western Athletic Conference basketball teams turn to competition of the non-league variety as they sharpen their claws for the stretch run in the wide-open title chase.

The league's six members resume conference warfare Feb. 11, but before that they have 23 contests in which to improve their collective 53-19 record against non league opposition.

They face an ambitious 11-game slate this week, highlighted by a San Francisco invasion of Arizona territory. The ninth-ranked Dons play at Arizona Thursday night and Arizona State University on Saturday.

Brigham Young, the pre-season favorite, surprised a few people Saturday night. The Cougars were favored to whip Utah at Provo, but not by a 98-67 margin.

Arizona State outscrambled Utah State 99-83 and Wyoming topped Colorado State University 77-68 in other games Saturday night.

Brigham Young's victory over Utah hiked the Cougars' record to 11-4 and boosted them into a tie with Wyoming (10-5) and New Mexico (12-2) for second place in the conference standing. All have 2-1 records and stand just one-half game behind Arizona (11-4 and 3-1).

All is not lost for Utah (12-4). The Redskins stand only 1-2 in league play, but all three of their games have been on the road. Things may change when they start playing host.

The Redskins couldn't match Brigham Young's firepower Saturday. The Cougars jumped ahead on two quick buckets by Dick Nemelka and never were headed.

WESTERN ATHLETIC CONFERENCE

	Conference W	L	Pct.	All Games W	L	Pct.	Pts.	OP
Arizona	3	1	.750	11	4	.733	1039	998
N. Mexico	2	1	.666	12	2	.857	1022	830
BYU	2	1	.666	11	4	.733	1433	1223
Wyoming	2	1	.666	10	5	.666	1273	1135
Utah	1	2	.333	12	4	.750	1366	1244
Ariz. St.	0	4	.000	7	10	.412	1473	1488

Nemelka finished with 21 points to lead both teams in scoring. John Chambers had 16 for Utah.

Arizona State, likewise, took command from the outset and never relinquished the lead in its game against Utah State.

The Sun Devils, who still entertain hopes of an eighth straight .500 or better season, got a 35 point performance from junior Dennis Hamilton. Utah State's Wayne Estes and Leroy Walker scored 29 and 28 respectively.

Wyoming reached a milestone in its win over Colorado State. It was the first time in 13 tries the Cowboys have beaten the Rams.

Flynn Robinson hit 28 points and Leon Clark 24 as the Cowboys won their fifth straight. CSU's Lonnie Wright had 21.

Although the two Arizona schools must face the nation's ninth-ranked team this week, at least they'll be doing it on their home floors.

Utah's two conference members face the unpopular assignment of meeting respected foes on the road.

Brigham Young is at Air Force Friday and Denver Saturday while Utah travels to Logan Saturday to meet Utah State.

Other games this week:

Wednesday — Arizona at Arizona State College.

Thursday — New Mexico at Texas Western.

Friday — San Jose at Wyoming.

Saturday — Memphis State at Arizona, New Mexico at New Mexico State, Wyoming at Air Force.

Celts Don't Mourn At Death of Streak

BOSTON (AP) — "It's great to be a winner again," someone shouted in the Celtics' dressing room.

The Boston club, careening toward a record number of victories in a National Basketball Association season, didn't stop to mourn the end of a 16-game winning streak.

Instead, the seven-time world champions took it out on Los Angeles 117-93 Sunday, administering a stern lesson in the arts of basket making-and-stopping.

The triumph was the 24th in the last 26 starts for Boston which at 42-8 is eight full games ahead of Eastern Division runner-up Cincinnati with 30 to play.

The Royals beat San Francisco 124-103 Sunday, enabling the Warriors to set a league mark for consecutive losses at 16. The Warriors had previously tied the old mark of 15 set by Denver in 1949.

In the only game played Sunday night, the Baltimore Bullets turned back the St. Louis Hawks 114-106.

The Celts remain on target for 67 victories, seven better than the one season high they established in 1960.

Coach Red Auerbach discussed the anatomy of a streak on his team after the nationally televised battle was settled by a third quarter blitz. Boston outscored the Lakers 16-2 in the final minutes of the period it dominated 31-19.

K. C. Jones set up five baskets and scored three. Hobbling Tommy Heinsohn got seven points in the stretch and the Lakers, who had five times rallied to within a single point, were left breathless in the wake.

Sam Jones was Boston's high man with 27. Elgin Baylor collected 30 for Los Angeles but didn't have enough help.

Boston was one short of the NBA winning streak record when it lost to Philadelphia 104-100 at Syracuse Saturday night. Did the loss ease any tension on the club?

"No," Auerbach said. "There is no pressure as such.

"These guys are all pros. When you get eight or nine in a row you don't even think about it. This team has done it so often.

"When it gets to around 12 or 13 straight and the papers start building it up, naturally you can't help thinking about it.

"Then you look at your schedule of games coming up and tell yourself you haven't got a chance.

"But suddenly you're right on the verge of it. So you think about it. But you don't get beaten by those thoughts."

"No pressure," added Heinsohn. "We were ice cold. It was a bad game for us, and yet we were never out of it. Philadelphia played one of its best games. Simple as that."

Heinsohn, seated in a whirlpool bath where he was getting treatment for the foot injury and blood clot which had sidelined him a month until recently, was asked how soon he thought he'd be in top shape again.

"I should be ready for the playoffs," he said with a wink. But he took a look to make sure Auerbach didn't hear before he said it.

Nate Thurmond, successer to Wilt Chamberlain as the Warriors' big man, scored 31 points, but San Francisco couldn't come close to Cincinnati, which had four men with more than 20 points.

Bruins Brake Tailspin

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

They may not be the toast of the town, but Boston's battered Bruins are all even with their uppity basketball neighbors, the Celtics, today.

The National Hockey League tailenders and the National Basketball Association pace-setters each own one-game winning streaks.

The Bruins finally cornered the Montreal Canadiens Sunday, goalie Ed Johnston blanking the NHL leaders 3-0 to brake a five-game Boston tailspin.

Earlier in the day at Boston Garden, the Celtics, whose 16-game NBA winning skein was snapped Saturday night, had rebounded for a runaway victory over Los Angeles.

Johnston stopped 30 Montreal shots for his third shutout of the season and Ab McDonald led the attack with his 100th career goal as Boston beat the Canadiens for the first time in nine meetings. Goals by Tom Williams and Forbes Kennedy, the latter on a solo dash while the Bruins were shorthanded, padded the decision.

Montreal had won four straight with goalie Gump Worlsey, promoted from the Canadiens' Quebec farm club. The loss was the first for Worlsey in six NHL games this season.

The second-place Chicago Black Hawks cut Montreal's lead to two points by staggering New York 7-2 and the Detroit Red Wings moved to within one point of third-place Toronto by beating the Maple Leafs 4-1 in Sunday's other games.

The Canadiens topped the Bruins 5-1 while Toronto and New York played to a 1-1 standoff Saturday night.

Bobby Hull failed to boost his 37-goal total against the Rangers but the league point leader set up three tallies, including a breakaway score by younger brother Dennis while New York had a manpower advantage in the final period.

Kenny Wharram scored twice for the Hawks, who have hit for 14 goals in their last two games. Stan Mikita, Doug Mohns, Chico Makie and Phil Esposito also connected for Chicago, Camille Henry and Vic Hadfield for the road-weary Rangers.

Parker MacDonald and Larry Jeffrey got Detroit off to a 2-0 start with the game less than five minutes old. Eddie Joyal increased the margin early in the middle period before Toronto broke through goalie Roger Crozier on rookie Ron Ellis' 14th goal.

Gordie Howe completed the scoring, deflecting a Norm Ullman shot past Johnny Bower on a Detroit power play. The Wings peppered Bower with 42 shots.

MUTUAL CONGRATULATIONS—Dick Weber (left) of St. Louis, Mo., and Anne Slattery of Salt Lake City, exchange a kiss of mutual congratulations after they won the men's and women's title, respectively, in the All-State Bowling Championships in Philadelphia on Sunday. Weber won his third title with a victory over Jim St. John, Santa Clara, Calif., 608-586 for $15,000 in three games. Miss Slattery won $5,000 women's title in defeating Sandy Hooper of Anaheim, Calif., 597-550 in three games.

Weber, Slattery Come Back to Win Bowl Meet

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dick Weber of St. Louis and Ann Slattery of Salt Lake City spotted their opponents formidable leads in the opening game but battled back to win the championship matches at the $100,000 All-Star Bowling Tournament.

Weber won his third All-Star title Sunday by outscoring Jim St. John of Santa Clara, Calif., 608-586 in the three-game title match. St. John jumped off to a 34-pin lead when he outscored the champion 224-190 in the first game. But Weber came back with a 192-226 as St. John tapered off to 165 and 197 in the remaining games.

Weber, who pocketed $15,000, won the 1962 All-Star in Miami Beach and repeated the following year in Kansas City, Mo. He has the added satisfaction this year of being the first bowler in the tournament's 24 - year history to win the qualifying trophy and the championship.

Mrs. Slattery won the $5,000 women's title by crushing pretty Sandy Hooper of Anaheim, Calif., 597-550, for three games. Mrs. Hooper took a 26-pin lead when she shot 204 to Mrs. Slattery's 178 in the first game. Mrs. Slattery bounced back with 207 and 212, however, while Mrs. Hooper lost the range and shot 163 and 183.

Weber earned his berth in the title match by winning the American Division in the four-day, 56-game round robin series which ended Saturday night. He compiled a record of 37 wins and 19 losses and averaged more than 216. St. John won the National Division with a 32 won and 24 lost record and a 213 plus average.

St. John's $8,000 second place prize gives him an income of $15,500 from two tournaments conducted less than two months apart. He won the $7,500 World's Invitational Championship in Chicago last November.

Mrs. Slattery, 35, mother of a 9-year-old daughter, won the National Division in the 44-game women's round robin to set the stage for her appearance in Sunday's roll-off.

Mills Upset Highlights L.A. Track

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Schoolteacher George Young was chosen athlete of the meet after his upset of veteran distance runner Lt. Billy Mills and little Gerry Lindgren in the Los Angeles Invitational Indoor track meet.

Young, who set an American steeplechase record at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo, surprised the Marine officer and 18-year-old Lindgren by taking the two-mile run Saturday night.

The 27-year-old Young, of Casa Grande, Ariz., sprinted the final quarter in 58.3 for an easy victory.

Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State set an American women's record of 6.7 in the 60-yard dash. Miss Tyus won the 100 meters at the Olympics.

Ralph Boston of the Southern California Striders sailed 26 feet, 5 inches in the long jump for victory, and Bill Crothers of Canada took the 600-yard run.

Dyrol Burleson of Oregon captured the mile in a slow 4:07.2, unheralded Earl McCullouch won the 60-yard hurdles in 7.2 as Rex Cawley, 400-meter hurdles gold medalist in the Olympics was second, and Jack Yerman of the Santa Clara Youth Village finished first in the 500-yard dash with a 59.0 clocking while Mike Larrabee, 400-meter winner at Tokyo, was last.

Young, timed in 8:41.2, outdistanced Mills by 25 yards while young Lindgren, who had led most of the way, was third.

Young said the most satisfying aspect of his victory was not in beating Mills, the surprise U.S. winner in the 10,000 meters at the Olympics, but in bettering the meet and arena record of 8:41.4, held by Gaston Reolants of Belgium.

"Roelants won the steeplechase in the Olympics at Tokyo and I finished fifth," said the handsome high school science teacher. "So erasing his record here was some kind of revenge."

Lindgren set the pace and held onto his lead for 17 laps of the 22-lap event. Mills then took over, but only briefly as Young began his tremendous kick in the final quarter-mile.

Cepeda Returns Signed Contract

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Orlando Cepeda, slugging first baseman of the San Francisco Giants, heads the list of players who signed contracts during the weekend for the 1965 baseball season.

Cepeda received a $2,000 raise, bringing his salary to about $55,000. Only Willie Mays, who earns $105,000, has a bigger salary on the team.

The Puerto Rican led the Giants with a .304 batting average last year, adding 31 homers and 97 runs batted in. He said his right knee is okay after an operation in New York last month.

Other National Leaguers to sign were second baseman Bill Mazeroski and relief pitcher Roy Face of Pittsburgh, outfielder Ty Cline of Milwaukee and five New York Mets — outfielder Billy Cowan and pitchers Tom Parsons, Darrell Sutherland, Dick Selma, Jerry Hinsley and Frank McGraw.

Crosby Golf Receipts Reach All-Time High

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gate receipts for the 1965 Bing Crosby Golf Tournament reached an all-time high of $116,130, officials reported Sunday.

The previous high was $112,432 in 1963. It was estimated that 35,000 persons watched the four days of golf — some of them seeing the play on more than one day.

The biggest gate total was 50,947 on Saturday, ironically during a wind and rain storm.

Two U.S. Netters Post Victories

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Carole Caldwell Graebner of Beachwood, Ohio, overcame an injury today to move into the quarter-finals of the women's singles at the Australian Tennis Championships at Kooyong along with her Federation Cup teammate Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif.

Mrs. Graebner, who has a pulled hamstring muscle in the right leg, won her fourth-round match against South Australian Jill Starr, 6-4, 6-2.

Also gaining the quarter-finals were South Africa's Annette Van Zyl and Brazilian star Maria Bueno.

Miss Moffitt was a 5-7, 6-4, 6-1 victor over 17-year-old Kerry Melville of Australia. Miss Van Zyk provided the surprise of the tournament so far by beating Australian Lesley Turner 6-4, 7-5. Miss Bueno ousted Helen Gourlay of Tasmania 6-2, 6-4.

Despite her injury, Mrs. Graebner's victory was easy. She relied on her strong service and was able to beat Miss Starr in driving rallies.

Other quarter-final pairings include: Miss Tegart vs. Miss Bueno and Miss Smith vs. the winner of Tueday's match between Jill Blackman of New South Wales and Francoise Durr of France.

Other results:

In the second round of the men's doubles, Pierre Barthes and Francois Jauffret of France defeated Bob Sherrill of New South Wales and Masanori Asai of Japan 7-5, 3-6, 7-5, 6-1; Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle of Australia defeated John Cottrill of Australia and Colin Zeeman of South Africa 6-4, 6-3, 6-3; Bill Bowrey and Owen Davidson of Australia defeated Barry Phillips Moore of South Australia and Christer Hol of Sweden 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3.

Pierre Darmon and Jean Noel Grinda of France, defeated Mitsuro Motoi and Ichizo Konishi of Japan 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 7-5; Tom Okker and Jan Majer of Holland defeated Eddie Beers and Geoff Pollard of Australia 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 7-9, 6-4, and Osamu Ishiguro and Koji Watanabe of Japan defeated Bert Kearney and Graeme Stewart of Australia 6-3, 6-3, 10-8.

In the first round of women's doubles, Mrs. Graebner and Mrs. Pierre Darmo of France defeated Mary Harris and Aline Jenkins of Australia 6-2, 6-1.

Get there faster in a SAAB!

Skiers! Get skiing faster in a true skier's car. SAAB climbs rugged mountain roads with the sure-footed traction that only front-wheel drive can provide. Front-wheel drive also reduces dangerous rear end "swing and sway" that often occurs when roads are icy and slick. Up front SAAB's powerful economy-minded engine has the pull it takes to get you there and back quickly and safely. And wait until you test SAAB's big heater-defroster system — so hot you can go up and back in shirt sleeves. There are many more reasons why the 1965 SAAB is THE car for skiers, or for that matter, THE car for any kind of winter driving. See your local dealer soon for the full story on the 1965

U.S. Citizenship Biggest Honor, Churchill Said

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill looked upon his honorary American citizenship as an honor "without parallel" which he said would always be proudly remembered by his descendants.

Congress granted the unique distinction to the great British statesman less than two years ago. In a ceremony in the White House rose garden on April 9, 1963, President John F. Kennedy signed the bill and proclaimed Churchill's citizenship.

"By adding his name to our rolls," Kennedy said, "we mean to honor him — but his acceptance honors us far more. For no statement or proclamation can enrich his name —the name Sir Winston Churchill is already legend."

Churchill — who died Sunday at 90 — was unable to attend the 1963 White House ceremony. In a message read by his son, Randolph, he recalled his American ancestry — his mother was an American,, Brooklyn-born Jennie Jerome — and said:

"I am, as you know, half American by blood, and the story of my association with that mighty and benevolent nation goes back nearly 90 years to the day of my father's marriage. In this century of storm and tragedy I contemplate with high satisfaction the constant factor of the interwoven and upward progress of our peoples."

Sir Winston watched by television, sent across the Atlantic via an orbiting satellite, as Kennedy said:

"In naming him an honorary citizen,, I only propose a formal recognition of the place he has long since won in the history of freedom and in the affections of my and now his fellow countrymen.

"Whenever and wherever tyranny threatened, he has always championed liberty.

"Facing firmly toward the future, he has never forgotten the past.

"Serving six monarchs of his native Great Britain, he has served all men's freedom and dignity.

"In the dark days and darker nights when Britain stood alone — and most men save Englishmen despaired of England's life —he mobilized the English language and sent it into battle. The incandescent quality of his words illuminated the courage of his countrymen.

"Given unlimited power by his citizens, he was ever vigilant to protect their rights.

"Indifferent himself to danger, he wept over the sorrows of others.

"A child of the House of Commons, he became in time its father.

"Accustomed to the hardships of battle, he has no distaste for pleasure.

"Now his stately ship of life, having weathered the severest storms of a troubled century, is anchored in tranquil waters, proof that courage and faith and the zest for freedom are truly indestructable. The record of his triumphant passage will inspire free hearts for all time."

The only other citizen of a foreign nation to receive honorary American citizenship was the Marquis de Lafayette. But where Congress granted Churchill his citizenship, Lafayette became a citizen when adoption of the Constitution made U.S. citizens of all citizens of the colonies. The French hero of the Revolution had earlier been granted honorary citizenship in Virginia and Maryland.

Legion Chief Declares Opposition to Foes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Donald B. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, says the Legion "stands ready to take on the advocates of communism or any ism other than Americanism."

Johnson, of West Branch, Iowa, told the Ohio Legion's winter conference at Columbus, Sunday, "It becomes increasingly evident that the Communist party U.S.A. has shifted from major emphasis to its youth Govement."

As an example, he cited what he called "the sad spectacle" of student rioting last year at the University of California. The riots grew out of the university's on-campus speaking policy.

MOSCOW (AP) — David Oistrakh, famed Russian violinist who was ill of heart trouble last year, returned to the conductor's stand in Moscow Sunday.

Tass news agency said that Oistrakh, who took up conducting two years ago, "convinced everybody that he has regained his usual brilliant form."

Looking At Hollywood

JERRY LEWIS TO DO RARE FILM ROLE — NOT HIMSELF

HOLLYWOOD — Jerry Lewis began his picture career in 1949 for Producer Hal Wallis; later branched out on his own. Now Wallis tells me he has signed Jerry for "Boeing, Boeing," based on the smash English stage play which opens in New York soon. It's about two men and three air line stewardesses. Jerry shares acting honors with Tony Curtis in a role that's a complete departure from anything he's ever done. He won't be playing himself, but another character. I predict it will start a whole new career for him. The script was written by Edward ("Becket") Anhalt, and John Rich will direct it here and in Rome.

Max Von Sydow, Christ in "The Greatest Story Ever Told," was signed by the Mirisch brothers to play Missionary Abner Hale opposite Julie Andrews in "Hawaii." Now that's what I call good casting. Swedish Director Ingmar Bergman has Von Sydow under long-term contract, but postponed his next project to let Max do this picture for George Roy Hill. Shooting starts soon in Norway, without actors; resumes in New England in April, and continues right through fall.

I will never understand the behind-the-scenes shenanigans of our major studios, but there's shady work afoot over the Jean Harlow story. Paramount is making "Harlow" based on the book. Metro has enough footage on her to make three movies. In fact, they put together a feature-length documentary, and many stars who loved her agreed to appear in it and tell the truth. Now because of some mystery, Metro has abandoned the project. It's the first time I've ever heard of their not wanting to make money — they even released Marlon Brando's "Mutiny on the Bounty." Even if they weren't interested in the loot, they could have defended a star who made millions for them.

Dolly O'Brien, beautiful society belle of another era, died in a Palm Beach hospital. I remember a luncheon at Merle Oberon's beach house when Dolly came with Clark Gable, who was wooing her at the time. She was the most feminine woman I ever met. Clark was outdoorsy. He set up some cans to do a little target practice and invited Dolly to come out and watch. She looked at him with those lovely blue eyes and said, "If you don't mind, Hedda and I will warm ourselves by the fire."

I met her long before that in Miami Beach. Julius Fleischman, who loved her better than anything in the world, gave her a divorce when she fell in love with Jay O'Brien and settled 6 million dollars on her. Soon after the divorce, Fleischman was thrown from a polo pony and broke his collar bone. The doctor warned him if he played again it would mean his life. Next season he did, fell off his horse and died, leaving 60 million dollars, which would have been Dolly's if she hadn't divorced him.

Networks Were Ready With Churchill TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major television networks were ready Sunday with special programs honoring Sir Winston Churchill.

CBS reached the air first, at noon, with a warm and moving summary of the long career of the giant of a man whose death is felt by man, even those who never saw him in the flesh, as a personal loss.

NBC's hour came in mid-afternoon, a more formal and perhaps less emotional program. The ABC special Sunday evening stressed the character of the wartime leader and, in its approach, stayed rather close to Churchill's public image, and the events of his latter years.

All three, noted the most famous of the prime minister's remarks — his reference to an "iron curtain," the great "blood, tears, toil and sweat" statement. Once again we heard the familiar voice angrily growling defiance to the Nazi enemy and, in a proud voice, speaking of Britain's finest hour.

There were also the delightful lighter moments, many of which CBS picked up, when his wit sparkled and, in a change of mood, when he was unashamedly overcome with emotion. Eric Severeid, summing up, called Churchill a "Renaissance figure," a man of many parts, many interests.

CBS, which repeated its program Sunday evening, plans another hour tonight, "Some Friends of Winston Churchill," which will include a tape, never before broadcast, of a conversation the statesman had with Edward R. Murrow almost five years ago. CBS sent Walter Cronkite to California for an interview with Dwight D. Eisenhower about his wartime associate.

The network postponed indefinitely its scheduled Sunday night broadcast of Gian-Carlo Menotti's new opera, "Martin's Lie."

Also over a busy weekend, NBC tossed together a couple of instant news specials on President Johnson's cold and respiratory troubles. It treated the subject so thoroughly it was hard to believe the constant reassurances that there was no official anxiety about his condition.

Two new entertainment programs appeared over the weekend.

ABC's "King Family," on Saturday night, is a cosy and pleasant variety show featuring assorted relatives of the singing King Sisters, ranging from the very small to those with gray hair. But they are all enthusiastic.

NBC's half-hour "Branded," has Chuck Connors playing an Old West version of "The Fugitives." He is a cavalry officer thrown out of the service, apparently for cowardice. The opening show explained that the vague charges against him were false, but they were ripping off his buttons and breaking his sword.

Then he saved a fellow from dying of thirst in the desert, and I imagine that hereafter he will be trying unsuccessfully to establish his innocence until the show runs out of steam or sponsors.

Socialite Hostess Robbed in Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington police are pushing their hunt for four men who robbed socialite-hostess Gwen Cafritz at knifepoint, escaping with jewelry insured for $265,000.

Officers said it was the biggest haul in any Washington housebreaking within money.

They said the bandits entered Mrs. Cafritz' 58-room mansion shortly after midnight Sunday.

Police reported Mrs. Cafritz, widow of builder Morris Cafritz, was bound and gagged in her bedroom. She finally worked her way free and called police.

Included in the loot was a necklace insured for $100,000. Mrs. Cafritz said it contained 46 diamonds totaling 80 carats.

POST-BATTLE BOTTLE

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A group of World War I veterans organized a "Last Man" club shortly after the end of the war and have been holding an annual gettogether ever since.

When they first met they bought a bottle of champagne, and they plan to continue meeting until the final two members break out the champagne. If they can find it, that is. Apparently one of the early presidents put it away for safekeeping and nobody seems to know where that important bottle is.

Dear Ele and Walt: Ever since I can remember I've been bothered by blushing. Whenever I'm embarrassed, ill at ease or mad, I get red all over: face, neck, shoulders and even on my upper arms!

I always figured that this would vanish as I got older, but so far it hasn't lessened one bit. Maybe it would be O.K. if I were a girl, but since I'm a boy, its very humiliating. Can you suggest some help somewhere? — Red Skin.

Dear Red: Please don't waste energy worrying that a blush will mark you as effeminate. Males blush just as readily as women do; it ahs nothing to do with gender.

According to the experts, there's no possible way that you can block a blush. When you feel yourself getting red, all the deep breathing in the world won't keep the crimson off your cheeks.

So, stop fighting nature and simply develop some dialogue to lessen your embarrassment at rosy times Like? "It's easy to tell who's got an Indian ancestor," or if you're mad-red, admit it by saying, "This is an angry face, mister." Or pat your red cheek, and say, "I've got to stop drinking plasma," with a ghoulish chuckle.

You can come up with better lines, we're sure. Just preplan some dialogue and you'll find your ruddy moments less demolishing. — Ele and Walt.

Dear Ele and Walt: I don't want an answer, just the space in your column to get something off my chest. I wish my parents would act their age! Mine are so hep (as they say) that all my friends comment about it.

All day long, my mom's got a radio or phonograph blaring Beatle-mania music. My dad spends hours with Playboy magazines. They both dress like people half their age, and talk like high school students. I'd give anything to have two mature parents I could look up to. — The Oldest One at Home.

Dear Walt: Recently my steady girl bleached her hair. I haven't commented one way or the other to date, but it's been hard not saying anything because I think it makes her look terribly cheap. Would I be acting too possessively if I asked her to change it back? — Grady.

Dear Grady: When a couple is steady dating, people judge them as a team. So since your girl's appearance relects on you, I think you have a perfect right to let her know what you think of her bleached tresses.

A suggestion, please: Don't make your comments in the form of an order. No one likes to be ordered around like a slave. Instead, say "Sue, you're the most wonderful person in the world to me. I don't like anyone to think anything but the best abotu you. So that's why I wanted to talk with you about your new hair color . . ."

And go on from there in a low-pressure, not-demanding way. — Walt.

Humphrey Plans Anti-Poverty Campaign in U.S.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey planned today "to take the anti-poverty program to the people" in Tucson.

Humphrey came to Arizona to address the National Conference on Poverty in the southwest tonight.

"We ought to be here and not talking about it (poverty) on the banks of the Potomac," Humphrey said on his arrival in Tucson Sunday night.

The vice president said that if the Southwest conference proves successful it could lead to a series of other such meetings in other parts of the nation.

Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, was to oper the three-day conference with an address this morning.

The vice president said Sunday night that the problem of poverty is centered on minority groups, many of which are concentrated in the Southwest.

"It is important to take the program to the people," Humphrey said.

Some victims of poverty will testify at the conference which involves public and private agencies interested in combating poverty.

The vice president was to spend most of the day at a resort area about 25 miles south of Tucson.

Of President Johnson's illness, Humphrey said: "I'm doubtful about how long those doctors can keep him in the hospital." He said he understands Johnson is feeling better and expects the President will fly to London for the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill.

The vice president said Churchill "was a great friend of ours and a great friend of freedom."

Cat Captured After Living Week in Wall

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The kids heard a lot about this cat and today, well, they get to see him.

The animal is the one that crawled inside a wall in the Sand Lake Elementary School library through an inspection opening.

The cat made his presence known, all right, but he wouldn't show himself for nearly a week.

Finally, Betty Putnam, fourth grade teacher, slipped on some gloves and pulled up a chair beside the hole.

She kept talking quietly to the cat and the animal crept closer. Suddenly Mrs. Putnam made a grab. She got what she wanted.

Today the 525 pupils at Sand Lake will look at the cat in their classrooms. All the rooms, that is, except the library.

Negro Return to GOP Is Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Massachusetts' Republican Atty. Gen. Edward W. Brooke, a Negro, says he believes members of his race will return to the GOP as time goes on.

"I don't think it's going to take any great miracle," Brooke said today in a copyright interview in U.S. News & World Report.

"Negroes are getting more and more opportunities, are better educated, more interested in things other than civil rights," Brooke said.

"For far too long they have felt subjected to the necessity of making their decisions solely on the basis of civil rights. But we're getting away from that now."

Brooke, re-elected last fall despite a Democratic sweep of other state officers, but he didn't think it necessarily correct that the Negro had left the GOP.

U.S. Citizenship Biggest Honor, Churchill Said

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill looked upon his honorary American citizenship as an honor "without parallel" which he said would always be proudly remembered by his descendants.

Congress granted the unique distinction to the great British statesman less than two years ago. In a ceremony in the White House rose garden on April 9, 1963, President John F. Kennedy signed the bill and proclaimed Churchill's citizenship.

"By adding his name to our rolls," Kennedy said, "we mean to honor him — but his acceptance honors us far more. For no statement or proclamation can enrich his name —the name Sir Winston Churchill is already legend."

Churchill — who died Sunday at 90 — was unable to attend the 1963 White House ceremony. In a message read by his son, Randolph, he recalled his American ancestry — his mother was an American., Brooklyn-born Jennie Jerome — and said:

"I am, as you know, half American by blood, and the story of my association with that mighty and benevolent nation goes back nearly 90 years to the day of my father's marriage. In this century of storm and tragedy I contemplate with high satisfaction the constant factor of the interwoven and upward progress of our peoples."

Sir Winston watched by television, sent across the Atlantic via an orbiting satellite, as Kennedy said:

"In naming him an honorary citizen., I only propose a formal recognition of the place he has long since won in the history of freedom and in the affections of my and now his fellow countrymen.

"Whenever and wherever tyranny threatened, he has always championed liberty.

"Facing firmly toward the future, he has never forgotten the past.

"Serving six monarchs of his native Great Britain, he has served all men's freedom and dignity.

"In the dark days and darker nights when Britain stood alone — and most men save Englishmen despaired of England's life —he mobilized the English language and sent it into battle. The incandescent quality of his words illuminated the courage of his countrymen.

"Given unlimited power by his citizens, he was ever vigilant to protect their rights.

"Indifferent himself to danger, he wept over the sorrows of others.

"A child of the House of Commons, he became in time its father.

"Accustomed to the hardships of battle, he has no distaste for pleasure.

"Now his stately ship of life, having weathered the severest storms of a troubled century, is anchored in tranquil waters, proof that courage and faith and the zest for freedom are truly indestructable. The record of his triumphant passage will inspire free hearts for all time."

The only other citizen of a foreign nation to receive honorary American citizenship was the Marquis de Lafayette. But where Congress granted Churchill his citizenship, Lafayette became a citizen when adoption of the Constitution made U.S. citizens of all citizens of the colonies. The French hero of the Revolution had earlier been granted honorary citizenship in Virginia and Maryland.

Legion Chief Declares Opposition to Foes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Donald B. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, says the Legion "stands ready to take on the advocates of communism or any ism other than Americanism."

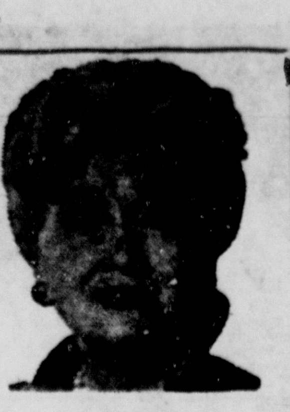
Johnson, of West Branch, Iowa, told the Ohio Legion's winter conference at Columbus, Sunday, "It becomes increasingly evident that the Communist party U.S.A. has shifted from major emphasis to its youth Govement."

As an example, he cited what he called "the sad spectacle" of student rioting last year at the University of California. The riots grew out of the university's on-campus speaking policy.

RECOVERS

MOSCOW (AP) — David Oistrakh, famed Russian violinist who was ill of heart trouble last year, returned to the conductor's stand in Moscow Sunday.

Tass news agency said that Oistrakh, who took up conducting two years ago, "convinced everybody that he has regained his usual brilliant form."



Looking At Hollywood

By HEDDA HOPPER

© 1964: By the Chicago Tribune

JERRY LEWIS TO DO RARE FILM ROLE — NOT HIMSELF

HOLLYWOOD — Jerry Lewis began his picture career in 1949 for Producer Hal Wallis; later branched out on his own. Now Wallis tells me he has signed Jerry for "Boeing, Boeing," based on the smash English stage play which opens in New York soon. It's about two men and three air line stewardesses. Jerry shares acting honors with Tony Curtis in a role that's a complete departure from anything he's ever done. He won't be playing himself, but another character. I predict it will start a whole new career for him. The script was written by Edward ("Becket") Anhalt, and John Rich will direct it here and in Rome.

Max Von Sydow, Christ in "The Greatest Story Ever Told," was signed by the Mirisch brothers to play Missionary Abner Hale opposite Julie Andrews in "Hawaii." Now that's what I call good casting. Swedish Director Ingmar Bergman has Von Sydow under long-term contract, but postponed his next project to let Max do this picture for George Roy Hill. Shooting starts soon in Norway, without actors; resumes in New England in April, and continues right through fall.

I will never understand the behind - the - scenes shenanigans of our major studios, but there's shady work afoot over the Jean Harlow story. Paramount is making "Harlow" based on the book. Metro has enough footage on her to make three movies. In fact, they put together a feature - length documentary, and many stars who loved her agreed to appear in it and tell the truth. Now because of some mystery, Metro has abandoned the project. It's the first time I've ever heard of their not wanting to make money — they even released Marlon Brando's "Mutiny on the Bounty." Even if they weren't interested in the loot, they could have defended a star who made millions for them.

Dolly O'Brien, beautiful society belle of another era, died in a Palm Beach hospital. I remember a luncheon at Merle Oberon's beach house when Dolly came with Clark Gable, who was wooing her at the time. She was the most feminine woman I ever met. Clark was outdoorsy. He set up some cans to do a little target practice and invited Dolly to come out and watch. She looked at him with those lovely blue eyes and said, "If you don't mind, Hedda and I will warm ourselves by the fire."

I met her long before that in Miami Beach. Julius Fleischman, who loved her better than anything in the world, gave her a divorce when she fell in love with Jay O'Brien and settled 6 million dollars on her. Soon after the divorce, Fleischman was thrown from a polo pony and broke his collar bone. The doctor warned him if he played again it would mean his life. Next season he did, fell off his horse and died, leaving 60 million dollars, which would have been Dolly's if she hadn't divorced him.

Mary Martin is back in New York and starts shooting her TV special March 4. The good news is that Mainbocher, who made her one of the best dressed women in the world, will do it again.

Steve McQueen's making it possible for the fellows at the Boys Republic to attend Casey Tibbs' Rose Bowl rodeo on Sunday.

Mrs. Jimmy Stewart wears two unusual bracelets made from the hair of elephants she shot in Africa. Between them is one of diamonds.

We missed Bob Hope's Christmas show on TV while celebrating Jack Benny's 38th anniversary. But Mary's going to have it run for us next week.

There are an estimated 5 million alcoholics in the nation, according to a report of the Welfare Administration of the Department of Health Education and Welfare.

Networks Were Ready With Churchill TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major television networks were ready Sunday with special programs honoring Sir Winston Churchill.

CBS reached the air first, at noon, with a warm and moving summary of the long career of the giant of a man whose death is felt by man, even those who never saw him in the flesh, as a personal loss.

NBC's hour came in mid-afternoon, a more formal and perhaps less emotional program. The ABC special Sunday evening stressed the character of the wartime leader and, in its approach, stayed rather close to Churchill's public image, and the events of his latter years.

All three, noted the most famous of the prime minister's remarks — his reference to an "iron curtain," the great "blood, tears, toil and sweat" statement. Once again we heard the familiar voice angrily growling defiance to the Nazi enemy and, in a proud voice, speaking of Britain's finest hour.

There were also the delightful lighter moments, many of which CBS picked up, when his wit sparkled and, in a change of mood, when he was unashamedly overcome with emotion. Eric Severeid, summing up, called Churchill a "Renaissance figure," a man of many parts, many interests.

CBS, which repeated its program Sunday evening, plans another hour tonight, "Some Friends of Winston Churchill," which will include a tape, never before broadcast, of a conversation the statesman had with Edward R. Murrow almost five years ago. CBS sent Walter Cronkite to California for an interview with Dwight D. Eisenhower about his wartime associate.

The network postponed indefinitely its scheduled Sunday night broadcast of Gian-Carlo Menotti's new opera, "Martin's Lie."

Also over a busy weekend, NBC tossed together a couple of instant news specials on President Johnson's cold and respiratory troubles. It treated the subject so thoroughly it was hard to believe the constant reassurances that there was no official anxiety about his condition.

Two new entertainment programs appeared over the weekend.

ABC's "King Family," on Saturday night, is a cosy and pleasant variety show featuring assorted relatives of the singing King Sisters, ranging from the very small to those with gray hair. But they are all enthusiastic.

NBC's half-hour "Branded," has Chuck Connors playing an Old West version of "The Fugitives." He is a cavalry officer thrown out of the service, apparently for cowardice. The opening show explained that the vague charges against him were false, but they were ripping off his buttons and breaking his sword.

Then he saved a fellow from dying of thirst in the desert, and I imagine that hereafter he will be trying unsuccessfully to establish his innocence until the show runs out of steam or sponsors.

Socialite Hostess Robbed in Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington police are pushing their hunt for four men who robbed socialite-hostess Gwen Cafritz at knifepoint, escaping with jewelry insured for $365,000.

Officers said it was the biggest haul in any Washington housebreaking within money.

They said the bandits entered Mrs. Cafritz' 58-room mansion shortly after midnight Sunday.

Police reported Mrs. Cafritz, widow of builder Morris Cafritz, was bound and gagged in her bedroom. She finally worked her way free and called police.

Included in the loot was a necklace insured for $100,000. Mrs. Cafritz said it contained 46 diamonds totaling 80 carats.

POST-BATTLE BOTTLE

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A group of World War I veterans organized a "Last Man" club shortly after the end of the war and have been holding an annual gettogether ever since.

When they first met they bought a bottle of champagne, and they plan to continue meeting until the final two members break out the champagne. If they can find it, that is. Apparently one of the early presidents put it away for safekeeping and nobody seems to know where that important bottle is.

Dear Ele and Walt: Ever since I can remember I've been bothered by blushing. Whenever I'm embarrassed, ill at ease or mad, I get red all over: face, neck, shoulders and even on my upper arms!

I always figured that this would vanish as I got older, but so far it hasn't lessened one bit. Maybe it would be O.K. if I were a girl, but since I'm a boy, its very humiliating. Can you suggest some help somewhere? — Red Skin.

Dear Red: Please don't waste energy worrying that a blush will mark you as effeminate. Males blush just as readily as women do; it ahs nothing to do with gender.

According to the experts, there's no possible way that you can block a blush. When you feel yourself getting red, all the deep breathing in the world won't keep the crimson off your cheeks.

So, stop fighting nature and simply develop some dialogue to lessen your embarrassment at rosy times Like? "It's easy to tell who's got an Indian ancestor," or if you're mad-red, admit it by saying, "This is an angry face, mister." Or pat your red cheek, and say, "I've got to stop drinking plasma," with a ghoulish chuckle.

You can come up with better lines, we're sure. Just preplan some dialogue and you'll find your ruddy moments less demolishing. — Ele and Walt.

Dear Ele and Walt: I don't want an answer, just the space in your column to get something off my chest. I wish my parents would act their age! Mine are so hep (as they say) that all my friends comment about it.

All day long, my mom's got a radio or phonograph blaring Beatle-mania music. My dad spends hours with Playboy magazines. They both dress like people half their age, and talk like high school students. I'd give anything to have two mature parents I could look up to. — The Oldest One at Home.

Dear Walt: Recently my steady girl bleached her hair. I haven't commented one way or the other to date, but it's been hard not saying anything because I think it makes her look terribly cheap. Would I be acting too possessively if I asked her to change it back? — Grady.

Dear Grady: When a couple is steady dating, people judge them as a team. So since your girl's appearance relects on you, I think you have a perfect right to let her know what you think of her bleached tresses.

A suggestion, please: Don't make your comments in the form of an order. No one likes to be ordered around like a slave. Instead, say "Sue, you're the most wonderful person in the world to me. I don't like anyone to think anything but the best abotu you. So that's why I wanted to talk with you about your new hair color . . ."

And go on from there in a low - pressure, not - demanding way. — Walt.

Ele and Walt Dulaney welcome letters from readers. All will be answered in DATE-LINE or individually. Enclose a stamped, self - addressed envelope. (A Bell - McClure Syndicate Feature)

Humphrey Plans Anti-Poverty Campaign in U.S.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey planned today "to take the anti-poverty program to the people" in Tucson.

Humphrey came to Arizona to address the National Conference on Poverty in the southwest tonight.

"We ought to be here and not talking about it (poverty) on the banks of the Potomac," Humphrey said on his arrival in Tucson Sunday night.

The vice president said that if the Southwest conference proves successful it could lead to a series of other such meetings in other parts of the nation.

Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, was to open the three-day conference with an address this morning.

The vice president said Sunday night that the problem of poverty is centered on minority groups, many of which are concentrated in the Southwest.

"It is important to take the program to the people," Humphrey said.

Some victims of poverty will testify at the conference which involves public and private agencies interested in combating poverty.

The vice president was to spend most of the day at a resort area about 25 miles south of Tucson.

Of President Johnson's illness, Humphrey said: "I'm doubtful about how long those doctors can keep him in the hospital." He said he understands Johnson is feeling better and expects the President will fly to London for the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill.

The vice president said Churchill "was a great friend of ours and a great friend of freedom."

Cat Captured After Living Week in Wall

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The kids heard a lot about this cat and today, well, they get to see him.

The animal is the one that crawled inside a wall in the Sand Lake Elementary School library through an inspection opening.

The cat made his presence known, all right, but he wouldn't show himself for nearly a week.

Finally, Betty Putnam, fourth grade teacher, slipped on some gloves and pulled up a chair beside the hole.

She kept talking quietly to the cat and the animal crept closer. Suddenly Mrs. Putnam made a grab. She got what she wanted.

Today the 525 pupils at Sand Lake will look at the cat in their classrooms. All the rooms, that is, except the library.

Negro Return to GOP Is Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Massachusetts' Republican Atty. Gen. Edward W. Brooke, a Negro, says he believes members of his race will return to the GOP as time goes on.

"I don't think it's going to take any great miracle," Brooke said today in a copyright interview in U.S. News & World Report.

"Negroes are getting more and more opportunities, are better educated, more interested in things other than civil rights," Brooke said.

"For far too long they have felt subjected to the necessity of making their decisions solely on the basis of civil rights. But we're getting away from that now."

Brooke, re-elected last fall despite a Democratic sweep of other state officers, but he didn't think it necessarily correct that the Negro had left the GOP.

Jackson, Miss. Gets New Negro Church

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — "This is truly beauty from ashes," a Negro woman told a white visitor sitting next to her during dedication services of the Christian Union Baptist Church.

Nearly 400 Negroes and whites, both Christian and Jew, gathered Sunday in the recently rebuilt church that was destroyed by a fire last summer. The blaze was blamed on whites opposed to the civil rights movement. White Mississippi church leaders and laymen helped dedicate the modern brick structure.

The new church was nearly all financed by a $11,600 gift of the biracial Committee of Concern which has raised over $51,000 to help 38 other churches burned during the height of the civil rights violence last summer.

"Mississippians gave over half of that $51,000," the Rev. William P. Davis, white president of the Negro Mississippi Baptist Seminary told the crowd that overflowed the tiny church. "Our money has come a long way, but we're going to have a lot more — nearly $100,000 more if we expect to complete our work."

Special tribute was paid to a group of Quakers, who with local Negroes cut costs by doing most of the labor.

Tobacco products are sold in 1.5 million outlets and account for over 3 per cent of the nation's retail sales.

Conservative Tells What Churchill Meant to Him

EDITOR'S NOTE: Iain Macleod, 51, one of the younger leaders of the Conservative party, tells what Sir Winston Churchill meant to him and to Britain. Macleod, onetime chairman of the Conservative party, served Churchill as minister of health and continued in the governments of Sir Anthony Eden, now Lord Avon,, and Harold Macmillan.

By IAIN MACLEOD

LONDON (AP) — Winston Churchill is dead. In the words there is nothing for tears, for the noblest of Englishmen has died full of years. Yet the words are solemn and final. In the true sense o fthe word the news is awful: full of awe.

We have lived in the age of Churchill; there will never be another. There can never be anyone to take his place. The trumpets sound and are stilled.

My mind is flooded with memories of this immortal man.

He became in wartime the living symbol of Britain. The cigar, the siren suit, the harsh mispronunciations ("Narrzi") we loved so much, above all the thrusting defiance of his two fingers as he gave the V sign. V for Victory — of course.

What else could there be, he to lead and we to follow? And if the people of Britain chose to read a rougher and more aggressive meaning into his message, so be it. Churchill meant that, too.

No one ever has or ever will identify himself so completely with the spirit of the British people as did Winston Churchill in 1940. Our finest hour was his. "We," so he flattered us long after the war," were the lion. I only provided the roar." He did much more than that. Blood and tears, toil and sweat were all he offered in the strangest and noblest appeal in our history.

It was said of his speeches that they were worth an army corps. One more army corps would not have saved us. Winston did. The winning of the war came later, and no one man, no one nation, could achieve it. But first the war had to be salvaged, and he led us with relish and even with confidence into battle.

He was able to summon from us that extra effort that achieved the miracle. Because of him, because of his speeches, because of what he demanded from us we were just a little more resolute, just a little tougher. And it was enough — just.

Churchill was one of the great romantics. Cavalier and seadog: historian and statesman; soldier and journalist; even a painter and a scholar in his fashion, Churchill was them all.

Tears came as naturally to him as did courage. In this, as in so many things, he was a true Elizabethan,, a knight of the spacious days of Elizabeth I who had somehow strayed into the reign of Elizabeth II.

I remember one evening in the late 1940s, before I became an M.P., staying with my wife for the weekend with Christopher and Mary Soames. We went up to Chartwell to dine and see a film..

The story of the film was set in Vienna. Boy meets girl. They part. Many years later when next they meet she, as an opera singer, is the toast of Vienna, and he the rising star of the Austrian cavalry. He does not recognize her, and the story ends in a mist of Strauss waltzes.

It would be hard to imagine a more predictable plot. Yet it cast a shadow over the next hour as Churchill, in his evening siren suit, lower lip jutting out, kept muttering, "I cannot understand how he could have forgotten her."

When an ordinary man dies his virtues are extolled and his faults brushed aside. When one writes of Winston Churchill, who became an immortal and a legend in his lifetime, the temptation to write only good of the dead is very strong. But it would be false history, and there was nothing Churchill detested more than that. He, like Cromwell, must be shown "warts and all."

He had an incredibly fertile mind which sprayed ideas like a fountain. It is easy to understand how solid but lesser men like Baldwin and Chamberlain often found him an uncomfortable colleague.

He was never content, as so many ministers are, simply to deal with his "in" tray. He was never even content simply to run his own department, and he poured out minutes full of original suggestions for running everyone else's.

Few people are generous enough to accept with good will critical comments from a colleague. Besides, he had so many ideas that some of them were bound to be absurd, some were unsound, some would be worth trying, and a few were lit by the flash of genius, the true Winston touch.

No doubt it was bad politics to stand so staunchly in the abdication crisis for the young king and against Baldwin and the Establishment.

No doubt it was bad politics and false judgment which led him to his disastrous "Gestapo" broadcast against the Socialists at the beginning of the 1945 general election campaign.

No doubt it was bad politics to imagine in 1951 that as a peacetime prime minister he could recreate his wartime team — Alexander and Ismay, Leathers and Cherwell. All of them were outstanding in the war administration; all of them failed to make the adjustment to peacetime government.

In the World War I he held and lost high office. For nearly all the second he was prime minister. In both he made mistakes of judgment and of men. But all these are as dust before the wind of his triumphs.

His faults were the faults of a man of tumult and of ardor. Harold Macmillan always one of Sir Winston's most faithful followers and admirers, paid him exactly the right tribute as he ended his short speech during the House of Commons valediction to Sir Winston in July 1964 as he came to the last days of his membership of the House of Commons.

"If I were to try to sum up his true character, I can think of no words more appropriate than those which he has himself written on the flyleaf of each volume of his history of the Second World War.

" 'In war: resolution.
In defeat: defiance.
In victory: magnanimity.
In Peace: good will.'

"The author called these words the 'moral of his work.' In fact, sir, they are the story of his life."

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

As the mother of three boys, who are Scouts, I would like to pass this tip along to other mothers.

When sewing on those badges and emblems, just stitch iron-on tape (sticky side out) to the back of the badge and press the badge on the uniform.

When sewing the tape onto the badges, I place waxed paper under the tape so it will not stick to the metal on the machine.

I also tack down the corners of the badges because they have a way of coming up after a few times in the dryer.

When you have to remove the emblems, press them, and while they're still hot, very gently pull off. The uniform is ready for your next boy, after putting on new tape. The emblems are also reusable. —Mrs. Diane Bower

Terrific! How much faster and easier this is than having to sew the badges and emblems on . . . and it is so much easier to get them in just the right spot.

After ironing on the badge, and it is "completely" cooled, turn the unifrm inside out and iron over the badge area again. The material is thinner than the emblem so the heat will go through to the iron-on tape better and make it more secure.

Thanks for sharing with us, Diane. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

My son folds a plastic rain cap and attaches it under the seat of his bike.

He says when he rides to school on his bike, he uses the cap to cover the seat when it looks like rain.

When school is out, he doesn't have to pedal home in a standing position to keep his dignity dry! —Mrs. Wm. Schuck

Letter of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

I thought you would enjoy a good laugh . . . I sure did.

Saturday, I got out my squeeze bottles of shoe polish (black, brown and oxblood) to shine my grandson's shoes. I started polishing his black shoes.

My teen age daughter said "Mother, isn't that brown shoe polish you using?"

I said "My goodness, I just grabbed a bottle of polish, thinking it was black."

She said "Well, I figured you knew what you were doing and thought it was probably a new hint from Heloise."

I had to laugh. —Lou Bridges

Dear Heloise:

Bathmats around the toilet bowl just never stay in place.

I solved this problem by sewing a piece of narrow elastic (you could use small safetypins) on each side of the mat and spanning the back of the commode.

Now the mat stays put! —Julia Pappas

Dear Heloise:

My sister gave me a set of my favorite perfumes for my birthday.

The bottles have plastic stoppers in them to keep the perfume from evaporating and this is fine . . . except that every time I wanted to use the perfume I had to pry, tug and usually break a fingernail trying to remove the stopper.

I solved this problem by taking a hat pin and sticking it throgh the middle of the plastic stopper, making a tiny hole. Leave the pin in the perfume to keep it from evaporating. Remove to use.

Now I just take off the cap and use the bottle like a roll on applicator, and it is perfect. —Mrs. R. Taylor

Dear Heloise:

Some weeks ago you had a hint about dusting Venetian blinds with soft, heavy duty gloves.

I made mittens out of an old bath towel and use them to dust my blinds. I also wear them to wash the blinds as the terry cloth holds the water and the roughness helps to clean them.

By using one mitten on each hand, it goes much faster. Great. —Katherine

U.N. Recess May Avoid Showdown Over Finances

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant reportedly favors a two-month recess of the U.N. General Assembly if necessary to avoid a Soviet-American showdown over the Russians' vote in the assembly.

Diplomatic sources said that Thant would seek a recess to gain time for further negotiations if he failed to settle the dispute now. He is awaiting replies from two big powers to the latest proposal for a settlement.

A showdown can come whenever the assembly finishes its eight-week-old general policy debate, stops its voting moratorium and starts voting to elect a steering committee and adopt an agenda. The general debate should end Tuesday.

The dispute concerns the U.N. Charter penalty of loss of vote for two years' non-payment of dues. The nub of it is whether the Russians should pay roughly $21.7 million before they are cleared of the penalty, or whether the penalty will be waived before they say how much they will pay.

Informed diplomats said the newest proposal would allow the Russians to vote after vaguely promising a "substantial contibution." At the same time it would safeguard the Americans' right to call for the penalty if the subsequent Soviet contribution fell short.

Article 19 of the U.N. Charter says any member two years behind in its total assessments "shall have no vote in the assembly."

The Soviet Union and 12 other countries are that far behind for refusing to pay peacekeeping assessments voted by the assembly. They contend the Congo and Middle East operations should have been financed by Security Council action.

The United States has insisted that Article 19 be enforced but it has agreed that the delinquents can satisfy the article by making voluntary contributions toward U.N. solvency rather than paying the disputed assessments as such.

The Soviet Union has said it will make a "substantial" voluntary contribution but will not say how substantial until the assembly suspends article 19 for this session.

The 59-nation Asian - African group has been promoting a proposal to suspend the article while the United Nations is restored to solvency through voluntary contributions. The Soviet Union has accepted the proposal, but the United States refuses to agree to suspension of the penalty.

Ike Called Him Defender of Freedom

On Sir Winston's 80th birthday, President Dwight D. Eisenhower saluted him on behalf of the American people as a "world statesman" and an "unconquerable warrior in the cause of freedom."

"We Americans have known you and of you over the years—as a roving war reporter, as adventurous soldier, as administrator and parliamentarian and, increasingly with each passing year, as statesman and defender of freedom," the letter said.

"We have seen the great Anglo-American partnership grow and flourish, with you as one of the staunch advocates. In the dark times of war, and the anxious ones of uncertain peace, this partnership has sustained us all and given us strength."

"Now, as you reach fourscore, we Americans salute you as world statesman, as unconquerable warrior in the cause of freedom, as our proven friend of many valiant years."

Globemaster Crash Kills 10

ATHENS (UPI)—A U.S. Air Force C124 globemaster, groping through a blinding snowstorm and fog, flew into a cliff Friday and exploded, apparently killing all 10 Americans aboard.

Airmen who flew over the wreckage discounted the possibilities of survivors among the eight crewmen and an Army officer courier and an Air Force man riding as passengers.

The Globemaster, attached to the 1607th Air Force Transport Wing based at Dover, Del., was en route from the American operated air base at Aviano in northern Italy to Athens when it crashed in the rrrgged mountain area near Kalavryta, 70 miles west of here.

One airman who flew over the crash site was quoted as saying: "The plane flew straight into an almost vertical cliff, about 1,000 feet from its top. The largest piece of wreckage that could be seen from the air was a small piece of the tip of the plane's vertical stabilizer."

Police at Kalavryta heard the crash and later spotted flames on the mountain side.

(A U.S. Air Force spokesman at Chateauroux, France, said the names of the Americans aboard was being compiled in Washington for release after fate was confirmed and next of kin notified.)

He Wanted to Be Kettledrum Player

A man of many attainments, Churchill once confessed that he failed to attain one ambition—to become a kettledrum player.

Back at his old school at Harrow for a songfest with the boys, the wartime Prime Minister said:

"As a youth, I aspired to play the kettledrum, but I was not musically gifted. So I gave up that ambition and transferred my aspiration to another part of the school orchestra. I wanted to be conductor." But that aim wasn't realized, either.

"Eventually, however, after a great deal of perseverance," he related, "I rose to be the conductor of quite a considerable band. It was a very large band and played very strange and formidable instruments. The roar and thunder of its music resounded throughout the world. We played all sorts of tunes and ended up the concert with 'Rule Britannia' and 'God Save the King.' "

Writing, Oratory Won Nobel Literary Prize

The Nobel Prize for Literature was awarded in 1953 to Sir Winston Churchill, the greatest phrase-maker of his time. With it went $33,840 in cash. Since 1898 he had written 27 books and earned millions of dollars by his pen.

It was as both author and orator that Churchill won the award. The Swedish Academy cited his "mastery in historical and biographical writing, and the brilliant art of oratory with which he has stepped forth as a defender of high human values."

"He once summed up his approach to wrinting in these words:

"Broadly speaking, the short words are the best, and the old words best of all."

One of the best known of his short sentences was his comment when he assumed Britain's Prime Ministry in the dark hours of 1940:

"I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat."

Dear Heloise:

Some weeks ago you had a hint about dusting Venetian blinds with soft, heavy duty gloves.

I made mittens out of an old bath towel and use them to dust my blinds. I also wear them to wash the blinds as the terry cloth holds the water and the roughness helps to clean them.

By using one mitten on each hand, it goes much faster. Great. —Katherine

U.N. Recess May Avoid Showdown Over Finances

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant reportedly favors a two-month recess of the U.N. General Assembly if necessary to avoid a Soviet-American showdown over the Russians' vote in the assembly.

Diplomatic sources said that Thant would seek a recess to gain time for further negotiations if he failed to settle the dispute now. He is awaiting replies from two big powers to the latest proposal for a settlement.

A showdown can come whenever the assembly finishes its eight-week-old general policy debate, stops its voting moratorium and starts voting to elect a steering committee and adopt an agenda. The general debate should end Tuesday.

The dispute concerns the U.N. Charter penalty of loss of vote for two years' non-payment of dues. The nub of it is whether the Russians should pay roughly $21.7 million before they are cleared of the penalty, or whether the penalty will be waived before they say how much they will pay.

Informed diplomats said the newest proposal would allow the Russians to vote after vaguely promising a "substantial contibution." At the same time it would safeguard the Americans' right to call for the penalty if the subsequent Soviet contribution fell short.

Article 19 of the U.N. Charter says any member two years behind in its total assessments "shall have no vote in the assembly."

The Soviet Union and 12 other countries are that far behind for refusing to pay peacekeeping assessments voted by the assembly. They contend the Congo and Middle East operations should have been financed by Security Council action.

The United States has insisted that Article 19 be enforced but it has agreed that the delinquents can satisfy the article by making voluntary contributions toward U.N. solvency rather than paying the disputed assessments as such.

The Soviet Union has said it will make a "substantial" voluntary contribution but will not say how substantial until the assembly suspends article 19 for this session.

The 59-nation Asian - African group has been promoting a proposal to suspend the article while the United Nations is restored to solvency through voluntary contributions. The Soviet Union has accepted the proposal, but the United States refuses to agree to suspension of the penalty.

Ike Called Him Defender of Freedom

On Sir Winston's 80th birthday, President Dwight D. Eisenhower saluted him on behalf of the American people as a "world statesman" and an "unconquerable warrior in the cause of freedom."

"We Americans have known you and of you over the years—as a roving war reporter, as adventurous soldier, as administrator and parliamentarian and, increasingly with each passing year, as statesman and defender of freedom," the letter said.

"We have seen the great Anglo-American partnership grow and flourish, with you as one of the staunch advocates. In the dark times of war, and the anxious ones of uncertain peace, this partnership has sustained us all and given us strength."

"Now, as you reach fourscore, we Americans salute you as world statesman, as unconquerable warrior in the cause of freedom, as our proven friend of many valiant years."

IN LEBANON

ROME (AP) — The once-mighty cedars of Lebanon may grow again. The Food and Agriculture Organization says Lebanon is in the second year of large scale pine and cedar plantings aimed at reforestation.

Not Just A Hearing Aid!
Russian Refugee's Invention of New In-the-Ear Model Eliminates Battery Cost
The first hearing aid to embody many of the new space age techniques has been announced by Acousticon.
This is an aid so small that it not only fits all inside the ear but there are no batteries to change! A permanent battery good for a year . . . or even two . . . is embedded in the aid. A separate charger is also furnished.

Globemaster Crash Kills 10

ATHENS (UPI)—A U.S. Air Force C124 globemaster, groping through a blinding snowstorm and fog, flew into a cliff Friday and exploded, apparently killing all 10 Americans aboard.

Airmen who flew over the wreckage discounted the possibilities of survivors among the eight crewmen and an Army officer courier and an Air Force man riding as passengers.

The Globemaster, attached to the 1607th Air Force Transport Wing based at Dover, Del., was en route from the American operated air base at Aviano in northern Italy to Athens when it crashed in the rrrgged mountain area near Kalavryta, 70 miles west of here.

One airman who flew over the crash site was quoted as saying: "The plane flew straight into an almost vertical cliff, about 1,000 feet from its top. The largest piece of wreckage that could be seen from the air was a small piece of the tip of the plane's vertical stabilizer."

Police at Kalavryta heard the crash and later spotted flames on the mountain side.

(A U.S. Air Force spokesman at Chateauroux, France, said the names of the Americans aboard was being compiled in Washington for release after fate was confirmed and next of kin notified.)

He Wanted to Be Kettledrum Player

A man of many attainments, Churchill once confessed that he failed to attain one ambition—to become a kettledrum player.

Back at his old school at Harrow for a songfest with the boys, the wartime Prime Minister said:

"As a youth, I aspired to play the kettledrum, but I was not musically gifted. So I gave up that ambition and transferred my aspiration to another part of the school orchestra. I wanted to be conductor." But that aim wasn't realized, either.

"Eventually, however, after a great deal of perseverance," he related, "I rose to be the conductor of quite a considerable band. It was a very large band and played very strange and formidable instruments. The roar and thunder of its music resounded throughout the world. We played all sorts of tunes and ended up the concert with 'Rule Britannia' and 'God Save the King.'"

Writing, Oratory Won Nobel Literary Prize

The Nobel Prize for Literature was awarded in 1953 to Sir Winston Churchill, the greatest phrase-maker of his time. With it went $33,840 in cash. Since 1898 he had written 27 books and earned millions of dollars by his pen.

It was as both author and orator that Churchill won the award. The Swedish Academy cited his "mastery in historical and biographical writing, and the brilliant art of oratory with which he has stepped forth as a defender of high human values."

"He once summed up his approach to wrinting in these words:

"Broadly speaking, the short words are the best, and the old words best of all."

One of the best known of his short sentences was his comment when he assumed Britain's Prime Ministry in the dark hours of 1940:

"I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat."

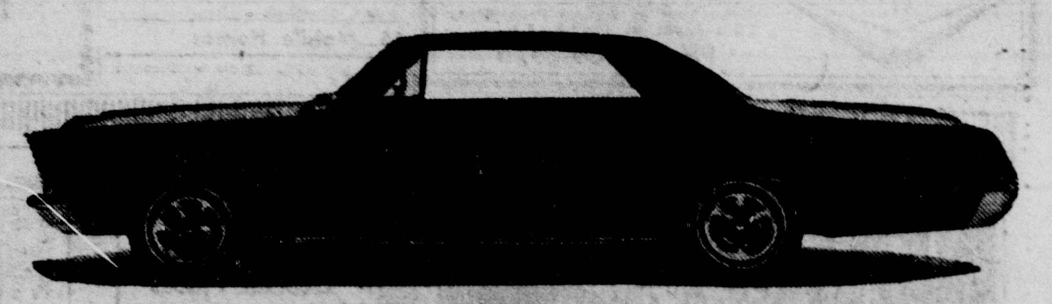
What makes our tiger so happy?

Maybe it's because he just won Motor Trend Magazine's Car of the Year award. (For the third time.)

Or maybe it's because he's third in sales for the fourth straight year.

Or maybe it's because he's proud of the way he looks.



Why don't you stop by your Pontiac dealers and ask him.
